GENERAL REVIVAL OF WAR IN ALL EUROPE IS NOT IMPROBABLE

Poland the Only Bulwark Between Law and Order and Bolshevism Declares General Bliss.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 15.—A general revival of war in Europe if Poland is unable to withstand the Russian Bolshevik armies, is not improbable. General Bliss, who was a member of the American peace delegation, told the House "Ways and Means Committee" today.

Poland Europe's Hope.

"Poland is the only bulwark against Bolshevism," said General Bliss, who appeared before the committee to discuss the proposed loan of $150,000,000 for food relief in Europe.

Poles Outnumbered.

Military experts are of the "growing opinion" that the Moscow Government will turn toward Poland, General Bliss went on to say, adding that the Russians outnumbered the Poles, were well trained well equipped and well led, while the Poles were "poorly equipped as to everything."

The Allied Governments, General Bliss continued, should be called upon by the United States to give some of their surplus military supplies to the Poles of this country establishes $150,000,000 of credits for European countries to buy food here.

VICTIM OF SLEEPING SICKNESS IN TORONTO

MRS. SLINGERLAND DIES IN SPITE OF UNREMITTING MEDICAL ATTENTION

Toronto, Jan. 15.— The death of Mrs. Loretta Slingerland, 1595A Dundas street, west, on Saturday from sleeping sickness has been officially reported to the civic health authorities, together with particulars of the case. Mrs. Slingerland was thirty-four years of age and the mother of four children. She complained of ill health on Christmas Day, which was followed by a fainting spell. She recovered from her indisposition, but was later stricken with blindness and other symptoms of the malady. Although five wellknown medical practitioners were in consultation and two trained nurses in attendance, Mrs. Slingerlands illness rapidly developed.

DR. E. V. FREDRICK AT THE BOARD OF TRADE

Dr. Ernest V. Frederick will make the opening address to the Board of Trade in its council room over the Dominion Bank building, this evening at 8 o'clock.

Tickets for the course of seven addresses are in the hands of members only, as the attendance is necessarily limited to them and their personal guests.

The topic of the address tonight is "Oriental Traffics and Discoveries," and will bear upon trade and industrial relations between the British dependencies. Dr. Frederick will base his remarks upon his observation and study during his service as a special medical officer, when he travelled some 80,000 miles over the British East.

On Thursday evening of next week the speakers will be George A. Gillespie and William H. Pretty, C.E., on Industrial Development and Economics.

Dr. Angus W. McPherson, Peterborough's health officer, has accepted the Board's invitation and will prepare a comprehensive paper for the evening of February 5 on the Good Health of the City.

RUSHING LIQUOR FROM WAREHOUSES TO PRIVATE RESIDENCES IN NEW YORK

Saturday is the Last Day That Stock Can be Moved in the United States.

New York, Jan. 15.—With the final moving day for liquor fixed as January 17, except in instances which require special permits, there is in progress a great hegira of the precious beverages owned by those fortunate enough to have purchased liquor before July 1 of last year. The moving consists at present of wet goods in small and large quantities from safety deposit vaults and storage warehouses to the domiciles of the lucky individuals aforementioned.

All the local warehouses whose customers had put stocks of cheer in storage notified their patrons last month that they must have the stuff carted to their homes or bonded warehouses by the first of the year. Some of the liquor was moved but large and small stocks still remained in many of the warehouses yesterday. Some of the stocks that have not been moved, it was learned yesterday, are those belonging to persons who are out of the city and others are of such large proportions that special storing facilities in homes have not been completed. None of the big storage warehouse companies is of the opinion that any great quantity of liquor will be in their custody after next Saturday.

None of the hotels have on hand any large quantity of liquor, so far as can be learned. In many instances the liquors have been stored in government warehouses for long periods.

Liquor Shipped to Cuba.

According to Mr. Roper, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, hotels which have been holding liquor in contemplation of the lifting of the "dry" ban may have applications for a permit to sell it for non-beverage purposes, putting up a bond that it will be sold only for such purposes. It was said by hotel men yesterday that they would lose money on such sales. Some hotels, it was learned, have been busily engaged shipping surplus stocks to Cuba and South America.

At the Hotel Astor it was said yesterday that space had been provided for private lockers belonging to persons who make their home in the hotel, which is permitted under the law. Hotels in the Bowman group—the Biltmore and others—have made no such arrangement, it was said, because their liquor stocks have been disposed of long ago. At the Ritz-Carlton the cellars have been empty for months, it was said.

A possibility that liquor in storage might never be reported was pointed out by one warehouse owner yesterday. He said that despite all precautions, and without any duplicity on the part of customers, liquor stored long ago, and which had been forgotten by the owner, might be in the warehouses after January 17.

Worth Hundreds of Thousands.

No estimate could be obtained as to the value of liquors removed from safety deposit vaults and warehouses since early in December and that are still in their custody, but it may be safely assumed that it runs into hundreds of thousands, according to present day values. Personal stocks that aggregate 200 cases, containing twelve quarts to the case and worth in the neighborhood of $20,000, were reported by some storage companies. The average stock of customers at one large warehouse was placed at five cases.

For the man with a large stock of liquor and a small home, the law presents difficulties. For his benefit, the Excise Bureau has accorded him the same privilege as hotels—the opportunity to sell his liquor for non-beverage purposes before January 27.

LEADERS HIDE BEHIND MACHINE GUNS WHILE MASSES DRIVEN FORTH TO DEATH

Strong Indignation Expressed at Unscrupulousness of German Independents in Late Raids—Naske Prohibits Sale of Red Flags—Level Minded Citizens in Berlin Line up Behind Their Government.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 15—Berlin was completely quiet Wednesday, according to a wireless despatch from the German capital.

Large factories were working normally and railway and tram services were not interrupted.

Strong indignation is expressed in every branch of industry at the unscrupulousness of independents, the despatch adds, because leaders hide behind machine guns while the masses were driven forward to face the guns of soldiers.

Many Killed and Wounded.

Berlin, Jan. 5.—It is semi-officially announced, and seems to be finally established, that 42 persons were killed and 105 wounded in the Reichstag fighting. The police were finally compelled to throw bombs among the rioters, causing a panic in which many were struck by bullets, and numbers, including many women, were trampled under foot.

Martial law has been declared throughout Germany, with the exception of Bavaria, Saxony, Wuerttemburg and Baden, according to Berlin advices.

Prohibits Red Flags.

Minister of Defence Noske has prohibited the sale of Die Freiheit and Red Flag throughout he territory where a state of siege has been proclaimed. Street parades, meetings and demonstrations of all kinds have been prohibited.

The Social Democratic party has issued an appeal to its members not to allow themselves to be provoked by independent and communist "wire-pullers, who are directly responsible for the bloodshed and want to continue playing an unscrupulous game with human lives."

The appeal asks whether the workers will permit national representation to be placed under terrorism, and tells them that the German nation can be saved from complete destruction only by work.

Government Is Upheld.

Level-minded citizens of Berlin call for government measures to prevent further riots, especially those dreaded in connection with the celebration on Thursday of the anniversary of the death of Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg.

The Vorwaerts editorially declares that according to all reports the police showed the utmost patience in the rioting Tuesday, and did not fire until ten policemen had been severely wounded. It points out that Dr. Heine, Prussian minister of the interior, and Chief of Police Ernst personally controlled the police, and adds that neither the government nor its organs were responsible for the bloodshed.

"The aim of the criminal elements, however," it says, "was achieved, and the workers were increasingly stirred by the bloodshed. The responsibility will be on the heads of those who senselessly led innocent people into danger of destruction."

All the royalist papers also support the government and welcome the proclamation of martial law. The conservative papers regret that the measure was not applied sooner by way of precaution, and for this reason shift the responsibility for the bloodshed upon the government.

GOVERNMENT DELAYS OVER HOUSING PLAN

DRURY CABINET WILL NOT ADVANCE MONEY UNTIL LEGISLATURE MEETS

Toronto, Jan. 15.—Among the many important questions that the Drury Government intends leaving to the Legislature to decide, instead of dealing with them in Cabinet Council, is the future of the housing scheme which was passed at the last session, and of which advantage was taken by a large number of municipalities. The late Government, having introduced the measure, naturally gave every assistance in carrying it out, advancing the money as required. Since the Drury Government has taken office, it has become known, it has advanced no money whatever for this purpose.

Spring is only a few months off, and municipalities are anxious to get their plans in shape now, so as to be prepared to start operations as soon as the weather permits. It is said that several of them have made enquiries as to whether or not they are to get the appropriations for which they have asked, and that they have been able to get any satisfaction. Probably most of the cities and towns are being delayed in the purchasing of land. Some, it is said, have even gone so far as to get options on large blocks of land, and they cannot close the secure from the Government the money which was promised under the act.

One of the difficulties which the Government doubtless has to face is to reconcile the expenditure of several millions of dollars in loans on housing with its platform of economy. Although the money will ultimately come back to the Province, it, in the meantime, increases the financial burden which the Province has to show in its budget.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MRS. McCRAE

Mother of Two Famous Sons Passes Away at Her Home.

Guelph, Jan. 15.—The very sudden death here yesterday of Mrs. McCrae, wife of Lieut.-Col. David McCrae, and mother of Lieut.-Col. (Dr.) John McCrae, author of the famous war poem, "In Flanders Fields," has brought sorrow into a large community in which she was well and widely known through her activities in those social services with which women have for years been intimately identified.

ALL PROVINCES MAY VOTE ON SAME DAY

THIS PLAN IS FAVORED BY DOMINION COMMITTEE ON LIQUOR LEGISLATION

Montreal, Jan. 15.—The Dominion Committee on Liquor Legislation, which is a federation of twelve temperance organizations representing all the Provinces of Canada and the Yukon, met in the Windsor Hotel yesterday to consider the present status of the liquor legislation in Canada. Among the matters of policy dealt with, the following were recommended:

That the committee express its appreciation of the liquor legislation passed by the Dominion Parliament, providing for a vote in each Province on the importation of liquor for beverage purposes.

That this committee recommend that each Province be encouraged to secure a vote on the question of prohibiting the importation of liquor for beverage uses.

That the idea of having the votes taken on the same date in all the Provinces, insofar as this may be feasible, be approved.

That the taking of the vote be upon lists which include women citizens on the same terms as men.

That this committee advocates the establishment in each Province of an importing and distributing depot or warehouse, through which all liquor to be used in such Provinces for the permitted purposes must pass.

That this committee approves of a Federal Department of Liquor Control, which would control all importation into Canada, the manufacture of liquor, and the shipment of all liquor across Provincial boundaries for sacramental, medicinal, mechanical and scientific purposes.

RED VICTORIES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 15.—Reports of the capture of Admiral Kolchak, head of the All-Russian government in Siberia, have been confirmed, it is declared in a Moscow wireless despatch today.

London, Jan. 15.—The Bolsheviki have captured Rostov-on-Don, according to a Moscow wireless despatch. Ten thousand prisoners, 32 guns, nine tanks, and an enormous amount of baggage were taken, the statement says.

THE CANADIAN PRESS TO EXTEND SERVICE

MORE IMPROVEMENTS OUTLINED AT MEETING OF DAILY SECTION IN TORONTO

The Canadian Press Association has recently been organized, and a marked improvement in the service has already been noted, with further progress assured. John R. Bone, of the Toronto Star, is president; J. B. F. Livesay, acting manager; John W. Tibbs, news manager and H. H. Gordon, editor. Mr. Gordon, who was recently appointed, is largely responsible for the improvement in the service.

A meeting of the daily section of the association was held at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, yesterday when about twenty Ontario newspaper proprietors and editors were in attendance. The service is still further to be improved and extended. The readers of the daily papers can rest assured that they are to be given more information than ever. Every corner of the field is to be represented, and more prominence will be given to the woman's movement, the Labor situation, and the U.F.O. There will be more attention paid to French-Canadian affairs, but it will be Quebec news, not propaganda, that will be given prominence.

GOVERNMENT WILL REPLY TO STATEMENT

HAS NO INTENTION OF IGNORING UTTERANCES OF LIEUT. GOVERNOR

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 15.—It was stated today that the Government has no intention of ignoring the recent utterances of Lieut.-Governor Lionel Clarke, in spite of the interpretation placed upon their silence by a great section of the public. The Government, it was explained, is remaining silent on the subject only because it is a very delicate situation, and they have no desire to further complicate the relations of the Governor.

Are Unconstitutional.

The Lieut.-Governor's statements were unconstitutional beyond doubt, was the statement of one member of the Cabinet today. "But the Government is anxious that nothing should be put in the way of him getting back into the position where he should be. For that reason nothing has been heard from Premier Drury or his colleagues. If, however, no public statement is forthcoming at an early date, from the Governor himself, the Government is prepared to issue one as to their attitude on the situation."

MAYOR ATTACKED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Cork, Ireland, Jan. 15. — W. F. O'Connor, Lord Mayor of Cork, was attacked by a party of men while returning last night from a meeting of demobilized soldiers.

The mayor was knocked down and assaulted.

The attack is attributed to his opposition to the election policy of the Sinn Fein organization.

DR. ROBERTSON BRINGS INSPIRING MESSAGE TO PEOPLE OF CANADA

After Investigation of Food Situation in Europe Urges the Necessity for Greater Production in Canada in Order to Help Relieve the Unfortunate.

Dr. J. W. Robertson of the Conservation Commission at Ottawa, who is making a lecture tour of the Province, missed at Toronto today the train that was to bring him to Peterborough where he was expected to address a meeting of the Canadian Club at 12.15. The C.P.R., however, comes to his rescue and landed him in Peterborough in time to fill his engagement, only forty-five minutes behind the scheduled hour.

President G. O. Cameron of the Canadian Club presided at the luncheon at the Empress Hotel and seated with him at the speakers' table, besides Dr. Robertson, were J. H. Burnham, M.P., Rev. F. E. Malott and R. B. Rogers. The address of Dr. Robertson was one of the most inspiring messages ever heard in Peterborough. He took for his subject the necessity for greater production in order to feed the inhabitants of the war-wasted countries in Europe. Dr. Robertson is an authority on this subject as he represented the Canadian Government overseas on just such a mission. He did not argue for help for Europe by appealing to the commercial spirit, but took high ground and urged it upon this country as one of the Christian duties.

Dr. Robertson said that great things were expected of Canada in this connection because of what the Canadian people have already accomplished. There was no better fighting force on the side of the Allies than the men led by General Currie. This was not because they were any braver than the troops from other countries, or because their leaders were superior to the officers on the side of the Allies, but the real reason was that the four divisions had fought together and so learned to co-operate.

When Europe's need for food, was the sorest forty per cent. of the wheat supplied came from Canada. The Canadian Red Cross not only made hospital supplies sufficient for the soldiers from this country but there were 2,000 hospitals in France outside of Canada furnished from the same source.

Everything possible has been done to encourage production. The price of wheat has been kept up so that England loses 75 cents on every bushel that she buys. The Canadian dairyman found it possible to sell his cheese at forty cents a pound and then buy it back at retail for his own private use at 14 cents a pound less than he got for it.

The Government on the one hand is holding prices up to encourage production and keep some thousands from starvation, and on the other is holding them down to save people from the same fate.

The extra financial burden imposed by the war amounts to $200 per family, or as much as the average savings of each family before the war broke out.

The opportunity of the day is to develope. Every man in Canada may be a leader. With a touching reference to the fact that a man will do almost anything for his mother, Dr. Robertson eloquently appealed to the people of the Dominion to exert themselves now on behalf of the Motherland, to whom they owe so much.

At the conclusion of the address President Cameron, on behalf of the Club, thanked Dr. Robertson for the intellectual treat which he had furnished. The doctor addressed a meeting of the Women's Canadian Club at three o'clock this afternoon.

Those who attended the luncheon today were: J. J. Duffus, P. Trebilcock, A. L. Killaly, W. H. Bradburn, J. H. Burnham, R. B. Rogers, Rev. F. E. Malott, G. O. Cameron, Dr. Moir, Dr. Harvey, Dr. Middleton, F. F. Hodgens, C. H. Rogers, G. A. Campbell, C. Coleman, F. D. Kerr, E. A. Peck, J. Wearing, A. McGregor, B. D. Hall, Dr. Frederick, H. Gifford, Capt. Vipond, Capt. Raymond Mr. Robertson, T. E. Bradburn, D. Walker, G. J. Sherry, Dr. Yelland, R. L. Dobbin, L. A. Fraser, T. Barrie, J. E. Smith, R. R. Hall, A. Mowatt, R. Hartstone, R. Lees, A. DR. J. W. McCULLOUGH REPORTS AN INCREASE IN PROVINCE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 15.—Smallpox is increasing throughout the province, according to a report of Dr. J. W. McCullough, Provincial Health Officer, this morning.

Comparing 1433 new cases reported in December with reports of 597 received during the first ten days of January, he sees cause for anxiety. In December, there were two deaths from smallpox, so far in January there have been five, and the disease is reported to be breaking out in 20 new counties.

The amount to be expended on main roads within the next five years is fifteen million, said Mr. Biggs, six millions of which will come from the Dominion, six million from the Province, and three millions from municipalities. In addition to that amount forty-five million will be expended by municipalities, which will be aided in various ways by the Drury Government.

"THY WILL BE DONE."

THE PIETISTS who profess scriptural warrant for the death penalty find themselves under the necessity of delving into the Mosaic law for their authority, the law that demanded an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, a life for a life. That law, according to modern ideas, has been superseded by the teachings of a Divine Legislator, Who made a special mission to save the people from their sins and Who taught humanity a creed of mercy and forbearance.

Only a few years ago there was a set procedure at all hangings. When the condemned man was shackled, the black cap pulled over his head, and the noose adjusted, the attending clergyman began to recite the Lord's Prayer. When he uttered the words "Thy will be done" the trap was sprung.

The human race is acquiring modesty if not wisdom. No mere mortal any longer officially presumes that in such affairs as these he is working the will of Omnipotence.

But religious ceremony is not lacking. "Father, into Thy hands we commit their spirits" was the death signal at the double execution yesterday, uttered by the faithful pastor who never wearied in his efforts to bring spiritual comfort to the condemned men, walking with them to the very gates of death. By what article of modern Christianity is it assumed the right of society to send two naked souls, shrived by religious rite though they may be, into the presence of the Creator?

"I am the resurrection and the life" (saith the Lord). Yes, truly. The resurrection that calls man from the tomb in which he lies dead in trespass and sin, strips from him the cerements that bind him, and give him another chance. Life, indeed, life that is spared, not ruthlessly taken by the authority of man-made laws.

A HANGMAN APPRECIATED.

OUR GEORGE STREET contemporary appears to have been most faverably impressed, after its recent apparently close personal association with Ellis, the hangman, who officiated here yesterday, regarding him as fine a gentleman as ever scuttled a ship, robbed a hen roost, stole helpless sheep, cut a throat, or broke a human neck for wages. In that scrap-book, which it seems this modern Denis confided to his new pal he keeps, he will beyond question paste the Examiner's tribute to his worth, and prize it for the rest of his days as the finest appreciation he has ever received in the line of duty.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS, which came into being by the formal ratification of the Treaty of Peace between Germany and Great Britain, France and the other Allied Powers, will be christened on Friday at Paris. The first meeting of the Council will be presided over and called to order by Leon Bourgeois, representing France. Great Britain will be represented by Earl Curzon, the British Foreign Secretarmy. Twelve other nations have been invited to present representatives. President Wilson officially called the meeting, but the Unted States will have no representative.

According to the New York Herald, the birth of this League of Nations—or a league of some of the nations—is a matter of no little historical importance. There have been many similar leagues ostensibly to "preserve international and permanent peace," but all have failed. History alone will settle the fate of this new league.

After months of discussion at Versailles, President Wilson, having succeceded in subordinating everything else to the Covenant of the League of Nations, triumphantly presented to the Council the sacred document on February 14, 1919. Most of the participants in the Versailles conference preferred the old order until the "new system had demonstrated its capacity." President Wilson swept aside this opinion after creating the impression that he reflected the thought of the maojrity of the American people. The Allies took President Wilson at his word.

Slowly but surely rose the American tide of opposition to the covenant. President Wilson must have realised it, yet when he landed in Boston on February 24 he said: "I have no doubt of the verdict. The people are in the saddle and they are going to see to it that if their present governments do not do their will some other governments will." President Wilson was aware of the growing opposition when he held the famous White House conference on February 26 and drew the fire of senators on the difference between a moral and a legal obligation. He knew of the opposition when thirty-seven senators signed a "round robin" pledging themselves not to agree to the covenant offered.

It is not the fault of the American Senate or people if the peoples of Europe have been deceived as to America's real oositipn. The covenant before the Senate does not offer sufficient inducement to America to surrender sovereignty or independence. If the United States enters the mystic circle of European and Asiatic nations it will be with adequate safeguards and protections to keep America aloof from foreign entanglements.

The newborn League of Nations may not need America after all. The time will never come when the United States cannot gain admittance if deemed advisable. The fact that the league will be launched without America demonstrates that there is no immediate need for the presence of the United States.

THE PATRONAGE SYSTEM.

(Farmers' Sun.)

ONE OF THE BIGGEST problems confronting the Drury Government has to do with the patronage question. Patronage has been strongly condemned by the farmers, and rightly so. It presupposes that favoritism and pull shall be substituted for merit and efficiency.

In the past, patronage has been the curse of our party system. Governments were elected by their friends, and immediately were assailed by those friends, who clamored for a "place in the sun." Within limits there is no reason why a government should not appoint to office a man or woman friendly to the government, if that individual possesses equal qualifications with one who is not a friend of the government. To appoint an individual because he or she has a pull is wrong. On the other hand, there is a danger of carrying the altruistic "no patronage" cry to such an extreme that the only way a man can get a position from the government is to become an enemy of that government.

In all fairness to them and to the people who elected them to power, the Drury Government or any other government must give at least equal consideration to the claims of their friends and supporters. In the House they will look to the U. F. O. and Labor members for the support necessary to "carry on." It would be suicidal to place a greater reliance and trust in the Opposition than in the members of one's own party. In private life we place our greatest trust in the members of our own household and our friends, and to a large extent the same applies to politics.

There are evils in the patronage system which we are satisfied must be abolished, and that the Drury Government will abolish those abuses. In the firts place, Government positions should not be made so remunerative and attractive that there will be a wild scramble to obtain these posts. The majority of these should be placed on a competitive basis and have merit and efficiency in the candidate as the determining factors in making the appointment. There may be exceptional cases where a man has served his country faithfully and long, where a more or less honorary position can be given him, but in the main, government positions placed on a competitive basis and made less attractive in a monetary sense would do away with many of the evils of the patronage system.

(Detroit Free Press.)

In taking a stand that means civil war within the Democratic organization, Mr. Bryan may have mixed motives. The prospect of revenge on Mr. Wilson may be sweet to him. But W. J. He may have little hope of victory at the polls next autumn, but he may hope by thorough housecleaning to preserve Democracy with a big "D" from total disintegration.

REFORMERS WAR ON JAZZ

American old-fashioned, keep-your-distance dances, are to displace the modern jazz steps, if the nation-wide reform movement undertaken by the American National Association of Masters of Dancing proves successful.

The dancing masters, it is announced here, count on the support of mothers, fathers, daughters, sons, dance hall proprietors, dancing teachers and hostesses—and if necessary, the police department—to exterminate the "half Nelson," "body hold," "shimmy lock" and other imported ballroom grips, which are practiced by some dancers.

Cheap and vulgar music is also to come under the ban and, according to a circular just issued by the association, those in charge of community or public dances are urged to show their opposition to undesirable dances by distributing "You will please leave the hall" cards to those who persist in offending.

The women, it is charged, are often as much to blame as their partners and, in some cases, dance hall proprietors are advised to pick out 10 or a dozen objectionable couples and, if a warning is disregarded, to oust them at once.

"You will soon see," the circular reads, "that you have raised the standard of your establishment and that the loss will be more than made up by double the number of persons who have respect for you and your dances.

"Dance music should be bright and cheerful, properly accented and the phrases well divided," the circular adds. "Cheap, vulgar music of the extreme jazz type invites cheap, vulgar meaningless dancing. It is useless to expect refined dancing when the music lacks all refinement for, after all, what is dancing but an interpretation of music?"

The association has adopted the following tempos, it being impossible, the masters say, to regulate fast dancing:

Waltz	48 measures to minute
Two-step	54 measures to minute
One-step	66 measures to minute
Fox trot	40 measures to minute

"Dancers should assume a light, graceful position," say the masters. "There should be no jerky half-steps, for these cause undesirable variations. Partners should not dance with cheeks close or touching, nor should the clasp be tight. 'Neck holds' are positively unpardonable. The gentleman's arm should encircle his partner's waist, his hand resting lightly just above the waist line. The lady's left arm should not encircle her partner's shoulders or neck.

"Steps or movements that can not be controlled should not be taught by dancing teachers. Short side steps, first right, then left, when done continuously, are not conducive to refined dancing and should not be permitted. 'Shimmy dancing,' a shaking or jerking of the upper part of the body while taking short steps or standing still, should not be tolerated.

"The proper dancing step should be the same as a natural walking one, except in exhibition dancing, which properly belongs to the stage, not the ballroom. Exceptionally long or short steps are not in good form.

"Dancing should be from the waist down, not from the waist up. Copying of the extremes used on the modern stage is in bad taste. Remember that the majority of dancers desire to dance according to the best accepted standards, that is, without the slightest trace of offense to dignity or decorum."

OUR NATIONAL ECONOMIC PROBLEM

"So much for the manner in which the transportation machinery of the country is carrying out its obligations to the Canadian producer. Other aspects of the transportation problem are less satisfactory. There are many people who look upon Canadian railways as custodians of magic fortunes which cannot be exhausted. That bookkeeping should be as simple and inexorable in its tale of losses and vanished profits to a railway as it may be to a corner grocer, is to these people unthinkable. It apparently does not occur to them that to no public is it more important than to the Canadian public that the good reputation of its railway securities in the world of thrift and investment should be carefully guarded. To those, however, who understand these things clearly and who view the matter from the standpoint of broad public interest, it is at once apparent that the Canadian public pays a very low rate for the quality of service rendered, and that a time is rapidly approaching when, if Canadian railway securities are not to be made less desirable to investors than almost any other kind of industrial security, railway rates will either have to go up, or railway operating costs go down. Such persons recognize that it is not because the situation of the railways is an easy one that certain companies have been able to show net earnings— very low net earnings compared to the actual cash invested in the industry—but because in the past the shareholders of such companies have been, as they are today, courageous persons willing to supply the means for constructive enterprises in which no one but themselves had faith, and because, too, their officers have been skilled, resourceful and loyal business men, assisted by staffs filled with the spirit of pride and devotion to their work. This, indeed, is the thing which has made it possible for Canada's railroads to function successfully during the war without making anything like the demands that foreign roads—less efficient in serving their community, yet earning the same rates and paying the same wages—have made up their public exchequers. I do not believe that this strain upon the railways and this tendency to weaken the general reputation of Canadian Railway securities should continue. The servant, after all, is worthy of his hire, and railway capital is not less worthy a servant than other forms of capital whose earnings have not been so consistently depressed.

"The net earnings during the war years, of those companies which showed net earnings would have been much lower had the Canadian railroads been making expenditures for maintenance which circumstances would have justified, but which conditions prevented during that period. These arrears have now to be made up. During 1919 the Canadian Pacific laid 70,000 tons of steel rail. In place of, say, 2,000,000 ties worth 44c in 1914, the Canadian Pacific laid 4,434,000 ties at 85c per tie. The sensational advance in the rate of railway wages is well known. Further advance may be necesary within the very near future, as indicated by disclussions in the United States. The price of coal for locomotives was $3.09 in 1913. Now it is $4.77. The cost of hauling an average train (freight or passenger) one mile has risen from $1,604 in 1913, to $2,494 in 1918. It is higher today. The operating expenses of one mile of line in 1915 were $4,152; in 1918, $7,046, and today they are even greater. On the other hand, railway rates, taking all classes of revenue together, have advanced scarcely 25 per cent. I venture to say no other industry in the Dominion can show such moderation."

WIT AND WISDOM

"You advertise this as the best hotel in town," said the man who had stayed overnight.

"It certainly is," replied the clerk.

"Well, that may be a good boost for the hotel, but it's a terrible knock for the town."

"Well, come down to the shop tomorrow morning, and I will put you to work."

"To-morrow? I couldn't possibly come until the day after."

"Why?"

"Why, to-morrow I must take part in the great Demonstration of Protest of the Unemployed."

"I am not surprised to hear she is an advanced spiritualist. She is a woman who always goes to an extreme."

"Is she? I thought she went to a medium?"

"Don't you want a Presidential boom?"

"I'm not particular," said Senator Sorghum.

"At this stage of proceedings a Presidential boom comes about as near being a tangible asset as a happy New Year greeting."

Mainly About People

New Brunswick has a business man as Premier, the Hon. Walter E. Foster, who sits in the Legislature for Victoria County. In April next it will be three years since he became chief adviser of the Crown in provincial matters.

Mr. Foster is a native of St. Martins, N.B., where he was born on April 9, 1874. He was educated in St. John, and since leaving school his life has been spent there, for the most part in the wholesale drygoods business, with a firm of which he now is president and managing director. He is also president of a local railway company, is interested in a hydro-electric power company, and in a dry dock company. He has been President of the St. John Board of Trade, and retired from the New Brunswick Regiment, Canadian Artillery, with the rank of Captain.

Twice he was Chairman of the Conciliation Board granted by the Federal Department of Labor, to settle the differences that had arisen between the Longshoremen's Association and the Shipping Companies at the Port of St. John.

In 1916 Mr. Foster was chosen leader of the Provincial Liberal Party, and at the general elections held on February 24, 1917, he led the party to victory. On April 4, following the elections, he took office as Premier.

BOOT & SHOE OUTPUT REACHING NORMAL

PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA DEMAND GOOD QUALITY

Boston, Jan. 14.—Shoe factories in the United States and Canada are producing more nearly a normal output than at any time during the last three years, Laird H. Simons of Philadelphia said in an address today before the National Shoe Retailers' Association.

The two countries, he added, are probably the only places in the world adequately supplied with leather shoes.

Mr. Simons said that the demand was centring unduly on the best grades of leather, regardless of the price. The public is not interested, he added, in buying shoes made from the medium and lower grades of leather, such as they bought in 1914 and before.

(By George B. Catlin.)

Upheavals are common enough in Mexico, but a new one is now in progress—entirely removed from the influence of Carranza or Villa. Mount Orizaba, the greatest volcanic peak in North America, towering with its vast, snow-mantled dome, 18,200 feet above the sea, is on the rampage. Its first manifestatin was a series of violent earthquakes in the State of Vera Cruz, which caused great damage to several towns and killed inhabitants.

There are reports of an outbreak of lava flow in the vicinity of the city of Cordoba, a beautiful town of about 10,000 population, 66 miles west of Vera Cruz and about 18 Omiles by rail east of the city of Orizaba. Both Cordoba and the city of Orizaba lie at the foot of the great volcano and are in a position inviting annihilation in case of a violent eruption. Mt. Orizaba has been on good behaviour since the middle of the Eighteenth Century and has been regarded as virtually extinct.

In Rich Region's Centre.

Earlier eruptions occurred in 1545 and 1566, but these former disturbances did not discourage settlement. Cordoba is the centre of a rich agricultural district and the city of Orizaba is a busy industrial town of nearly 50,000 population. It contains a large cotton mill and the great Santa Gertrudis jute mills, owned by English capital. Water power developed by the melting snow of the mountain summit caused the development of these and other industries. There are stone and marble quarries near the city. Cordoba is the shipping point for a variety of tropical fruits grown in the vicinity and there are extensive sugar cane fields and sugar mills.

There is no possibility of forsecasting the outcome of a volcano eruption when a vast mountain of the bulk of Mt. Orizaba opens up to relieve the internal pressure. A century or more of quiescence tends to thicken the crust of solid matter and to stop the natural vents.

Name is Ancient

Orizaba was named Citlatepetl by the ancient Mexicans. The name was derived from two words, Citlalin, meaning a star, and tepetl, meaning a mountain. The ancient name, Star Mountain, is of disputed origin.

One tradition is that the volcano for many years maintained an outburst of flame from its summit which, viewed from great distances, resembled a star. Another tradition has it that the ancient Aztec priesthood maintained a temple and shrine far up on the mountain in which the sacred fire always was kept burning on an altar and this, viewed from the valley far below, resembled a star.

A passenger on a steamer approaching Vera Cruz from Progreso, Yucatan, has a view or Mt. Orizaba's snowy dome for several hours before any other land is visible in that direction.

Its base is about 25 miles in diameter east and west and more than 50 miles north and south. This vast bulk of earth crust piled 18,000 feet high so near the sea can resist an enormous internal pressure, but the consequence may be disastrous to the surrounding country.

This recalls the violent eruption of Mount Pelee, Martinique, in 1902. At the beginning of that year Pelee stood, a huge cone, 5,000 feet high, with a crater half a mile in diameter and 1,600 feet deep. It had been in eruotion in 1762 and a slight eruption had occurred in 1851. In the course of time a small lake formed in the crater and the volcano appeared extinct. About 1900 the lake began to diappear from the crater and in 1902 it had become quite dry. On April 25, 1902 the seaward side of the vents of the volcanic gases , which had formerly been free. In a few days rumbling sounds began and slight earth tremors were felt. On May 5 the side of the cratér toward the City of St. Pierre opened and an avalanche of boiling black mud poured out in such volume that a great sugar plantation and mill on the slope below soon was buried. More than 30 persons were caught and buried alive in it.

Giant Fissure Made.

This outbreak, instead of relieving the pressure, seemed to encourage a rush of the internal fire and incandescent gases toward the vent. On the morning of May 8 there was a terrific explosion and a great vent was torn in that side of the mountain.

At first this explosion developed only superheated steam, but a second sent a vast sheet of flame and a cloud of incandescent particles of molten rock down on St. Pierre. More than 30,000 persons were killed. The only one left alive was a Negro in jail. Several ships were anchored in the harbor and all, excepting the Roddam, were destroyed. Every man on the deckk of the Roddam was killed by the flame-blast. Those who were below rushed on deck let go the cable and put to sea, where they extinguished the blazing deck and upper works, but most of the survivors were badly burned.

Old St. Pierre was massively built, most of the buildings having stone walls two feet or more thick. These were swept away the same as chaff and the entire town was reduced to a common level of ruins. Iron lamp posts were so softened by the intense heat that the blast bent them to the ground like willow twigs without breaking.

The eruption continued for weekr and the surrounding country was showered with rocks and stones from the crater. The outburst was extended to the Island of Grenada where another volcano poured out such a volume of mud that the surrounding country was buried many feet deep.

AUXILIARIES OF ST. JOHN'S CHURCH MEET

LAKEFIELD WOMEN AND GIRLS PREPARE FOR ACTIVE SEASON

The annual meeting of the Girls' Auxiliary of St. John's Church, Lakefield, was held at the home of Mrs Marling on Wednesday evening, Jan 14th. The meeting was opened with prayer. After the reading of the minutes of last year's annual meeting and the treasurer's report, the officers for the year were elected. Mrs. Ben O'Neil was made honorary president by acclamation. The officers are as follows:

President—Mrs. Marling.

1st Vice-President—Mrs. Archbold.

2nd Vice-President—Miss Amy Watson.

Treasurer—Miss Smith.

Secretary—Miss Ogilvie.

Dorcas Secretary—Miss A. Watson.

Dorcas Assistants—Miss Wood and Miss Smith.

Two new members were enrolled Miss Archbold and Mrs. Roy Hendren.

During the past year the G. A. held seventeen meetings. In May a splendid bale was shipped to the Shungwalk Home. In September the members held a very successful tea and sale in the old church, after which the members held their annual tea party. Mayor and Mrs. Ben Oliel, who had just returned from overseas and the new rector and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. Archbold, were honored guests. Later in September the members' annual picnic was held at Hague's Point.

The meetings were closed during the summer months opening in October for the winter's work. During the year four new members were enrolled.

Woman's Auxiliary.

On Tuesday afternoon the annual business meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of St. John's Church was held at the home of Mrs. Marling, when the officers for the year 1920 were elected. A very special feature of the afternoon was a very interesting address given by Miss Fanny Northcott, medical missionary, who has spent almost six years in China on the "Women of China." A silver collection was taken.

The meeting was opened with a hymn, prayer following the report of the last annual meeting and treasurer's report.

Mrs. Wm. Graham, on behalf of the W. A., tendered a vote of thanks to Miss Northcott for her very interesting address and also spoke a few words on "Why we should send missionaries into the field."

Following are the officers which were elected:

President—Miss F. Atwood.

Vice-President—Mrs. T. Waldon.

Treasurer—Mrs. Stenner.

Secretary—Mrs. Watson.

Dorcas Secretary—Mrs. Mahood and Mrs. Barker.

S. O. N. G. Club Meets.

The S.O.N.G. Club held their weekly social evening on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. J. Twist. A short business meeting prefaced the evening, at which a new president and recording secretary were elected and were as follows: Mrs. J. Trust, president, and Mrs. M. Osborne, recording secretary. Mrs. (Dr.) Smith was successful in carrying away the prize won at progressive euchre. The members will be entertained by Miss Wood on Tuesday Jan. 26.

ABOLISH THE DEATH PENALTY

Editor Review: For months, yes for years, I have been talking to my fellowmen on the horrible law that has been in force in Canada for so many years, that of condemning a human being to death for being found guilty by jury and judge of murder. An example of this legislation has been practiced in our city this week. This law will not be changed without the people demand it. A Liberal member in the House of Commons two years ago asked the Government to abolish the capital punishment. The Government did not feel justified to pass such a law unless public opinion was stronger.

Since then I have been trying to get some one to get up a petition but no one has as yet done so. My opinion is, if a man or women is not fit to live in Canada we have no right to say they are prepared to meet their God.

A great deal of gratitude and honor is due Rev. J. Sechensky for what he did in a spiritual way to lighten the spirits of those two men. More thought is due to our beloved and Christian minister, Rev. Canon Davidson.

It was not for curiosity he stayed with these two men and led them to the great divide. It was for the love of humanity.

Rev. G. E. Ross is another minister that has suffered much and did all possible to save the one man particularly. Now, after these two men were changed and made better men, they are plunged into death.

Now, Sir, if putting to death by law is right, why are so many people sad this week? If it is right, why not rejoice? If it is right get busy against me in what I am going to do. If it is wrong get busy with me.

I am requesting this: Next Sunday in all our churches I will ask the priests of the Catholic churches and the ministers of other denominations to preach one sermon on the subject, "Abolish the Death Penalty."

I would ask the following week that the people in sympathy meet in some hall and we will start a chain of petitions for the Dominion and Peterborough will be the first link. Who will offer their hall for this meeting?

Patrolman Discovers Blind Pig But is Charged With Being Drunk

Windsor, Jan. y5.— When Patrolman Michael Petrotski of the Windsor police force tonight unearthed a blind pig on Marion avenue, where drinks were available at 50 cents, he telephoned for the patrol waggon An investigation by Officer Langlois disclosed that Petrotski had squandered several coins in obtaining evidence against this alleged "pigger." Chief of Police Wills will now investigate a report that Petrotski was drunk when he called for the patrol.

POLITICAL REPARTEE.

Ready Retorts Heard on the Public Platform.

Gladstone always awarded the palm for political repartee to his great opponent, Disraeli, because of a retort he made to an unfriendly crowd quite early in his career. The future Lord Beaconsfield, then scarcely known, was standing for Parliament against Col. Grey, who had the powerful backing of the great Whig family of that name. The audience was inclined to regard the brilliant young Jew as an alien and an upstart.

"We know all about Col. Grey," some one shouted, "but, pray, what do you stand on?"

"I stand on my head," was the instantaneous reply.

If there has been nothing in recent years to match this famous clash of wit, there have been some excellent answers, in which the heckled candidate has got the best of the heckler.

When the ship-owning millionaire, Sir Donald Currie, was asked at Greenwich if his father had not been the local barber, he admitted promptly:

"It is true—and if your father had been a barber you would have been the same."

When the present Premier, Lloyd George, who is proud of his lowly birth and bringing up, was asked a similar question he scored as swiftly and even more severely. The heckler unwisely inquired if he remembered that his grandfather used to drive a donkey and cart.

"You will have to forgive me, ladies and gentlemen," Lloyd George apologized; "the cart had quite escaped my memory, but I see the donkey is living yet!"

A parallel case in which the young aristocrat proved as able as the self-made man to hold his own when jeered at was that of Viscount Lewisham, a protectionist, or, as the English say, "tariff reform" candidate, who was suspected of a lack of sympathy for the poor because of his too fortunate birth.

"Yah!" cried a ragged listener as he began to speak. "You wants to tax our food!"

"Be calm, my good man," the viscount reassured him. "We don't intend to tax thistles."

A prohibition orator, speaking during the same campaign, was so frequently interrupted by a rowdy in the crowd that the rest, even those who had been at first hostile, turned against the offender and there were lusty shouts of "Turn him out!"

"No, don't turn him out," suggested the speaker mildly. "Turn him upside down and let the beer run out of him."

Prince as Business Man.

There is such widespread interest in the public activities of the Prince of Wales that there is timely importance in an article in an English magazine on the work of the prince as a business man in the management of his great estates of the Duchy of Cornwall, his Dartmoor Reclamation Scheme, and the latest plan for the improvement of mean streets in London.

The published statements and reports of the Duchy of Cornwall tell an extremely interesting story. Among other things they inform the prince of the progress of the oyster industry which he has established, and also what his estate derives from the sale of the practically wild ponies which he breeds on Dartmoor and "crosses" with a famous Arabian stock.

These balance-sheets and statements also inform the prince how much has come to him through "post groats," which are rental fees, and also through "white" rents. He also learns what he has made through the sale of any unclaimed wrecks that may have been cast up on the Cornish coast, for the proceeds from all such belong to him, as Duke of Cornwall, as do also those from any stranded whales or sturgeons and from any gold or silver discovered in the duchy.

The extent of the Duchy of Cornwall is upwards of 124,000 acres; but of this the greater part is only rough moorland. It includes, however, valuable house property in London, and tin and coal mines in Cornwall and Somersetshire.

Britain Was There.

Major Ian Hay Beith tells an amusing experience of an American officer who was instructed to take over a French village. The Americans got to the village more easily than they had expected and when they reached the little market square they saw the reason. A British tank was squatting plumb in the centre. It had beaten them by about four minutes. When the young officer in charge of the tank saw the American major he scrambled down, saluted and formally handed over the village. The major saluted back and thanked him. "We wish somehow," the young officer said thoughtfully, "that we had something to show, sir, that we were here first." The major thought a minute. Then he said: "I can fix that for you. I'll give you a receipt for the village." And he did: "Received from officer commanding British tank Bing Boy, one village—in poor condition."

Needed on Earth.

Lord Leverhulme, who recently visited this country, told this story the other day: "Every summer," he said, "we have the children from Port Sunlight to the park at Thornton Manor, where roundabouts, swings, Punch-and-July shows and other amusements are provided for them. The mother of two of the children had taught them to pray that Lady Leverhulme and my unworthy self might go to heaven. One night, however, the two little mites omitted to do this, and the mother asked for an explanation. Whereupon the eldest promptly said: 'Well, mum dear, we've been thinking it over, and we's decided to leave it out, because if Lord and Lady Leverhulme go to heaven, who's to give us our treats?'"

Belgian sovereignty over the districts of Eupin and Malmedy, awarded, awarded by treaty with Germany, has been proclaimed.

King Alfonso Desires To Improve the Position Of Spain as World Power

Whatever may be thought of Spain's attitude during the war, and it is not a question which the world can afford lightly to forget, there can be no doubt that the onset of the great struggle interrupted a tremendous bid which Spain was making to improve her international status. Circumstances had tended for some years previously to thrust prominence upon her. A "geographical position" had compelled two great powers, France and Great Britain, to take Spain very much into account in settling the Moroccan question in 1911 and 1912; whilst, in 1913 and before the war broke out in the following year, Spanish statesmen were dreaming complacently of a great Franco-Spanish alliance, and were occasionally telling their dreams. Spain was, at last, to climb back to her old position of a great power, and who should say how great she would be?

So, in May, 1913, King Alfonso paid a state visit to Paris, and, in the following October, all Madrid flocked into the streets to see the French President return the visit. The entente seemed to be deepening as rapidly as could be desired. Then came the war, and with it an end to the great development upon which Spain was so well embarked. State visits, fetes, and gala performances came to an unceremonious end, and the only currency of any value between nations took the form of deeds.

KING ALFONSO.

How Spain met, or rather failed to meet the demand is too well known to need any recounting. It was a sorry business enough, and yet not so sorry but that Spain, the moment the armistice was signed, felt safe in launching a tremendous campaign to secure the rehabilitation of her prestige with the victors. It cannot be said that, so far, she has been very successful, but she continues her efforts with energy unabated, and there is something curiously interesting in the fact that one of her great projects should be a rapprochement between herself and the Argentine republic. King Alfonso, it is reported, is to pay a state visit to the republic before many months have elapsed.

Now a frank review of the facts such as this need not involve, and should not involve anything but the most entire good will toward Spain. But Spain must learn, as all the world must learn, in so far as it has not learned it, that the days of make-believe in its widest sense are past, or, at any rate, are rapidly passing, and that the demand for deeds, so imperative during the war, still continues, and grows daily more urgent. Both Spain and Argentina need to learn this lesson, and by the time King Alfonso reaches Buenos Ayres perhaps they will at any rate have begun to learn it.

From an international standpoint, as from every other standpoint, all must, of course, rejoice at the prospect of the two peoples coming closer together. Over a hundred years have passed since the province of Buenos Ayres raised the banner of revolt, and refused to recognize Joseph Bonaparte as King of Spain. Whilst nearly eighty years have passed since Spain herself recognized the independence of the "United Provinces of the Rio de la Plata." All bitterness has, therefore, long since passed away, and the Argentine republic can extend the most cordial welcome to the ruler of a country from which itself has sprung.

Why She Seeks a New Home.

Tillie Clinger says that the reason she is looking for another home is because the star boarder at her present place is a railroad engineer who wants the government to take over all the boarding houses and let the boarders run them.—Galveston News.

Sir Wiltrid Laurier Said:

"After all what a man does with his money is to invest, and there is no better way to in it than in Life Insurance. As an ESTATE BUILDER there is nothing to equal Life Insurance.

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210380) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $66.30 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $3495.00 in case of death.

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

No wonder Sir Wilfrid said—and he might have added (no better place than the Sun Life of Canada)—"there is no better way to invest it than in LIFE INSURANCE."

DOCTOR TOLD HER TO TAKE TANLAC

MRS. HELMER'S TROUBLES WERE OVERCOME AND SHE IS IN BETTER HEALTH THAN IN YEARS.

"Tanlac has done me a world of good, and I am enjoying better general health than I have in years," said Mrs. C. W. Helmer, of 1647 Third Avenue East, Vancouver, B.C., recently.

"For a year or more I have had scarcely any appetite at all," she continued, "and just had to force down every mouthful I ate, as the most delicious meal, no matter how well prepared, failed to tempt me, and even the little I managed to eat in this way would cause me intense misery, as it would sour. My heart would palpitate something awful, and it was with the greatest difficulty I could get my breath. My nerves were in such bad condition the least little noise out of the ordinary or any little excitement would completely upset me. It was utterly impossible for me to get a good night's sleep, and every morning of my life I would wake up terribly nauseated and would nearly faint away. I was so weak and run down all the time my husband had to wait on me and take care of me just like I was a child. I had a headache all the time, and at times it was so bad I would nearly go distracted. I was also bothered with terrible pains in my back, which at times became so bad I would go for days and days hardly able to move out of my chair.

"Seeing so many men and women here in Vancouver were being benefited by Tanlac, I decided to give it a trial myself. Before I did, however, I called up my physician and asked his advice about taking it, and he told me to go ahead as he believed it to be a good tonic and would do me good. With the good news I started taking Tanlac, and my improvement was simply wonderful. It has completely overcome my stomach trouble. I have a fine appetite and can eat anything I want and everything agrees with me perfectly. I haven't had the headache since I finished the first bottle of Tanlac and the pains have all gone out of my back. I sleep good every night and wake up feeling greatly refreshed, without the slightest sign of nausea. My nerves are in great deal better condition and are getting better every day, and I am sure will soon be all right again. I am glad to say a good word for Tanlac, as I think it a great medicine."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

DESCHANEL IN FIELD NOW FOR PRESIDENCY

SPONTANEOUS MOVEMENT BY RADICALS AND SOCIALISTS OF FRANCE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 14 Paul Deschanel was suddenly thrust forward as candidate for presidency of the Republic in the Chamber of Deputies last night, seemingly by spontaneous impulse on the part of members of the Radical Socialist group. The candidacy of M. Deschanel promises to liven up the Congress of Versailles, which will meet Saturday to elect a president, and the expected walkover for Premier Clemenceau may not materialize.

Immediately after M. Deschanel had been re-elected president of the Chamber, a large number of deputies, led by former Premier Briand, Edouard Herriot, Camille Le Noir and Andre Le Fevre, shouted, "Now to Versailles." M. Deschanel's acceptance is expected to force Premier Clemenceau to announce whether or not he is a candidate.

LANKA TEA

LAY IN YOUR SUPPLY OF COAL AT ONCE ANOTHER INCREASE IN PRICE IS LIKELY

Mine Owners Says This Cause is Unavoidable Owing to the Recent Raise in Wages of Emp'oyes.

Washington, Jan. 15.—Increased coal prices to the consumer, following the award which the President's Coal Commission will make in the dispute between miners and operators, were indicated by the proceedings before the commission.

This, and the outline of the demands of the miners, voiced by John L. Lewis, acting president, were the outstanding features of the day's developments. Mr. Lewis indicated clearly that the miners are still contending for their original demands, a sixty per cent increase in all day labor, tonnage, yardage, and dead work; a six hour work day, five days a week, time and a half for over time, and double time for Sundays and holidays. The miners also want internal differences, not covered by the interstate joint agreement, to be referred back to the respective districts for agreement.

The likelihood of an increased price for coal was evidenced by the insistence of the mine operators that they should not be circumscribed in the making of contracts beyond the time that the Lever act shall be in effect. They also denied, through their attorney, Ralph Crews of New York, that they had agreed to absorb even the 14 per cent. increase in wages allowed by the Garfield award.

Agree to Accept Findings.

Beyond this point the operators agreed to accept the findings of the commission, explaining that the questions asked yesterday were merely for the purpose of discovering the intended scope and character of the inquiry.

"The operators," Mr. Crews explained, "are advised that they may not lawfully be parties to any arrangement by which the price of coal is fixed beyond the date when the Lever law shall be effective, and they therefore will be bound by any action of the commission fixing prices only during such period of time as the Lever law shall be effective, with the understanding that full powers in this respect will be vested in the commission by the President of the United States in accordance with the terms and provisions of that law."

Chairman Robinson explained in this contion: "Just what our duties and powers will be we do not know."

Acting President Lewis, addressing the commission as the miners' representative, laid down the outlines of the miners' demands. He said he was speaking in behalf of the "hundreds of thousands of men engaged in mining bituminous coal, the nation's most basic and essential industry." Mr. Lewis said the miners believed they were entitled to a fair living wage, the best working conditions that could be provided, and that their occupation should be rendered "more healthful and less hazardous."

Mr. Lewis said the miners had received no increase in wages since October 6, 1917, until the recent application of the fourteen per cent. by the government, and that in 1918 a request they made for an increase was denied by the Fuel Administration.

Living Conditions Poor.

"Meanwhile," he declared, "the cost of living has advanced more rapidly to the miner than to nearly any other class of artisan. The living conditions of the miner have ever been too low a grade. The environments under which the miners' children were raised have not been those which would cause an American citizen to look upon them with pride."

Mr. Lewis said the miners were mindful of the rights of capital to earn aproper income upon its investment, but "that humanity has a prior right of consideration and society owes an obligation to the men to toil in the mines."

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The national convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations in Canada is being held in Toronto next week, Jan. 20th to 22nd. Two of the outstanding features of the convention will be the sessions on Wednesday evening when Charles R. Townson, the international secretary for industrial work, will speak, and on Thursday evening when the gathering will be addressed by John Mott, general secretary of the Association movement. Peterborough should be well represented in the convention on account of the fact that it is being held in Toronto.

A wrestling class has been started for senior members, scheduled for Monday evenings at 7 o'clock. Mr. H. B. Cowan is in charge, assisted by Mr. Will Scott. The senior class is planning a snow-shoe tramp next Tuesday night when it is hoped that a big crowd of those who enjoy this splendid outdoor pastime will be on hand with their lady friends. Those of the class who prefer to skate are invited to come to the Association afterwards when a pleasant sociable program will be arranged."

Wednesday night of next week will be the big night of the City Basketball League, when a double-header will be played, the last game being between the Belmont Club and Crossman's. This game will practically decide the championship and great interest is being taken by all the fans.

THEATRICAL

: : AT THE GRAND : :

"Fiddlers Three," a musical comedy, with Tavie Belge, the Belgian prima donna, at the head of the company, was the attraction at the Grand last night. This is a real musical comedy, with a plot, something not easily discoverable in many plays of the kind. The story centres around the annual competition at Cremona of the violin makers of that province.

Mlle. Belge was in excellent voice and was particularly effective in the solos, "Can It Be Love at Last?" and "The Love Is Gone." Thomas Conkey, her lover, was also accorded a hearty reception and justified it by his singing. Both were recalled several times. In their duets, as in the solo parts, their acting was tender or spirited as occasion required. Edna Morn, Leo Frankol, J. Rabiroff and Layman and King had a good deal to do with the evening's entertainment, as did also Horace Sinclair and Tom Dingle as an English nobleman and an American peddler respectively. Both were extremely funny without being vulgar, and that is another thing for which "Fiddlers Three" can be commended; it is clean throughout. The chorus depends upon its ability as a chorus, and not as a medium for displaying the feminine form. The incidental dancing is clever and there is not too much of it.

'Fiddlers Three' was an attractive show from the first to the last curtain call, and it will undoubtedly play to the big business it deserves in Montreal, which is the next city it opens in.

FRANK MAYO AND EDITH ROBERTS IN "LASCA"

DON'T MISS THE GREAT FEATURE AT THE EMPIRE THEATRE

There are undoubtedly few English speaking persons in any theatre audience who have not heard that famous poem, "Lasca," and thrilled at its description of the wide stretches, the vast herds, the racing mustangs, the unbridled temper of that little witch from below the border, the wrath of the Texas norther and the stampede of the frightened cattle. It remained for Universal to transfer this story to the screen, and it was seen for the first time last night at the Empre Theatre.

Taking the poem as a foundation, Percy Heath, who adapted it for the screen, elaborated its incidents and built up a plot of absorbing interest. The director has evidently cooperated with him in creating the proper atmosphere and one that will be readily recognized by the many who admire "Lasca" as a dramatic poem.

The scenes of "Lasca" are laid on both sides of the Rio Grande and give a vivid picture of Texas and Mexican ranch life of several decades ago, before the telegraph and the automobile had destroyed the romance of the great outdoors.

In the role of "Lasca," Edith Roberts does the best work of her career, giving a cameo-like portrayal of the wild rose of the range, who loved and hated with a passion uncontrolled. Frank Mayo is seen as her lover, Anthony Moreland, while Veola Harty, Lloyd Whitlock, Arthur Jasmine and many others make up an almost flawless cast.

Every moment in the production, from the meeting of Moreland and Lasca to the unique climax—the stampede of the frightened herd—should hold the attention of any audience.

James Killen of Hamilton was instantly killed at the plant of the Steel Company of Canada there, by being crushed under a locomotive as it backed off the dock.

Interior Rhodesia Is

A Land of Great Wealth,

But Marred by Tsetse Fly

AFRICA, not so long ago regarded for the most part as a "sepulchre of the world's most daring explorers," now engages the attention of the world because of its natural resources and its industrial possibilities.

Interior Rhodesia must be traversed by native carriers over mountains, through primeval forest, across rivers, through almost impenetrable jungle and underbrush, in peril from elephants, lions, leopards, hyenas, serpents, the tsetse fly, wild men as well as wild beasts. Each carrier has a mail bag of 50 pounds. On an average carriers make 25 miles a day, and even on runs of 600 miles, from Broken Hill to Abercorn, they are seldom more than an hour behind schedule time and generally only half that. They make better time in the wet season than in the dry, as in the wet they travel in bare feet, while in the dry the earth is baked, the ground is hot like "The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes," and they are compelled to wear sandals.

There is one great drawback to the wet; no material has yet been produced that can resist African rain. It laughs at the average rubberized fabrics. One of the few partly successful materials is a peculiarly woven canvas made in England, and even when mail bags of this material are opened, the contents are simply pulp—valueless, and frequently undecipherable. High grade paper, such as that used in the Geographic, and in fact any glazed paper, suffers most; why, I do not know. I suppose it is the combination of heat and water.

The Abercorn run is wonderful in many peculiar ways: Past Chitambo, where Livingstone died, through the marshy region and lake of Bangweolo, across notable rivers like Malambo, Lumbatwa, Mwinekashi, Luansenshi and lovely Chambezi, Luculu and fourteen others of wondrous scenery, through the countries of the Watwa, Waunga, the warlike Awemba, the agricultural Awiwa, the Wiumwanga (tobacco growers) and many other tribes, across the great Tanganyika Plateau and lake, through the forests of thousands of acres of rubber trees and the wonderful rubber vines whose roots can supply the world, and at last reach the border of what was formerly German East Africa.

The plunge of Victoria Falls on the Zambesi is three times that of our Niagara, the roar is heard for 19 miles, and the column of vapor is miles high. In the dialect the Mashonaland and Matabeland, its name means the water that smokes.

From Kasempa to Livingstone (Victoria Falls), is 589 miles, from Livingstone to Bulawayo, 290, and from Kasempa to Cape Town, 2,290 miles. The fauna of Rhodesia is wonderful—think of 17 kinds of antelopes!

As for area, Northeastern Rhodesia contains almost 60,000 square miles, and it is only one of three divisions. What a memorial to Cecil Rhodes, the empire builder. For barbaric splendor, nothing like his funeral was ever seen. To use a phrase that amuses the English, it "laid out" Napoleon's, as described by Thackeray. When my cousin starts on the semi-annual "ulendo" (trip) around his district, the scene at every African village is equal to the arrival of Barnum and Bailey. This entourage is made up of native soldiers, carriers, runners, telegraphers, typists, secretaries, tent setters, flag raisers, band, household servants (40) and I forget what else.

Although the tsetse fly is an abominable pest, it takes second place as a destroyer of property value, to our American pest, the boll weevil. A singular peculiarity of the first-named consists in its habit of biting human beings, horses and oxen on the feet.

When animals are shipped from Cape Town to North Rhodesia, the shipping is done at night, because, unlike the mosquito, the tsetse fly works only in the day time. It prefers to work on the legs, and in the case of horses, these are done up in paraffin and cloths. It should be understood that this foe to man and beast is confined to certain districts.

Red Deer In New Zealand.

Some forty years ago red deer were imported into New Zealand from England and it was found that the conditions of the adopted home of these animals caused them to increase in numbers very rapidly and also caused them to show a marked physical improvement, says an exchange.

The antlers on New Zealand bucks of the red deer are the finest found in any country.

Most of the deer hunting is done by night stalking, and because of the wild nature of the country the sport often becomes very strenuous as well as exciting.

The deer are so numerous in easily accessible districts that the maximum allotments are almost certain to be obtained by any hunter of reasonable ability and enthusiasm.

This sport is indulged in chiefly during the months of March, April and May, and fees for hunting licenses run from $5 to $50 according to the district.

Conceit.

A conceited painter named Tilton, carried away by his enthusiasm for his own productions, declared at a studio tea to a group of his devotees: "After all, there are but three great painters—Titian, Tintoretto and Tilton." When the remark was repeated to Mrs. W. W. Storey, mother of the eminent painter, Julian Story, she exclaimed: "Well, the only thing I know to equal the 'Assumption' of Titian is the assumption of Tilton!"

A match has been tentavely arranged between Jimmie Wilde and Frankie Mason, at Milwaukee. Mason agreets to make 108 pounds, and the bout will be for Wilde's world's title.

An Island Where Deer are Safe

The deep music of a deerhound's voice came faintly down the wind, shortly it blended with the sharper voice of a hunting Airedale. The scream of a hungry cougar is not more terrifying to the timid deer of the British Columbia coast than the bay of the hounds on the trail. When they hear it they get up and go—straight for water.

The little spike buck, born a few seasons before on the rugged, forest-clad coast of the Pacific province lifted his head. His eyes and his ears, his very pose displayed the high tension of his taut nerves. He looked into the forest of the island on which he stood, and he saw nothing alarming. He turned and stared across the water toward Nelson Island. The only thing that caught his eye that did not denote restful nature in primitive grandeur was a smudge of smoke that smeared the horizon and showed that a C.P.R. coasting steamer was outbound from Powell River. Then the boom of the hound's voice rolled again across the waters from Nelson Island. The deer moved nervously, looked all round again—and calmly bent his head to bite a mouthful of grass. He was safe. He was on Hardy Island.

Hardy Island is the city of refuge to all the deer that know about it. Three years ago it was good hunting grounds. To-day it is taboo to men with guns, and hell pops, as the saying goes, if men with both guns and dogs appear. It is unlawful to hunt deer with dogs in British Columbia, but it is still done in certain districts, in spite of law. Two years ago, or perhaps slightly more than that, Mr. C. J. Leyland of England purchased Hardy Island, a gem of land situated just off Nelson Island at the mouth of Jervis Inlet. He bought it to experiment with British trees in the B.C. climate. There were 2,500 acres of rich lands and forests, and there was a good orchard. He placed a watchman, Tom Brazil, on the property and did no more toward development, preferring to await the end of the war. Brazil, a lover of animals, caugat two of the wild deer that frequently swam to the island from the other nearby lands. He tamed them. They in turn brought other wild ones. Many of them had been run to water by dogs and took refuge on Hardy Island. There, seeing how intimate the original tame pair were with the man who controlled the orchards where the luscious apples grew, the wild newcomers gradually grew intimate too. To-day a herd of thirty deer, most of them born in wildness, respond to the voice of Tom Brazil when be calls. Some of them will step forward from the herd when called by name. They have no fear at all of man, when on Hardy Island. Sometimes they swim to other parts of the coast, and range about a bit, but they come back, often fagged from some fierce run and swim.

Tom Brazil's herd is becoming a byword on the coast, but no dog and no man dare brave what might happen should he try to hunt on the island of refuge. So the deer are fat, are bringing new little lives into the world, and are adding to their numbers by recruit volunteers from the wild ranges where such safety is not known.—L. V. K.

Our November Trade.

The trade of Canada for the month of November was greater than during the same month a year ago by more than eighteen million dollars, according to the monthly statement issued by the Customs Department. The statement shows that in November, 1919 the grand total of Canadian trade rose to $215,714,257, as compared with $197,543,153 in November, 1918. The total figures for the eight months of the fiscal year which ended with the close of November are, however, less than during a similar period in 1918 by over sixteen millions. For the eight month period in 1918, the total of Canadian trade was $1,492,037,038, while this year it is $1,475,362,641, or a decrease of $16,674,307.

Exports for the eight months ending November 30 were some $35,000,000 lower than during the same period in 1918, the figures standing: 1918, $839,300,955, and 1919, $808,303,570. On the other hand, a slight increase is shown in total imports for the eight months. The total value of goods imported into Canada during the eight months was $636,389,157, while a year ago it was $633,464,075, or an increase in imports of $2,923,082.

Marked increases are shown by the statement in the value of certain domestic products exorted from Canada. The value of wood, paper, etc., exported during the eight-month period was nearly $32,000,000 higher than during the same period in 1918. The statement shows that wood, paper and products were exported from Canada last year to the total value of $137,677,942, as compared with $105,847,509 in 1918. The value of domestic agricultural products exported in 1919 was more than seventy millions more than last, and animals and their products, sixty-seven millions. This increase is, however completely offset by a great falling off in the value of miscellaneous products. The value of exports classed under the head miscellaneous was over $165,000,000 greater last year than this.

Cat-tail Flour.

Long ago the Iroquois Indians used to dry and pulverize the roots of the cat-tails that grow so lavishly in American swamps and make flour for bread and puddings, but the fact seems to have been forgotten until quite recently. Remembering this incident in Indian domesticity, a later American has made such flour, and food experts have tested it. "Even 100 per cent. cat-tail flour," they report, "made biscuits that were not so different from those made with wheat flour," and "puddings made with cat-tail flour in them in place of cornstarch proved to be entirely satisfactory. The flavor produced by this flour is pleasing and palatable." There are thousands of acres of cat-tail in existence, capable of producing, it is estimated, more than two tons of flour to the acre. One digs and peels the roots, much as one digs and peels potatoes.

World's Greatest Soldier.

Physically, Foch is a little man, his inches are about those of Napoleon, and he has Grant's fondness for the cigar. Like Joffre, a southerner, he has frankness of speech which his old commander has never displayed. Unlike Petain his words are rarely caustic and he has made friends among all his allies. An old man, close to seventy, yet younger than Clemenceau, he was still handsome when the war began, but the strain has marked his face and only his eyes reveal an unshaken spirit.—Frank H. Simonds in Metropolitan.

FLAX IN THE WEST.

Value of Crop In This Country Over $80,000,000.

While climatic conditions in the West were adverse to flax as well as to all other grain crops, market prices, if the sale of a carload at Winnipeg to the British Government a few days ago may be taken as a criterion, promise to afford ample compensation.

This carload realized the handsome sum of $8,332, being at the rate of $4.26 per bushel. For the crop of 1918, according to figures of the statistical bureau at Ottawa, the average market price was $3.13, while for that of 1915 it was but $1.51 per bushel.

Had the weather clerk not acted so ugly as he did during the summer of 1919 it would have been possible for the Dominion to have raised the largest crop of flax in its history, the acreage, at 1,069,380, being 19,000 acres in excess of that of any previous year. But even with an ugly weather clerk to contend with, the yield was the second best in history, being 7,368,000 bushels against 8,259,999 bushels for the record year of 1916. In 1918 it was 6,055,200 bushels and in 1917 it was 5,934,900.

In value the flax seed crop of the Dominion stands fourth among the various grains grown. That of 1918 had a value of $18,951,000, or more than double the sum credited to the crop of 1915. If the price paid in Winnipeg by the British Government is the figure that will rule for the season the crop of 1919 will have a value of over $31,000,000. But while there is an "if" about this, it seems to be reasonably certain that as far as value is concerned a new record will be established.

During the period covered by the war there has been a marked irregularity in the export trade in flax seed. In 1914, for example, it touched the record figure of $24,816,833, but two years later it was down to $2,973,933. During the two following years the trade again took an upward turn, being $10,735,915 in 1917 and $19,764,255 in 1918. For the fiscal year 1919 the best it could do was $7,759,825. Most of the seed exported goes to the United States. But in the record year, 1914, Great Britain took 8,579,713 bushels having a value of $10,482,556. In 1916, on the other hand, it took but 13,951 bushels valued at $47,511. Since then the trade with the Mother Country has materially improved, 116,117 bushels, valued at $1,431,860, being taken during the fiscal year 1919.

But if the export trade in flax seed has been marked by irregularity during the last five years there has been a steady expansion in the shipments of flax fibre, the value of which for the fiscal year 1919 being $827,327, compared with $370,241 the previous year and but $34,230 in 1914. During the current year the trade promises to swell to even more substantial proportions, the total for the five months ending August, the latest period for which figures are available, being $759,782, compared with $658,115 for the corresponding period of the previous years In other words the exports for those five months are in excess of the twelve of 1918 by $388,541.
responding period of the previous year. In other words the exports for those five months are in excess of the twelve of 1918 by $389,541.

C. G. E. SECURE LEAD IN CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE BY WINNING FROM AUBURN

Score Was 6 to 4 After Fast Exciting Game Full of Thrills Rival Forwards Battle all the Way—Belmonts 9 Business College 8 in Opening Fixture

The C.G.E. tool room jumped into first place in the City Hockey League last night by winning from the Canadian Woollen team by a score of 6 to 4.

The game opened as was expected with both teams tearing into each other like mad. The pace was terrific for a city league fixture in the opening minutes with the Auburn bunch trying with individual efforts to break through the C.G.E. defence. In Helson, Dugan and Goal-tender Butcher the speedy forwards from the north end ran up against a stone wall. All their individuality was futile throughout the first period and in the meantime Messrs. Barrie, Bartlett and Butcher on the forward line beat Legrow twice, making the score at the end of the period 2 to 0.

In the second period the Auburn forwards played more combination and had the better of the argument. They checked back more in this period and Legrow got his mits on more of them. The period ended C.G.E. 4 to Auburn's 3.

The fast pace of the second period began to have its effect on the light Auburn forwards and their star, Freddie Graham, was all but exhausted. McWilliams worked like a trogan to hold up their end, but his efforts were futile against the better conditioned electric workers. The score ended 6 to 4.

There was little to choose between the two forward lines, but the work of the C.G.E. defence was far in advance of the big boys at the opposite end of the rink.

Belmont 9, Business College 8.

In the opening game of the night the Business College gave the Belmont Club a bad fright. They played a much improved game over last week and their opponents played rather loosely, being fortunate in getting off with the long end of the score even with the one goal. Daynard in the nets for the College stopped a host of hard shots, especially in the last two periods and with a little more experience and confidence will be among the best.

The score at the end of the first period was 5 to 3 favoring the Belmonts. It was tied 7 to 7 at the end of the second period and in the last Belmonts scored twice to the College's once.

The Line-ups.

Belmont Club—Goal, Darling; defence, Head and Murray; centre, Thirnbeck; left wing, Gillespie; right wing, Stewart; subs., Wright, Herbison and Rutherford.

Foley, Sheehan and Company Have Edge of Three Goals to Enter Second Half of Series in Which Goals Count, Fast Brilliant Game.

At Lindsay last night the Juniors lost out by one goal after an exceptionally brilliant game. This, although losing the game, can be counted a victory for the local squad as they now have a lead of three goals in the series where goals count. If the youngsters can hold the Midgets to a victory of one goal on the small ice up their on their first appearance it looks like a good chance that they will win the district quite handily.

At the very opening of the game the Petes gave the Midgets a real fright by scoring three goals in rapid succession. Then Lindsay woke up and played some sensational hockey, reducing the lead at the end of the period to one goal.

The second period was all Lindsay, the Petes appearing to be lost on the small ice more during this twenty minutes than in any other part of the game. The Midgets gathered three while their opponents failed to put one past Oliver.

The final period was fast and furious with every youngster on both teams battling with every ounce they had. Individual rushes were frequent during the latter part of the game. The Midgets started out very strong and things looked rather dark until the Petes repeated their performance of the first period, and slammed three into the Lindsay net. The game ended 7 to 6 for Lindsay.

The teams were:

Lindsay—Oliver, goal, Garnett, l. defence; Green, r. defence; Bell, centre; Stoddard, r. wing; Chambers, l. wing. Ranger and Johnston, subs.

Peterborough — Burgoyne, goal; Sheehan, l. defence; Lawson, r. defence; Collins, centre; Jackson, r. wing; Foley, l. wing. McElroy and Sutton, subs.

Referee—Jacob.

DEMPSEY WILL NOT SIGN UNTIL FEBRUARY

KEARNS SAYS TIA JUANA IS NOT SUITABLE FOR BOUT

Los Angeles, Jan. 15.—Jack Kearns manager of Jack Dempsey, proposes to "forget" all further talk of negotiations for a Dempsey-Carpentier fight either in the United States or Europe until the middle of February, when, according to a cablegram received by him from Paris today, an option on Carpentier services held by Chas. Cochrane, British fight promoter, expires.

"All the talk in the world by Crofforth as to what size purse he will give means nothing unless Carpentier as well as Dempsey can sign," said Kearns. "I have a cable from Nat Lewis, who is with Pat Moore in Paris, saying that Carpentier is tied up with Cichrane until the middle of February. I am going to sit tight until that time, then issue an invitation to all to bid for the fight and accept the best."

Doesn't Like Tia Juana

Los. Angeles, Cal., Jan. 15.— Jack Kearns, manager for Jack Dempsey, sees little chance for holding the Dempsey-Carpentier fight in Tia Juana, Mexico. He believes it must go abroad.

"I cant' see a chance in the world of holding the fight at Tia Juana, said Kearns. "Until I went to San Diego last week. I thought there was a possibility o fholding the bout there, but after going over the ground personally I came to the conclusion that Lower California is not the proper site."

"In the first place Tia Juana is beyond the extreme southwestern boundary of the United States. It is fifteen miles from San Diego, and transportation facilities are sadly lacking. Then there is not a large enough local population to draw from.

"Jim Croffoth told me that he had never stated definitely that he planned to stage the fight at Tia Juana. His chief aim is to be the promoter, whether in Mexico, the United States England or France, he doesn't appear to care. It seems to me that all this Tia Juana talk has been to boost another enterprise promoted by Croffoth and operating there.

"As far as I can see now, there does not appear to be much chance of holding the fight in the United States at all. Judging from the present outlook, London or Paris will land it. In the meantime, neither Dempsey nor myself are worrying."

INDUSTRIAL ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION FORMED

GOODYEAR TIRE AND RUBER COMPANY BEHIND THE MOVEMENT

Eight teams are now entered in the Toronto and York Industrial Athletic Association Hockey League.

Like many others organizations, the emryo of this association evolved quite unexpectedly in a single night early last fall.

It was during a dinner given by he Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. to their employes at the Carls-Rite Hotel that the idea of an industrial athletic association was born. This company having long recognized the value of athletics from both the moral and physical standpoints, has given its whole-hearted support to the Goodyear Athletic Association.

So that, while the dinner in the Carls-Rite was originally intended merely as a "get-away" to their own winter sports, there developed such a protest against he existing discrimination against industrial association, that there seemed a real need for a purely industrial organization to promote industrial athletics.

And so the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., represented by the Goodyear Athletic Association, having taken the lead in forming this new association, were soon supported by some of Toronto's largest industrials, such as the Massey-Harris Co., Ltd., A. R. Clark, Ltd., Canadian Kodak Co. etc.

Confidence in the success of the association is expressed on every hand. In fact, plans are already under way for baseball, football, track and other activities for the coming summer.

SISLER'S FAMOUS LOADED BALL BAT

FOUND WITH NAILS DRIVEN IN WHERE BALL SHOULD STRIKE IT

(By Billy Evans.-

Trick pitching is all wrong. That is generally admitted. Yet for five or six years pitchers have been gettig away with all kinds of "mystery stuff." What a yell would go up if the hatters doctored their bats to increase their chances of not only hitting the ball, but of having it go safe. It is possible to do such a thing, yet never would the batters get away with stuff that resembled trickery.

Major league catchers seldom fail to scan the bats used by dangerous mitters. Time and time again after some good hitter has come through with a chacking hit, I have seen the catcher pick his bat up, look over it carefully and then toss it away. It seems that catchers are always a bit suspicious about the good hitters. Evidently they figure the good hitter is as liable to try to increase h's effectiveness with some trickery, as did a lot of pretty good pitchers.

Several years ago George Sisler of the St. Louis Browns was on a wild batting hampage. No pitcher seemed able to stop him. He was leading the league with an average well over .400. Sisler is naturally a great hitter. He is a hard man to fool. Add to this his speed and he makes it interesting for the pitcher and the fileder any time he comes to the bat. No catcher in the American League is more observing than Roy Echalk of the Chicago White Sox. In a game after Sisler has made a couple of hits Schalk walked over to where he had thrown his bat. He picked it up, gave it the once over, and then a knowing smile came over his countenance. Walking over to where I was standing he handed me the bat and remarked: "Perhaps that bat will explain why he can't get Sisler out."

At the part of the bat where contact with the ball is most desired, to get the pill safe, it was studded with perhaps 50 new steel nails. Over this surface was rubbed something that had a tendency to blacken the bat and conceal to a great extent the nails. Schalk was positive a trick bat was assisting Sisler in his hitting. I was a bit suspicious myself, as it was apparent the great number of nails driven in such a small place undoubtedly caused that portion of the bat to be considered loaded with a foreign substance, steel, and it seemed such a point of contact ought to cause the ball to travel harder and further than mere wood. Sisler merely smiled and explained it was his favorite bat, that the grain in the bat at that point had begun to separate, and to save that bat he had used the fine steel nails. I was satisfied the explanation was a truthful one, but was compelled to rule the bat out. Sisled didn't object, went over to the bench, selected another bat, and made a three-base hit. That evening the story went over the country that Sisler had been using a trick bat, heavily loaded with steel nails. Had Sisler fallen off in his hitting it would have been regarded as conclusive evidence it was the bat, not Sisler, who was responsible for the hitting. I was glad when he continued hitting at a .400 clip, without the alleged trick bat, as I felt Sisler had sought no advantage through trickery. He isn't that type of a player. However, it would be possible for a player to do all kinds of freak things with the bats, such as loading them, flattening them at certain points of contact and many other things too numerous to mention. Such an act would not be tolerated for a minute, so why should the trick ball be able to get by?

COLD FEET IN ADVERTISING

It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.

Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.

National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.

Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms? Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.

THE DIVINE CALL TO THE CHURCHES TODAY

REV. R. POGUE SPEAKER AT SPECIAL SERVICES IN ST. PAUL'S

The united services between St. Paul's Presbyterian and George St. Methodist Churches will be continued tonight and Friday. Rev. R. J. M. Glassford, who has been conducting the meetings, will speak both evenings. Parents are requested to plan for a large attendance of the young on Friday evening.

Mr. Glassford had to speak at a Forward Movement service last night in Prescott. In his absence Rev. R. Pogue conducted the service and spoke on "God's Call to Repentance" as given by the prophet Hosea in the 14th chapter of his prophecy. Israel was God's covenant people and might well stand for the Church of God today. Like Israel, the people of God today frequently heed the siren calls of the world and turn away from fellowship with God and the service of God. The message of God through Hosea to sinning Israel is His message to His backsliding people today. He said, "O Israel return unto the Lord thy God." God longs for the restoration of His people. He knew the loss to them of life in the far country. They lost His fellowship, His love, His peace. There is no peace to those who are living in sin. His call is a call to return. It is a call to the prayerless to become prayerful, to the thoughtless to become thoughtful, to those who have neglected the Word of God to begin to read it, to those who have failed in their duties to the sinful and the needy to devote themselves in the service of others. It was a call, not so much to reformation as to restoration, restoration to the favor and love and service of God. To all such God makes a threefold promise in this chapter. He says, first, "I will heal their backsliding"; second, "I will love them freely"; third, "I will be as the dew to Israel." Of this last promise the speaker said: "What a copious fall of dew would be to tender crops during a long drought, that God's love will be to the souls that are parched and weary and homesick. To return unto God is to return unto love and home."

MEN MAY HAVE TO BE EXAMPLES FOR WOMEN

BISHOP SUGGESTS "STOP SMOKING" TO SAVE WIVES AND DAUGHTERS

Toronto, Jan. 15.—Right Rev. Bishop Reeve told an audience of 500 returned soldiers in the parish hall of St. Anne's Church last night that men of Canada might do well to give up smoking as an example to the women of the country.

"I am not a smoker myself," said Bishop Reeve, "and I have nothing to say against those who do smoke. But what is going to become of this country when the women are beginning to smoke, as they are doing now, and when they dress as they are beginning to do now at dances? You'll have to give up smoking because you don't want your girls smoking and your wives smoking.

"It has come to this, is it not proper to ask again: What are we coming to? The men will have to give up smoking in self-defense to set an example to the women."

It was a smoking audience to which the Bishop spoke to, as the cigarettes had been passed about freely, and men pulled at cigars and tugged at their pipes with the appearance of the greatest enjoyment. They listened to the words of Bishop Reeve with respectful silence.

REPORT ON MOTHER'S PENSIONS NOW READY

After these many moons, someone has been found to speak a kind word for the Canada Registration Board. The Canada Registration Board "helped materially" in furnishing a starting point for Dr. W. A. Riddell's investigations into the needs of Mothers' Pensions in the Province of Ontario, of which a complete report will be placed in the hands of Premier E. C. Drury early next week.

The present report is an enlargement of the interim report represented to Sir William Hearst last spring, and contains, in addition to the findings of the Deputy Minister of Labor, recommendations in regard to the extent of the application of the funds, an estimate of the cost under various methods of administration, and consideration of possible sources of the fund.

The report, it is stated, strongly demonstrates the need for Mothers' Allowance legislation at as early a date as is feasible.

When it was decided to undertake a survey of the Province a year ago, the return of the national registration promised the most up-to-date and accurate information in regard to the number of widows with children in Ontario.

Million Cards in 10 Days.

The Ontario cards were placed at the disposal of Dr. Riddell for examination, and on January 29th, the work was begun in Ottawa by a staff of 18, including 17 clerks and a supervisor. In the course of ten days, one million cards were scanned; and the data from widows' cards entered on report sheets.

And that was only the beginning. Afterwards, there were the investigations of these cases all over Ontario, in order to discover the widows with children in need of assistance to keep the home together and afford the mother the opportunity of properly caring for her little ones.

The results of this survey, together with the findings of the public hearings held by Dr. Riddell in various large centres, were compiled in the interim report of last spring. Later investigation has taken in all classes of dependent mothers, a task of even greater magnitude.

The report is now practically completed, the date of presentation to the Premier depending only upon the time required to complete typing.

SOLICITATION DEFERRED

Business Men's Protective Association Leave Work to Mercantile Organization.

Mr. J. S. Wood, of the Business Mens' Protective Association, called upon Secretary Frazer of the Mercantile Association at the Board of Trade rooms to explain the character and functions of his association.

He is the general manager of this association with headquarters in Vancouver, B.C., and the functions are the co-operation of legal service and exchange service throughout the country.

Mr. Wood was assured that the Mercantile Association had no reason whatever to question his integrity or that of his association, but that it is itself organizing to give to its members just such service.

Mr. Wood has concluded to defer the solicitation of members in Peterborough owing to the active interest the merchants are taking in their own organization.

TIGER DEFEATED IN THE CAUCUS

PRESIDENT OF CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES NOMINATED FOR PRESIDENCY OF FRANCE

ODDS AGAINST CLEMENCEAU

POINCARE, IT IS OFFICIALLY STATED REFUSES TO RUN AGAIN

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 16.—Premier Georges Clemenceau went down to defeat at the hand of his countrymen today in a caucus of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies to choose a candidate for the presidency of the republic. He was beaten by Paul Deschanel, president of the Chamber of Deputies who secured 408 votes while "Tiger" had 389 cast in his favor. Senators and Deputies are generally of the opinion that the vote means Clemenceau's elimation from public life, he being neither a senator nor a deputy. His friends are already searching for another candidate as President Poincaire is reported to have refused to accede to the demand of a deputation that he be a candidate for re-election. Never before in the histor yof French presidential elections have so many attended the plenary caucus, 821 out of 924 being present.

JOSEPH MAHER WAS SEVERELY INJURED

CAUGHT BETWEEN FREIGHT CAR AND BUILDING WHILE TRAIN MOVED ON

Joseph Maher was severely injured yesterday afternoon while working among the freight cars in the yard of the Canadian General Electric Company.

Maher was climbing up the side of a wide furniture car and in the smoke and steam surrounding the train did not notice the coal building in the north yard. This building is rather close to the tracks and Maher was caught between it and the car on which he was riding. He was rolled around several times until he came to the doorway where he dropped heavily to the ground.

Comstock's ambulance was summoned and the unfortunate man taken to St. Joseph's Hospital where he was attended by Drs. McNulty and Hayes. It was found he had several broken ribs and his arm was broken badly in three different places. He was also bruised and shaken up considerably but today is resting quite easily and his speedy recovery is hoped for.

POINCARE TO RUN AGAIN

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 16.—A number of senators and deputies will request President Poincare to stand for re-election as president of the French republic and Premier Clemenceau announced today that he would withdraw his candidature. He asked his supporters to vote for Poincare.

BRITISH ALARMED OVER OUTLOOK OF RED SUCCESSES IN NEAR EAST

In Persia, Turkey, Mesopotania and Afghanistan the Situation is Serious—Black Sea Likely to Become a Bolshevik Lake.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 16.—The attention of the British people is fixed on the near east where recent Bolshevik successes have carried the Red Russian armies almost up to the threshold of Indian, Persia, Mesopotamia and Asiatic Turkey. Cabinet members and chiefs of the British army and navy are today in Paris conferring with Premier Gloyd George on military and naval matters in connection.

It is believed with conditions in Southwestern Asia, apprehension was aroused by the issuance of a semi-official statement yesterday, pointing out the situation that has arisen through the collapse of General Denikine's army in Souhern Russia and the Bolshevik penetration of Trans-Caspia. Not only was it admitted that the menace from the Bolshevik invasion of the near east was very real, but it was pointed out that internal conditions in Persia, Turkey and Afghanistan were threatening. In Mesopotamia, too, the British are forced to contend with difficulties arising from racial dissension. It was said that the Soviet advance that captures the Crimea would make Black Sea virtually a Russian Bolshevik lake.

Dr. Robertson at Women's Canadian Club

Dr. J. W. Robertson, of the Conservation Commission at Ottawa, addressed the members of the Women's Canadian Club in the lecture room of the Public Libbrary yesterday afternoon. As an opening number Mrs. A. L. Amys favored the gathering with a solo of rare sweetness and depth of appeal, putting her hearers in excellent mental tune for the inspiring oratorical treat which was to follow.

Mrs. James Kendry, president of the club, presided. Introducing the distinguished speaker of the afternoon in a few brief sentences, Mrs. Kendry touched on the inconvenience which Dr. Robertson had met with in fulfilling his engagement with the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Club. This she felt would heighten the appreciation of an address which could not but prove of immense interest to the members.

Marked with the superb impetus of generous ideals, and sounding a note of individual interest, this lecture was such as to lift the intellect to a higher plane, thereby affording a clearer and broader view of the burning issues of the day. Dr. Robertson's style of delivery is characterized by that fine assurance and deep sense of conviction which can only be acquired by a first-hand knowledge of things and events. Impressing the points of interest with illustrative anecdotes from "The slide box in his brain," as he so aptly turned the phrase, the address throughout was absorbing and never wearisome.

There is in every human heart a divine impulse to struggle toward the light — an unconscious craving for that which is noble and good and true. But too often, and especially in the case of the young, this beautiful trait is eclipsed by the glitter of frivolity and the lure of materialism and other forces which overshadow the things that really count. But our young people must learn to overcome difficulties. They must enter into competition and learn the keen delight of triumph. They must root out of their characters the narrow and selfish dispositions which hinder the growth of all that is desirable. In a word, they must not be weaklings, but a nation of thoroughbreds.

Character—good citizenship in these things, rests the strength of a people, and the developing of these principles in our coming generation was worthy of our finest efforts.

Touching on the glorious victory which has been ours, the speaker went on to remind his listeners of the price we had to pay. That price was the unstinted sacrifice of life and love and home ties, energy, wealth and all that we prise, that we might attain the one great object. And it was well that we should ever remember that price, lest in our after-war rejoicing we develop that spirit of thoughtlessness, and thereby retard our ambition to "carry on." There is one great object of a human life, as Dr. Robertson sees it. That is to feel, when death comes, that you have left the world just a little better than you found it.

He spoke of the great possibilities ahead of our young Canada—of the honored place she held among the nations of the world. He told of the keen appreciation which France and Italy felt for the splendid spirit of unselfish service which had marked her people during the prolonged fight for liberty. He brought to the women of Canada a message from the Queen of Italy—a message expressing the lasting esteem and gratitude of their sisters across the seas.

He was the personal recipient of the great honor occasioned by the manly deportment of our Canadian army over there. Our Canadian women, not being driven to the last exhaustion of strength as were their sisters in France, had contributed

WHO IS TO PAY COSTS INCURRED IN THE CASE OF VETERAN R. MURDOCK?

Robert Murdock, a returned soldier was found living alone, starved and frozen, in a shack in the north country last November by a party of hunters. When the case was reported in this city, High Constable Moore removed Murdock to the County Jail and asked the County Council to provide for his maintenance. This, the members of the Council refused to do this, saying that it was outside their jurisdiction and referred Constable Moore to J. H. Burnham, M. P.

Mr. Burnham agreed to stand good for the expenses of removing Murdock to the hospital at Kingston, from which he had been discharged or had made his escape. He was sent back accordingly and now there is a dispute as to who is to pay for the unfortunate man's maintenance.

Dr. Ryan, chief of that hospital, in a letter to Constable Moore, sanctioned the return of Murdock. He stated that Murdock had been discharged from that institution and when found by the constable had resumed the status of a private citizen. Another letter, however, denies all responsibilty for the expense incurred and Inspector Dunlop, of the Board of Correction and Charities, in a letter to Mr. Burnham, denies the responsibilty of the province in this particular case.

This is a matter in which T. Tooms, M. L. A. can interest himself to some purpose. Murdock as a returned soldier, being entitled to special consideration.

PERSIANS ASK BRITIAN'S HELP

GOVERNMENT OF FORMER COUNTRY ALARMED AT PROSPECT OF BOLSHEVIK INVASION—

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 16.—Impression prevailed here today that in the conference at Paris of Premier Lloyd George, Winston Spencer Churchill, Walter Hume Long, Baron Beatty and Field Marshal Sir Henry Wilson, it would be decided to take some action against the Bolshevik aggression. The Persian Government has requested Great Britain to state what assistance can be given Persia in the event of Bolshevik invasion and what defensive action by Persia would accord with the British policy. An unconfirmed report from Berlin says that Enver Pasha, former Turkish War Minister, who was recently crowned King of Kurdistan, has been in Berlin and has proceeded to Asia Minor. This raises the question of whether he was trying to enlist the support of the German extremist elements in carrying out cooperation between the Turks and the Bolsheviki.

26 DEGREES BELOW ZERO AT DAYBREAK

COLDEST NIGHT AND MORNING SINCE THE WINTER OF 1917

Last night was the coldest experienced yet this winter, the thermometer going down to 26 below zero during the night, according to the local official weather recorder. At noon today the official temperature was 10 degrees below zero.

According to the thermometer at Lynch's drug store, which is always reliable, the temperature read 26 below zero as late as 8 a.m.

This weather is the coldest experienced in this city since the latter part of the winter of 1917 when the thermometer dropped even below last night's mark. Last night is a record so far this winter and by the expressions of pain heard on the street the majority of citizens hope it will be the standing record for the season.

ALL PEACEFUL IN BERLIN

Radical Leaders Fail in Efforts to Start General Strike.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Jan. 16.—The attempts of Radical-Labor leaders to provoke general strike yesterday as a protest against the shooting of the mob which stormed the Reichstag building on Tuesday failed completely. At one p.m. the inner city presented the usual aspect. In many large industrial plants there were sharp clashes between the Majority Socialist leaders, who opposed the strike and the Independent Socialist and Communist agitators. Gustave Noske, Minister of Defence, announced drastic penalties would be inflicted upon any who attempted to interfere with those protecting public utilities.

Ottawa, Jan. 16.—The resignation of R. A. Pringle, controller of newsprint and bookpaper, it is understood will be in the hands of Sir Henry Drayton, Minister of Finance, this afternoon. When seen by the Canadia Press, he refused to discuss the report, but intimated he might have a statement to make late in the day.

FIRST SESSION OF COUNCIL OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS HELD TO-DAY

Nine Countries are Represented and Hope is Expressed that United States Will Soon Become a Member—Chairmanship for President Wilson

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 16.—Representatives of France, Great Britain, Italy, Greece, Belgium, Spain, Japan, Portugal and Brazil, members of the Council of the League of Nations, met in the French Foreign Office this morning for the first meeting in the history of the League. Leon Bourgeois was elected chairman and Sir Eric Drummond, Great Britain, general secretary.

The first official act of the council was the appointment of a commission to trace the frontiers of the Sarre Basin territory. Leon Bourgeois, in his opening address stated that the chairmanship of the meeting should be held by President Wilson. He then expressed the hope that the U. S. difficulties would soon be overcome and that country would be represented on the council.

Earl Curzon, representing Great Britain on the council expressed the loyalty of his Government and the dominions to the spirit underlying the covenant of the league, declaring that it was their intention to insure its practical efficiency by every means in their power. "The League of Nations," he said, "is an expression of a universal desire for saner methods of regulation the affairs of mankind and to provide machinery by which practical effect may be given the principles of international friendship and understanding."

With the exception of the United States representative all members of the council called for by the covenant of the league were present when the meeting was called to order. M. Bourgeois in his speech predicted that January 16, 1920, would go down in history as the date of the birth of a new world.

London was selected as the city for the next meeting of the council.

DR. FREDERICK GIVES INTERESTING ADDRESS ON AFFAIRS IN THE ORIENT

First of Series of Thursday Night Meetings Held at Board of Trade Rooms.

The first of a series of Thursday night meetings was held in the Board of Trade rooms last night, with Dr. E. Frederick as the speaker of the evening.

Dr Frederick's subject was "Oriental Traffics and Discoveries." He entertained the Board members who expressed their warm appreciation of him personally and their keen interest in his excellent address on Oriental customs and habits.

In the course of his address he described the peculiar circumstances under which he had been brought into close relation with the native people of many parts of the Orient and how he used the information in buying and selling

Where English is Spoken

In the matter of language, one can now travel in Egypt, Arabia, all around Africa, in Mesopotamia, India the Eeast Indies, China and Japan, with only one language, English; but it is necessary to have a knowledge of French, Arabic, Hindustani and Russian, also of the peculiar habits of the bazarrs to be able to hold ones own in trading.

The difference between the Orient and the Westerner are as great as black and white, in their ideas of what constitutes an honorable bargain, the price depending not on the value of the goods but the skill and endurance of the seller, and as an example, told how he had bought 14 scarabs for 30 cents for which the same merchant had asked $30 for one.

Much of the trade jealousy existing between the Germans, Japanese and British in the Orient was due to what the British regarded as unsportsmanlike methods of trade by the Germans, and German jealousy because they were compelled to speak English in order to trade with even the Sonth Sea Islanders.

In the matter of buying, there are great opportunities for the Canadian merchant under a system of organization and co-operation.

Persian Lamb Skins

Before the war, the Germans were buying Persian Lamb skins at 10 cents each and selling them to Canadian furriers at $7.50. It will be many years before the supply of Persian Lamb skins is large because the flocks have all been eaten up by the starving people of that part of the world and the high price of food. While the allowance of a British officer for food in other places was one shilling and nine pence a day, in the Persian Lamb country it was one pound a day. Lamb skins which were selling in Canada at $25 could be bought in the bazaars at 25 cents each.

Oriental Rugs

Oriental rugs he believed would go down in value to the original buyers because of the starving condition of the rug making peoples and the many valuable family treasures which were formerly unpurchable will come into the market but that it will not alter the price to the western householder, for the buyers treasure these like the DeBeers do diamonds and will hold them at their real or enhanced value.

There are two classes of Oriental rug makers, the individual shepherd, working in the mountains, and the factory systems in use in Kermanshah Tabriz, etc. where a whole school of children [illegible] work on the rug designed and financed by an American of German firm.

In the same system come the prison rugs of India. Rug making is one means the governments use to make the prisons pay.

But these rugs are almost off the market due to the German firms having been wiped out, the death by starvation of many of these rug makers the uncertainty of financing far ahead into the future, (for many of these rugs take years to make) and the high price of wool.

So intense was the hunger among some of the Persian hill tribes that the children came and picked the grains of oats out of our army horse manure.

In the metal trades there is a great opening in Mesopotamia for the maker of gas engines, water pumps irrigation machinery, plows and gas driven farm implements.

Whether it is a desert or the greatest garden in the world, depends on water; water depends on engineering and at the Anglo-Persian oil works is the ready supply of fuel to run them all.

The farmer of the East from Greece to China depends on the old wooden plow of 2000 years ago. He scratches the surface of the ground four times, but now the agricultural institutes of the British Government is teaching him that one deep plowing with a steel plow will do the same with less labour.

Now the demand in India for American plows is so great that it cannot be met.

The influence of the religion of the Oriental on trade is very great. It effects the tobacco trade, the rug trade, the leather trade, the railways and metal trade, also it is the main influence in the silk trade and production of silk embroidery and fancy work.

In China they have no worry over out fall sewers like they have in Peterborough. Their sanitary system pays a revenue to the city.

Danger to Canadians

There is a lesson for Canadians to learn in studying the nations which have disappeared from the page of history. Mesopotamia once the wealthiest, most civilised and densely populated plain in the world is now almost a desert. All have disappeared—Why? the reply is water. Some day the Canadians may be an

CANADA IS IN ARCTIC GRIP

MARITIME PROVINCES AND BRITISH COLUMBIA ALONE ESCAPE ZERO

PROBS, HOWEVER, HOLD OUT HOPE OF MODERATION IN ONTARIO

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 16.—Practically all Canada, with the exception of the Maritime Provinces and British Columbia, today were in the grip of real Arctic weather embittered at most points by cutting east or north winds. From Edmonton to Quebec the temperature records ranged from seven to forty-six below zero at 8 a.m., Toronto producing the higher mercury and White River holding its record as being the coldest place on the continent. British Columbia and Chinook-favored Calgary were just under or above the freezing point today and the Martime Provinces were promised a taste of cold weather tomorrow.

The probabilities promise some moderation in the weather in some divisions notable Ontario, but as a rule a continuation of the zero spell is expected throughout all Canada excepting the extreme west.

TO DISCHARGE 210 EMPLOYES

AND 45 PERMANENT GAME WARDENS WILL BE APPOINTED INSTEAD

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 16.—Two hundred and ten incumbents in forty-eight counties and districts of the province will be separated from their present salaries and positions in the emipoy of the Provincial Government, by a wholesale reorganigantion of the Game and Fisheries Department which is to be made in the near future by Hon. F. C. Biggs, Minister of Public Works. This [illegible] army of employees are for the most part game overseers and deputy wardens and their total annual salary runs up to almost $100,000 a year. All of them give only [illegible] of their time to the Government and their salaries vary according to the amount of work they do and the extent of territory they cover. These 210 part-time employees are all to be relieved of their positions and in their place will be appointed less than forty-five permanent game officials, who will be expected by the Government to give the whole of their time to the enforcement of the game and fisheries laws of the province.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ALL SAINTS' S.S.

REV. R. B. GROBB IS PRESENTED WITH HANDSOME MARBLE OAK

The annual meeting of All Saints' Sunday School was held on Tuesday evening with the rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, in the chair. Excellent reports were read from the various departments, showing the Sunday School to be in a flourishing condition. The secretary's report showed that the average attendance for the year was 273, while the highest attendance was 396. The treasurer's report indicated a very creditable balance on the right side.

A discussion of the Forward Movement gave promise of still better things, indicating a plan for making the movement felt in every phase of the work.

A happy incident at the close of the meeting consisted in the presentation of a beautiful library clock to the rector on behalf of the teachers and officers of the Sunday School. Mr C. E. Sisson, in making the presentation read a short address, to which Mr. Grobb replied, expressing his surprise and appreciation of the beautiful and useful gift and of the kind thoughts which prompted it.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

FRIDAY, JANUARY 16, 1920.

A GALLOWS AND A JAIL WALL.

THE COUNTY JAIL holds a situation of prominence in one of the most aristocratic residental sections of the city. There is nothing offensive in its presence, however, except upon occasions. Six years ago when Henderson, the condemned murderer, was executed the residents in the vicinity were shocked to see the cross beams of the gallows and at least two feet of the uprights showing above the jail wall. It was a grewsome spectacle which attracted the morbid curiosity of the pupils in the Central School. One of the leading residents took up the matter with the authorities and shields were put up to obstruct the view.

The same difficulty arose this week when the scaffold was erected for the execution of the two Russians. The school children were attracted to the spot and the grim tragedy, the details of which the law designs, shall be kept as far as possible from the public, was the subject of common talk. Inspector Mowat and Mr. R. Fair interested themselves in the matter and the result was the screening of the projecting gallows.

There is a general hope that Peterborough, for the last time, has been the scene of an execution. There is the double chance that the capital punishment law will be repealed by the Dominion Parliament or that all condemned criminals shall be executed at a designated central point. But if there is ever another local hanging the popular aversion to a sight of even a portion of the gallows should be respected. No formal protest on the part of residents or school officials should be necessary.

ONE WAY OUT.

PEOPLE WHO ARE NOT very friendly to the Drury regime in Ontario predict disaster for the new administrator. They claim that it will be impossible for Attorney-General Raney to find a seat and that the Government cannot be carried on without a legal adviser.

A way can be found out of every human tangle. The Legislature can be called together even if Mr. Raney is no longer a member of the Cabinet. The law can be amended so as to make it possible for a farmer member to preside over the legal department. All necessary legal advice could be secured from the outside. There is every prospect that Premier Drury and Minister of Agriculture Doherty will be provided with seats. To find a place for Mr. Raney is a different proposition. However, any difficulty that may be met with in this regard can be easily circumvented and a bona fide member of the U.F.O. may yet be found serving under the name of Attorney-General of Ontario with Mr. Raney acting in a purely private capacity as legal adviser.

CANADA'S PROBLEMS.

THOSE WHO ARE INTERESTED in the financial, industrial and economic welfare of the Dominion will find much that is of an informative and illuminative character in the addresses of the president and the general manager respectively of the Canadian Bank of Commerce delivered at the annual meeting of the shareholders in Toronto on the 13st inst.

Not only are Sir Edmund Walker and Sir John Aird, the president and general manager, respectively, bankers of long experience, but they are as well close students of economic conditions the world over, a quality of mind which has led both to travel extensively at home and abroad, in order to acquire from personal observation as thorough a knowledge as possible of the conditions obtaining. Only within the last few weeks the general manager has returned from an extensive tour of Europe with this particular object in view. Furthermore, in addition to the information which these two executive heads of the Canadian Bank of Commerce are able to acquire from personal study and observation they have at their command that which comes through the reports regularly received from the officials in charge of their various branches and offices in Canada, Great Britain, the United States and Mexico. In all there are over five hundred of these separate and distinct offices, with over four thousand employees.

Sir Edmund Walker's address reveals the fact that he has been during the past year making a close study of every turn and twist in both the mechanism of finance and trade, and in the manifestations of unrest in labor and social circles. And not only has he been a close student of the various phenomena, but has been a sympathetic one as well.

If there is one thing that is the predominating burden of Sir Edmund Walker's remarks it is the importance of Canadians of all sorts and conditions bending their energies to the development of the industrial resources of the country with that same superb spirit of co-operation that they exercised in winning the war.

"We may," he wisely warns us, "lose all that victory seemed to secure by indulgence in countless theories, many of them aiming at the disintegration of society, instead of again co-operating in one ideal—the restoration of order and the improvement of social conditions, so that the happiness of the greater number may be secured . . . . Too much argument between capital and labor, just now, is madness in view of what we seek to save." Truer words were never spoken.

Sir Edmund was equally as sound when he declared that "the rising curve of prices cannot be made to turn downward without an increase of production, nor can we face the heavy obligations left by the war except by greatly increasing productions."

That the obligations of the country are very great there can be no doubt. Our public debt, which was slightly less than $336,000,000 in 1914, will, Sir Edmund shows, be $1,950,000,000 by the close of the present fiscal year, while the annual interest charges on money borrowed abroad now amounts to $190,000,000 of which $135,000,000 is payable in the United Kingdom and $55,000,000 in the United States. This debt, he points out, can only be paid by an excess of exports over imports or by new borrowings. The latter being tantamount to cutting a slice from the top of the blanket for the purpose of making an addition to the bottom. Sir Edmund does not of course, advocate. But that which he does advocate, and that with all the emphasis he can command, is the consumption of Canadian-made goods to the greatest possible extent in order that the import trade may be curtailed and the level of the favorable balance of exports over the latter maintained at the highest possible ratio. He furthermore outlines a list of articles of merchandise in which imports might reasonably be curtailed.

Although Sir John Aird, the general manager, naturally devoted a considerable part of his address to matters relating to the bank, his remarks were by no means confined thereto. On the contrary, he dwelt in an illuminating way on financial and economic subjects in which Canadians are in these days particularly interested. In dealing with the labor problem he showed that he had a thorough grasp of his subject. To the unsettlement of the relations between employer and employee he ascribed in part to the "extraordinary increase in the cost living." At the same time, however, he recognised that the deeper and more complex part of the prevailing difficulties "had their origin in that phase of the war, when it took on the aspect of a life and death struggle between the opposing forces. For a time everything had to be subordinated to the turning out of men, munitions and material for use in the war. The Government became practically almost the sole employer, the erstwhile employer acting as its manager or agent to secure the necessary production. Under these conditions the usual balance-weights and counter-poises of business enterprise were lacking. To secure the necessary production was the only thing that mattered, the cost of doing so was a secondary consideration, and any demands made by employees were granted almost before they were asked."

In speaking of the exchange situation Sir John declared that the rehabilitation of the Canadian dollar in its relation to New York funds could only be accomplished by saving, economy and greater production. The artificial expedients which have been resorted to in order to correct the situation, such as the shipping of gold, the sale of securities, and an attempt at fixing exchange rates, he described as "inadequate and may even prove dangerous."

Referring to the suggestion he made a year ago regarding a bounty on gold productions in Canada, he said this had met with disapproval in certain quarters, "but I still think," he continued, "that the Government should do something in the matter, perhaps not so much by way of offering a bounty on the gold itself, as to encourage the exploration and development of what are supposed to be gold-bearing areas."

THE ROCKFELLER FOUNDATION.

THE FOLLOWING STATEMENT is authorized by George E. Vincent, president of the Rockfeller Foundation:

"Many inquiries are reaching the offices of the Rockefeller Foundation with respect to the policy to be adopted in connection with the aid to Canadian medical education which has been provided by Mr. Rockefeller's recent gift.

"Reports have gained currency to the effect that the Foundation will formally appoint a Canadian commission to act in behalf of the Board. While no meeting of the trustees of the Foundation has been held and no definite decisions have been reached, certain lines of policy may be confidently predicted. The Foundation is not likely to appoint in any formal or official way a special committee for administering the gift to Canada.

"It is true that no program for co-operation in Canada will be adopted by the Foundation until after conference with a large number of prominent Canadians representing all the significant institutional and geographical interests in the Dominion.

"The officers have solicited from a number of Canadians suggestions as to persons with whom conferences should be held. Nothing further has been done and above all no appointments to an official commission have been made or are likely to be made."

FACTS ABOUT CANADA

Last year the vessels built in Canada had a tonnage of 53,912 tons During the year the tonnage of vessels enetred inward and outward at Canadian ports, sea-going and inland, but not including coasting vessels, had a tonnage of 66,802,488 tons. The tonnage of vessels engaged in the coasting trade was 61,462,600, making a total of 128,265,088 tons.

During the year there were built in Canada 116 steam-propelled vessels tonnage, 35,113 tons, and 100 sailing vessels, tonnage 18,799 tons. During the year 63 vessels were sold to other countries, having a value of $5,330,850

In amount of tonnage built the Town of Collingwood on the southern shore of Georgian Bay, Ontario, led with 13,112 tons Most of the vessels were for the Great Lakes trade. In the shipyards at Victoria and Vancouver 4,300 tons were built, and most of the vessels were seagoing.

According to an official census of the dairy industry taken in 1917, the total number of creameries and factories in operation in Canada is 3,418, including 949 creameries, 1,900 cheese factories, 549 combined factories producing both butter and cheese, and 20 condensed milk factories. The total number of patrons is 248,683. The Province of Qubec led in creameries and was a close second to Ontario in cheese factories.

During the year 1917, the wholesale price of creamery butter was 39 cents a pound as compared with 30 cents in 1915. The average wholesale price

Sir William Hearst, ex-Premier of Ontario, is retiring from Public life, but not from public service. At the recent general provincial election his Government was defeated and he lost his seat in the Legislature; and yet, strange to say, the candidates for the Hearst Government polled more votes than did the candidates of either of the two parties opposing that Government. Sir William has accepted that peculiar verdict at the poles and will not re-enter the Legislature.

He has been appointed by the Federal Government a member of the Canadian section of the International Joint Commisson on Boundary Waters organized under the treaty between Great Britain and the United States, signed on January 11, 1909.

The Canadian section consists of three members—Charles A. Magrath, chairman; H. A. Powell, K. C., and until recently, P. B. Mignault, K. C.. Mr. Mignault has been appointed to the bench of the Supreme Court of Canada, and the vacancy thereby created has been filled by the appointment of Sir. William Hearst.

Sir William Hearst is a barrister by profession, and for many years a resident of Sault Ste. Marie. In 1908 he was elected to the Ontario Legislature, and three years afterwards succeeded the late Hon. Frank Cochrane, as Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines in the Whitney Government. On the death of Sir James Whitney in 1915, Sir William Hearst succeeded to the Ontario premiership, which he held until his defate last October.

The Province of Ontario is deeply interested in the work of this commission because the International boundary of the province from Cornwall on the east to the Lake of the Woods on the West, consists of waterways in which Canada and the United States have a joint interest. The appointment of Sir William Hearst is taken to indicate greater activity in the St. Lawrence power and navigation development, as he has been closely associated with the Ontario Government power development.

During 1917 the sum paid to patrons of creameries, cheese factories, and condensed milk factories amounted to $27,500,755. The dairymen of Quebec received the most, namely $10,419,772. Those of Ontario came second with $9,242,126.

According to statistics compiled by the Government the storage capacity of Canadian grain elevators in 1918 was 211,591,800 bushels. There were 1,463 stations and 3,640 elevators.

The present average capacity of railway cars for the carriage of grain is for wheat 1,150 bushels; barley 1,300; flax, 1,100; rye, 1,000.

During the season of navigation of 1918, there were shipped by water from Fort William and Port Arthur, on Lake Superior, 51,215,097 bushels grain, of which more than fifty million bushels went to Canadian ports.

During 1918 the shipments of grain from Fort William and Port Arthur by vessels and all rail route amounted to 157,843,235 bushels, of which 117,162,466 bushels were wheat,

ADMIRAL SIMS SCORES NAVY DEPARTMENT

CRITICIZES THE WHOLE DANIEL ADMINISTRATION ESPECIALLY IN WAR-TME

Washington, Jan. 15.— The feud between Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, and Admiral William Snowden Sims has broken out again with greater intensity.

Admiral Sims has written to Secretary Daniels a second letter, described as thoroughly critical of the Daniels administration from its beginning to the present time, but particularly during the war.

The Admiral is said to arraign the departmental conduct of the navy's part in the war in the most severe fashion, making charges of inefficiency in many respects.

In the first letter written by Admiral Sims he contented himself with criticizing only the policy of Mr. Daniels in making awards to officers for their conduct and accomplishments in the war and with refusing himself the Distinguished Service Medal which the Secretary had given him.

In the present letter which Mr. Daniels today acknowledged having received, Admiral Sims is said to have gone minutely into detail in his criticism of various phases of the Daniels policy throughout the war.

Friends of Admiral Sims are impressed by his courage in so bluntly telling his opinions of the shortcomings of the Navy Department, but they are fearful that he will not escape without being the object of disciplinary action of a drastic sort on the order of the Secretary.

THIS WEAK, NERVOUS MOTHER

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weak condition kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness."—Mrs. J. Worthline, 2842 North Taylor St., Philadelphia Pa.

The majority of mothers nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. Worthline.

THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

Address of the General Manager at the Annual Meeting of the Bank

THE ADDRESS OF SIR JOHN AIRD, GENERAL MANAGER OF THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE, AT THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SHAREHOLDERS, ON THE 13TH INSTANT, WILL BE FOUND OF INTEREST. IT NOT ONLY DEALS WITH THE BUSINESS OF THE BANK DURING THE PAST YEAR, WHICH HAS BEEN THE MOST SUCCESSFUL ONE IN THE HISTORY OF THE INSTITUTION, BUT AS WELL IT IS A REVIEW OF THE BUSINESS OF THE COUNTRY, AND CARRIES WITH IT A SPLENDID MESSAGE TO CANADIAN BUSINESS MEN FOR THE YEAR ON WHICH WE HAVE NOW ENTERED. SIR JOHN SAID:

Contrary to the view expressed last year, that it was unlikely that we should again show such large figures for some years to come, the unexpected has happened, and we have made a new record in both profits and total assets. Undoubtedly the continued high level of prices for commodities of all kinds has left its mark upon the balance sheets of financial institutions, and while this condition continues it will be reflected in the figures of our own annual statement.

Increased Earings.

The net profits have amounted to $3074,000, after a most careful provision for all the doubtful items among the Bank's assets. These earnings exceed those of last year by $224,000, a satisfactory increase of 7,9 per cent., but which compares with an increase of 8.9pe r cent. in assets. The figures [illegible] that the forces which have been steadily reducing the rate of earnings on the services performed by Canadian banks for the public, to which I referred last year, are still actively at work, and it is fervently to be hoped that the keen spirit of competition, so strenuously active in many directions, will not blind Canadian bankers to this tendency of the times. When it is considered that the three million odd dollars that we show as our net profits represent the combined earnings of over 500 offices, and the result of the efforts of a staff of over 4,000 employees, it will be more clearly recognized how meagre is the showing in comparison with the vast amount of hard labor and heavy responsibility involved.

The Pension Fund.

We have paid during the year four quarterly dividends of 3 per cent., or 12 per cent. in all, and now that the war is over and we find it necessary to take up our building programme again, we have resumed our former practice and have written the sum of $250,000 off Bank Premises Account. This is perhaps more necessary now than ever, owing to the extremely high cost of all building operations, which has naturally caused us to limit our programme to only the most necessary work. The release of large numbers of our men from military service, and their return into the service of the Bank, has rendered a large increase necessary in the Bank's contribution to the Pension Fund. This is caused by many of these returned men having, during their absence on military service, reached or passed the age of 25, at which the Bank's contribution to the Pension Fund on their behalf begins. When all arrangements are completed and the question of their back payments to the Fund is settled, a further large sum will no doubt be required to adjust the Bank's contribution for the period of their absence. It is our intention in the very near future to have the Fund again actuarially examined with a view to increasing the limit of the pensions awarded. We have also thought it wise, in view of the unsettled condition of the principal foreign exchanges, to set aside the sum of $750,000 as an appropriation for the continuous decrease in the value of our funds and investments abroad. We could, of course, offset this shrinkage by writing up the value of our investments in the United States, but as to realize the increased valde we should have to liquidate our business in that country we have not attempted to adopt such a short-sighted policy. We have also to consider that the exchange situation between Canada and the United States will right itself automatically when the European exchanges become more normal, and we think that the policy we have followed is one that should commend itself to every conservatively managed institution.

Patriotic Subscriptions.

As usual, we ask you to confirm the larger subscriptions we have been called on to make during the year, amounting to the sum of $22,000, almost all on behalf of the objects of a patriotic character connected with the war.

There has been a decrease in our note circulation for the first time since the commencement of the war. The decrease is only $1,536,000, but if it is one of the first signs of a check to the inflation of prices, it is not unwelcome. The increase in deposits of $40,446,000 is the striking item of our statement, and it has taken place almost entirely in the more stable item of deposits bearing interest. The decreases in balances due to foreign banks and in bills payable are almost offset by the increase in acceptances under letters of credit, and none of these changes possess any special significance, save only that the increase in the use of letters of credit indicates a revival of foreign trade as a result of the ending of the war.

Increased Cash Assets.

On the assets side of the statement we show an increase of $1,899,000 in cash on hand. The change is more than accounted for by the increase in Dominion notes held, there having been a slight decrease in our holdings of coin. Dominion notes in the Central Gold Reserves are $1,000,000 lower, corresponding to the decrease in our note circulation. There is a decrease of about $1,400,000 in the item of cheques on other banks, which may indicate a slight lessening in the activity of general business, but an increase in bank balances, which leaves the combined total of notes and cheques and bank balances $1,132,000 greater than the figures of last year. There has been an increase in our call and short loans in Canada and a decrease in those elsewhere, the combined effect of all these changes in assets being that our quick or easily realizable assets have increased by $16,892,000, and stand at 49.11 per cent of our liabilities to the public. Our holdings of Dominion and Provincial Government securities have increased $10,700,000 during the year, largely represented by our share of advances to the Dominion Government, which are being repaid out of the proceeds of the last Victory Loan. Current commercial loans, that is, those current loans not classified as "call and short loans," both in Canada and elsewhere, show considerable increases, amounting to $20,827,000 in all, which may be considered as another welcome indication of reviving commercial activity. We have disposed of the Eastern Townships Bank building in Montreal during the year, and this accounts for the reduction in Real Estate other than Bank Premises. The increase in Bank Premises Account is due principally to the acquirement of sites for a number of our newer branches, in pursuance of our general policy in this respect. The total of our assets has grown during the year by $39,323,000, or 8.9 per cent., which, under the circumstances, we consider satisfactory.

New Branches.

Throughout the war the Canadian banks abstained, by common consent, from the opening of new branches. Not only was this justified by the uncertainty of the outlook but the drain upon the manhood of the country for military service was so great that it was only with difficulty that those members of our staff who were left behind were able to cope with the work thrust upon them, even with the assistance of the temporary staff. Accordingly, while the conflict lasted we could do no more than to keep a record of those places which seemed to offer a promising field, with a view to occupying them when the general situation justified such a step. The programme thus laid down has fully employed our energies during the past year, but is fairly well completed and now that we have occupied most of the promising new fields in Canada that have been brought to our attention, and have protected our business at those points where such action seemed necessary, we purpose turning our attion to foreign fields. In the mean time the new branches we have opened are, most of them, progressing satisfactorily, and although the initial expenses connected with them are heavy we look to see them become before long a source of strength and profit.

The Bank's Taxes.

Some years ago, after the outbreak of the war, we took occasion to refer to the subject of taxes paid by the Bank, and advised you that the total was about $650,000. It will no doubt be of interest to you to know that the sum taken out of the profits of the Bank during the past year, and applied to the payment of taxes, was nearly double that amount, or over $1,200,000. We have thought it well to speak thus frankly because the opinion seems to be more or less widely held that banks do not bear their fair share o fthe burdens of general taxation.

Out of the total of 1704 officers of this Bank who volunteered for the defence of the Empire, either in the army or navy, we have reinstated during the course of the year 996 and have still to hear from 253 of them. We have been glad to welcome these officers back to our service, and will do all in our power to assist them to become re-established in civil life. It is our hope that in the course of a reasonably short time they will find themselves at no disadvantage as a result of the loss in banking experience which naturally resulted from their absence. The opening of new branches and the expansion of our business have made it possible to take on the staff again all those who apply for reinstatement.

Employer and Employee.

An unlooked-for consequence of the war has been the unsettlement of the relations between employer and employed in every walk of life. On of the primary causes of this has been the extraordinary increase in the cost of living, but any one who is forced to grapple with the problems before the employer knows that this can be the cause of only a small part of his difficulties. The deeper and more comple part of them, no doubt, had their origin in that phase of the war, when it took on the aspect of a life and death struggle between the opposing forces. For a time everything had to be subordinated to the turning out of men, munitions and material for use in the war. The Government became, practically, almost the sole employer, the erstwhile employer acting as its manager or agent to secure the necessary production. Under these conditions the usual balance-weights and counterpoises of business enterprise were lacking. To secure the necessary production was the only thing that mattered; the cost of doing so was a secondary consideration, and any demands made by employees were granted almost before they were asked. Thus new conditions arose, some showing marked improvement over those existing before the war, but others such as are foredoomed to failure if put into practice under the usual conditions of peace. It is, perhaps, too much to ask of either employees or employers that they should at once grasp with a clear mental vision all the far-reaching consequences of these changes. Suffice it to say that the adjustments necessary now that business conditions have become more normal are many and difficult, and involve to the utmost a spirit of fairness and a willingness to compromise opposing points of view on both sides. Speaking for our own staff, both permanent and temporary, they have rendered us loyal service in difficult days, and we have sought to give generous and sympathetic consideration to the difficulties which have been practicularly their lot, as salaried men and women, during an extraordinary rise in the cost of living.

The 1919 Victory Loan.

In November last the Canadian Government issued its sixth War Loan, the money being required for purposes connected with the transition from war to peace. The Minister of Finance, Sir Henry Drayton, again asked for a minimum of $300,000,000, and the total subscriptions received were $676,242,790, almost as much as subscribed to the previous loan. The Minister of Finance, and the country itself, are to be congratulated most heartily upon this new demonstration of the financial strength of Canada. There was a large reduction in the number of subscribers, the total number being 789,532, as compared with 1,140,057 in the case of the 1918 loan, so that the average amount subscribed was considerably larger, being $857, as against $610. It is interesting to note, as showing the popularity of the Victory Loans among small subscribers, that in the case of the 1917 loan $160,300,000, and in the case of the 1918 loan $104,500,000, was issued in $50 and $100 bonds. The corresponding figures for the 1919 loan are not yet available, and owing to the reduction in the number of subscribers the total will probably not be so great, but it is evident that about $300,000,000 of the last three loans has been obtained in this way.

Encourage Exploration.

When addressing you last year I ventured to express the opinion that the Government could afford to grant a small bounty on the production of the gold mines in Canada, with a view to increasing the available supply of the precious metal. This opinion has met with disapproval in some quarters, but I still think that the Government should do something in the matter, perhaps not so much by way of offering a bounty on the gold itself as to encourage the exploration and development of what are supposed to be gold-bearing areas. Were the same course to be followed in the case of silver, it is possible that the discovery of new fields and the opening of new mines might exercise a very beneficial steadying effect on the price of that metal. The extension of the output of the present mines is, of course, encouraged by the material enhancement in price which has taken place. According to figures made public some time ago, the price per ounce rose during last year from an average of $1.01.12 during the first four months to $1.27.92 in November.

Depreciated Exchange.

The condition of the foreign exchanges is one of the problems with which we have had to deal during the past year, and it is one in which the people of Canada are deeply concerned, as it has a very direct effect upon their economic life. Canada is not alone in suffering from the effects of a depreciated exchange; in fact, it is a condition now familiar to almost every country in the world. The artificial expedients which have been resorted to in order to correct the situation, such as the shipping of gold, the sale of securities and an attempt at fixing exchange rates, are inadequate and may even prove dangerous. The rehabilitation of our dollar can only be accomplished by saving, economy and greater production. It has perhaps become fairly generally known among those who take an interest in the matter that our imports from the United States greatly exceed our exports to that country, and that in the case of Great Britain the reverse is true, our exports greatly exceeding our imports. Therefore in the case of our trade with the United States there is a scarcity of bills receivable which we can set off against our bills payable to that country; while in the case of our trade with Great Britain the reverse is true, and the bills receivable exceed the bills payable to such an extent that she has been forced to obtain credit from us for many of her purchases of foodstuffs produced in Canada.

Foreign Credits.

There is much more, however, in the situation than this. We have been selling on credit to France, Belgium, Greece, Roumania, and to some extent to Great Britain, manufactured goods, the raw materials of which are largely imported from the United States, and we are called upon to pay for these raw materials in cash. In addition to this, the interest payments on our debt abroad have increased, as well as the heavy shipping charges which have to be paid on water-borne good. In paying for the raw materials referred to we are forced to use up a large part of those funds ordinarily available to defray the cost of our normal imports from the United States. The scarcity of United States funds has thus been accentuated by the increased demand, while the source from which we have been wont in the past to make up any deficiencies, that is, the balance due to us by merchants and others in Great Britain, is not now available for this purpose for two reasons: first, that Great Britain is not settling in cash as in the past; second, that such part of this indebtedness as might be made available for the purpose is not now acceptable to the United States as payment, because that country has already a surplus of British debts which she is anxious to realize. If to these factors in the problem be added the effect of increased purchases of luxuries imported from the United States in the present era of free and easy spending, an idea will be obtained of at least some of the main reasons for the present situation.

British Imports.

It should not be forgotten in any discussion of the position of the foreign exchanges as affecting Canada, that so far as imports to the country are concerned the position of the British and Continental exchanges is just as favorable as United States exchange is unfavorable. The difficulty in this case is one of supply. Judging by recent accounts, however, Great Britain is bending all her energies, in spite of labor troubles and other adverse circumstances, to resuming her place as an exporting nation, and now that the difficulty of securing vessel space is decreasing, we shall hope to see a decided increase, in the near future, in imports from the mother country of those goods of which we stand in need, and which cannot be produced at home.

Buy in Canada.

On the other hand, in our relations with the United States we should aim to decrease our imports, especially of those articles which are merely luxuries, or which can be produced equally well at home. The position of exchange at this moment is a lesson that our dollars can be more advantageously expended for a home-made article than for one manufactured in the United States, and it is to be hoped that this practical lesson will not be lost upon our people. Its influence should be strengthened by merchants and importers discontinuing to import for consumption in Canada such unnecessary articles as we have referred to.

To sum up, then, there is no royal road to the rectification of the foreign exchange. Hard work and self-denial, such as will increase our income as a nation, and decrease our expenditure, are the only sovereign remedies for the disease. Harder work and greater diligence are needed to increase production, and self-denial implies the cessation of purchases of imported articles which are only luxuries or can be produced at home. We doubt, however, whether aught save stern necessity can enforce these conditions upon our people.

GOVERNMENT'S ROAD POLICY IS APPROVED

DOMINION GOOD ROADS COMMISSION WILL SUPPORT BIGGS' PLAN

Ottawa, Jan. 15.—The new road policy of the Ontario Government, as outlined by Hon. F. C. Biggs, Minister of Highways, to the Dominion Good Roads Commission, has received the fullest approval of that body. The conference lasted all day, and the entire personnel of the Dominion Commission was present.

Seen after the conference rose at 6 o'clock last evening, Hon. Mr. Biggs stated:

"After a conference which lasted all day with the Dominion Good Roads Commission, I am pleased to say that the board has approved of the new road policy of the Ontario Government in its entirety.

"We have not yet, of course, submitted all the details of our plan, but on my return to Toronto immediate steps will be taken to furnish the board with maps of our new proposed highways and also to show the expenditure we propose to make during the present year, and also for each of the next five years.

"We will also furnish details as to each public road work to be undertaken, with estimates of the cost, as fast as these can be prepared.

"The Province has come to a complete understanding with the Dominion and is now in a position to avail itself of the Dominon road grant in its entirety."

Hon. Mr. Biggs was asked if he had any statement to make as to criticism which appeared in the Ottawa newspapers from the Mayor of Ottawa, Mr. Harold Fisher, to the effect that a water-bound macadam road was not good enough for the Ottawa-Prescott highway. Mr. Biggs said he had nothing to say in particular. When traffic and upkeep cost justified it, more permanent roads would be built. He cited at the conference, he added, that of the 1,600 miles of roads it was proposed to build, some 100 miles would require concrete construction from the first on account of special conditions governing these stretches along the Provincial highway. Mr. Biggs left for Toronto last night.

That the city of Ottawa will not be satisfied with any construction for the Prescott-Ottawa highway which will not be of such permanency as to provide for motor traffic, is the opinion of Mayor Fisher.

The city voted $180,000 as its share for the road, and the understanding was that the road would be such as to adequately stand up under heavy motor traffic.

The mayor hopes that Hon. F. C. Biggs, Minister of Public Woks and Highways for the Ontario Government, will favor a permanent road, but if he does not, the mayor says, the action the city will take will be considered by the Board of Control and City Council.

"SLAIN BOY" RETURNS, BUT YEARS TOO LATE

HIS STEPFATHER, ACCUSED OF YOUTH'S MURDER, DIED INSANE

Clarion, Pa., Jan. 15.—Clarion County brings forth a tale from life that rivals most of the "big sellers." At the same time a "murder" mystery of 1884 is cleared up, and the good name of the "murderer," Samuel Keaster, re-established, not, however, until after he had been committed to an insane asylum and had died with people believing him guilty.

Keaster lived on a farm between Callensburg and Knox in the early '80s, having married a widow with two sons. In 1884, when one of the boys was 12 years old and the other 10, they disappeared, and no trace of them could be found.

Word went abroad that Keaster had killed the boys and made away with the bodies. The accusation so preyed on Keaster that he lost his reason and was conveyed to the asylum at Warren.

There he told the keeper that he had murdered one of his stepsons and, becoming fearful lest the other tell of the deed, had likewise killed him. The bodies, he declared, he had buried in a garden. Search was made, but they were never found. Keaster died some years ago.

Recently a man appeared in the neighborhood inquiring for Keaster. The stranger proved to be one of the supposedly murdered boys. He explained his disappearance and that of his brother by saying they had run away, going West. They found employment in the lumber region of the Northwest. The younger boy was killed five years after they left home.

The older boy had grown to manhood without ever having heard from home, and he decided to spend the Christmas of 1919 in his native village, only to find his relatives had died in the meanwhile, one with a stain on his name.

MAY MEAN MUCH TO WORLD

Aviators Believe That Flying Is Bound to Have Great Influence on the Minds of Men.

Flying, in the opinion of British aviators, is going to change the character of the world's thought. It will have a broadening influence and it will bring a fresher, cleaner flow of ideas into the brains of men.

A man, the flyers argue, who has seen before him at the same time the cliffs of England, the long flat fields of Holland and the smiling countryside of Belgium and France is bound to think in a different way than a man whose horizon has always been bounded by bricks and mortar, or even by hill and dale.

Traveling may have made him think nationally, but flying will make him think far more largely. He will see England and France lying close to each other, separated only by a shining strip of water. He will see the green and brown mosaic of Belgium, which in its turn merges into the distant shadow of Holland, while, still farther on, across the wide Scheldt he will see the distant lowlands sweep on over the rim of the world.

How will he regard petty spites between individuals and cliques then? the birdman asks. He can cover with his thumb from the heights a feverish city swarming with a million people. What will he think of those who live next to each other and will not speak? How mean and petty their quarrels and jealousies and hates will seem.

The true meaning of human intercourse and friendship will come home to him. He will gain an almost divine outlook upon the world. Dishonesty, civil strife, all will seem to him contemptible. Perhaps, say the aviators, this is the new view which will bring the millennium.

700 White Muslin Under Garments 700

Much Under Factory Prices

SELLING STARTS SATURDAY

Here is a January Sale event that without any question means a saving of money to all who take advantage of it. We were fortunate enough to be offered all the factory samples of a famous maker of ladies' and children's white muslin underwear. This maker's goods are sold from coast to coast and are known throughout the trade for their genuine good quality. The factory samples are those he kept in the factory as a standard, and every garment turned out had to measure up to them. These samples are more or less mussed, and in some cases slightly soiled from handling, but a visit to the laundry will make them as bright, crisp and fresh as though they just came out of the boxes. Because of the mussed and soiled condition, the prices are much below regular price on every garment. It will pay you and pay you well to buy now for next summer's use. Over 700 garments to sell. On sale Saturday morning on the Ready-to-Wear Floor.

KAISER WAS BRUTAL.

Very Candid Criticism by a Former Friend.

Capt. Lothan Persius, German Naval Attache at Washington for a number of years long before the war, and subsequently Germany's leading naval critic, devotes a good deal of space in his "Personal Reminiscences" to acrid ridicule of the once sacred person of the Kaiser, and to advocacy of the proposition that German officers guilty of atrocities should be punished. Perhaps nothing written by a prominent German since the war ended so amazingly illustrates the apparent change in the point of view of at least some Germans, says the Berlin correspondent of the New York Sun. Of the Kaiser, Capt. Persius says:

"There are no great men in the eyes of their valets. William II. never was a great man in the eyes of anybody, although he was ever assuming a heroic pose, whether the occasion was solemn or ridiculous. But William II. in the eyes of his valets and attendants was not only not great, he was even contemptibly small, mean and cowardly, enjoying the humiliation, degradation and pain he inflicted upon those in his power.

"With my own eyes I have seen him dash the contents of a half-filled champagne glass into the face of an admiral who happened to be standing near him on the bridge of a vessel. I saw him scrape the caviar off his sandwich and fling the mass into the eyes of some officer of rank unfortunately within reach of the imperial 'joker.' Of course, all these 'pranks' were perpetrated when his Majesty was in a state of intoxication, which at times happened to occur early in the morning.

"A cruiser was at target practice. William II. was on board, the sun smiling, the weather calm and beautiful. William II happened to be in the 'best' of humor. With his strong right hand he was dealing blows right and left, as he was wont to do on occasions like this. His favorites considered themselves fortunate when they received an imperial punch.

"On the bridge his body surgeon was standing, leaning backward against the railing. The old man, a general in rank, seemed to be tired from standing. He was leaning heavily upon the railing, bending backward and dreamily looked into the sky.

"Suddenly William II. sprang in front of the old man and in a most cruel and indecent manner (by hitting the old man a violent blow in a tender spot) inflicted terrible pain. In doing this the Emperor said something vulgar which I, standing several paces away from him, could not fully understand.

The poor old general staggered. One could tell by the expression of his face that he was half mad from pain. He held on to the railing with his hands, and half fainting sank upon his knees.

"The Emperor, proud of his splendid 'joke,' laughed vehemently. But when he saw the result his practical joke had he merely turned away, without a word of apology. The old surgeon was no longer persona grata. He had winced while receiving an imperial favor!

"The bridge of the vessel was crowded with officers of high rank and other dignitaries. While the Emperor was talking to some one his adjutant, an admiral, happened to turn his back. Immediately the imperial right fist shot out and hit the admiral in the small of the back—a powerful blow.

"The admiral was stunned and reeled while the Kaiser made a sneering, filthy remark which cannot be repeated in print. All the officers, diplomats, bluejackets ad attendants heard the Kaiser's remarks, for he shouted, and all the men of course were grinning while the admiral was doubled up with pain.

"It was a nauseating spectacle to me. Slowly and gradually many things have become known of late—things that throw a sinister light upon dark passages. The Emperor blames the generals, claiming they acted contrary to his orders; the son accuses Ludendorff and Tirpitz; Tirpitz accuses Bethmann-Hollweg and the latter accuses the former in turn.

"For instance, if Wilhelm is right the execution of Miss Cavell was ordered by a general who happened to be drunk. Well, why has this general not been tried? Where are state tribunals? If it does not try this general or if it merely whitewashes him, we ought to thank our enemies for cleaning up, even only in part, the Augean stable we ourselves failed to clean."

Buried by State.

In some cantons of Switzerland all the dead, rich as well as poor, are buried at the public expense.

Getting It Straight.

"Does Cholly live on the avenue?"
"No. Cholly lives on his father who lives on the avenue."

Daily Optimistic Thought.

The greatest truths are commonly the simplest.

For a Lion Hunter.

A good motor road, thirty-seven miles long, stretches in nearly a straight line to Masunga, as Liebig's ranch is called, and where this old and well-known firm, established in 1865, is breeding cattle, on a colossal scale, says a writer in the Johannesburg (Transvaal) Sunday Times. Liebig's Territory—if I may so call it—comprises 1,200,000 acres of ground, and is situated in the Gwanda, Chibi and Belingwe districts of Matabeleland. Liebig's have a lion hunter who travels about all by himself to destroy these vermin. He never takes any one—even a Kaffir with him, and from the numbers of lion skins which adorn the floors of the houses at Masunga, he must have some rare sport. Not a skin that I saw had a bullet wound except in the head, as "Yank" thinks the surest way to bag a lion is to wait until he is from three to eight paces from him, and then he gives him what a Boer would call a "Kopskoot." "Yank," or to call him by his real name, Mr. Allen, gets £5 for every lion he kills, and £5 for the skin if he chooses to sell it to the company, and from the number of lion skins I saw lying about I should say his is rather profitable employment. I have no doubt that with the railway which is bound to be built shortly, Masunga will be one of the show places of South Africa.

Soap in Shanghai.

There is a big demand for soap in Shanghai, over 100 brands of laundry soap being in use, 35 made in China from the abundant native fats and oils, 20 in Great Britain, 5 in America, 4 in Japan, 2 in France and 1 German brand made locally.

Chins.

Square chins, with little flesh, denote firmness and executive ability.

Broad chins signify dignity, unless vertically thin, when, if with it there be thin lips of the bloodless kind, you find cruelty.

Protruding chins characterize men and women of the forceful type. Successful people usually carry their chins thrust forward, with compressed lips.

Retreating chins show lack of force mentally, morally and physically, and denote that the possessor yields, is soon discouraged, and desires protection. The development of other faculties often makes up for this defect.

Long chins are poetical, unstable, and delicate in constitution. People having them are said to be subject to internal derangements.

Short chins show a great love of order and detail—"a place for everything and everything in its place" type of person.—Answers.

Sugar Beet Harvester.

Sugar beets are dug, topped and loaded in record time by a new power-driven machine, whose gasoline engine propels as well as operates it. The driver's seat is in front, and a tiller takes the place of a steering wheel. The beets are lifted out of the ground by a fork, thrown on a chain conveyor, and carried to the rear, where the tops are removed. Another conveyor takes them to the bins, which hold the product of one acre. Three acres are harvested, it is claimed, in the time it takes ten men to work one acre.—Popular Mechanics.

extinct nation—Why? the reply will be fuel. Trees, trees everywhere and not a stick to burn. The fuel problem is the most serious one in our national struggle for existance. All others are merely the embellishments of civilization. In Canada fuel is the sine quanon of existence.

In Peterborough we are surrounded by more forests than almost any other Canadian city and yet if a Russian in Pennsylvania says he will not dig coal for us of a Swedish railway says he won't bring it to us we must perish with cold.

We need a fuel commission in Peterborough made of the biggest brains we have in the city, who will always have for us one winter's supply of fuel ahead, otherwise we may one day be like other peoples of the earth—an extinct race.

On motion of Dr. E. E. Harvey, Dr Frederickk was tendered a hearty vote of thanks for his interesting lecture

THEY SIT AND WAIT.

Synatin, formerly a thriving village in Eastern Galicia, now a ruined town belonging to Roumania, is the worst spot in all Europe, according to Leo Wolfson, New York attorney and journalist, who recently returned from seven weeks spent in studying political conditions in Eastern Europe.

"Of all the suffering I saw during my trip through Europe, poor, wretched Synatin will always remain imprinted upon my memory as the most heart-rending and most harrowing of all," declared Mr. Wolfson, "Never did I encounter misery so deep and poverty so wretched as in this remnant of ruins, which reminds one of a cemetery.

"The few persons one happens to see, barring the soldiers, sit dejectedly on their doorsteps, gazing at the sky and waiting for salvation from there. Perhaps, too, they are waiting for the Angel of Death to come and release them from their too heavy burdens."

An old Jewish patriarch whom Mr. Wolfson met on the street, described the town in these tragic words: "The few persons left living would be better off dead. God forgive me for such words."

The teacher Sandig, Jewish leader of the community, told Mr. Wolfson how the Russian army had driven out several thousand Jewish families, how 500 families have not enough to live through a single day and that the coming winter would undoubtedly wipe out the entire Jewish population.

"We have no strength left to suffer; forgotten by God and the world, it is our bitter lot to perish here of hunger and cold." The old teacher wept as he recited to Mr. Wolfson the tales of suffering of the most tragic town in all Europe. "The help we have received has just sufficed to keep body and soul together. If not for that, no one would be alive here to-day. Many families have died.

"Practically every Jew is in need of help. There are few who can help themselves. There is no work, trade is at a standstill. We have no money with which to buy stock, and then there is no one to sell to. We are in need of everything, food, shoes and above all raw materials. If we could get raw materials, we would have something to work upon and could perhaps earn something," the old teacher concluded.

Tapa Cloth.

The decorative material known as tapa cloth is in reality not cloth at all, says M. O. C. Crawford in Asia. It is a form of paper. In the South Sea Islands it is made from the pounded bark of the paper mulberry, but it occurs in some form in every tropical country in the world. In the jungles of Brazil, in the steaming swamps of Africa, natives still make tapa. The ancient Aztec and Mayas and Egyptians, the early inhabitants of China and Japan, had learned the use of tapa in its modern form of paper to convey literary thought as well as artistic efforts. And in Mexico and the Chinese republic it still holds its early usage in offering a simple and easily decorated material for ceremonial costumes.

DAD! YOUR HAIR IS FALLING FAST

"Danderine" will check that ugly dandruff and stop hair coming out

To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair usually stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff. Soon every hair on your scalp shows new life, vigor, brightness, thickness and more color.

HISTORY OF EPIDEMICS.

Why People Call Disease Influenza or Grippe.

Influenza is a very ancient disease, Dr. Francis Heckel write in l'Illustration (Paris), that it was formerly classed as one of the "pests" or plagues under which name all grave epidemics were known by our remote ancestors, who did not yet differentiate between typhus, diphtheria, pneumonia, and bubonic plague, cerebro-spinal meningitis, "grippe" and other diseases. Each of these has its distinctive symptoms, but all of them possess characteristics in common, and even to-day physicians often find it difficult to make a certain diagnosis until the malady is well developed.

The history of influenza epidemics is well established since the fifth century of the Christian era. For fifteen hundred years it has returned regularly from five to ten times a century, except in the eighteenth, when it showed itself in the years 1709-10, 1729-30, 1732-33, 1737-38, 1742-43, 1757-58, 1761-62, 1768, 1775-76, 1780-82, 1788-89, 1799-1800.

The nineteenth century was exceptionally free, having had only light epidemics of influenza. The last of these, however, that of 1889, returned every winter until 1895, thus persisting for about six years.

The name "influenza" dates from 1742, when it was given to the epidemic in Italy; at the same time the name "grippe" was given to it in France. The term "facies grippe" had been used before to describe the thin, drawn face, with sunken eyes and waxy skin, bearing every sign of depression and exhaustion. This face is seen whenever the sympathetic nervous system and the suprarenal glands are deeply touched by an infection. From this term the word "grippe" was derived.

Dr. Heckel says the term "Spanish fever" or "Spanish influenza," given to the epidemic in 1918, is quite incorrect, for that epidemic, like all others, was born where it is always prevalent — that is to say, Russia, Turkestan and the surrounding regions.

There is no doubt about the microbic origin of influenza, but it is certain that the microbes that cause it have not been discovered. All those that have been suspected, including the Pfeiffer bacillus, are merely the agents of the secondary complications and are the habitual guests of our nasal passages and throat. They are no trouble to healthy, strong persons, but once the system is enfeebled by lack of nourishment, cold, etc., then they begin their ravages.

Recent experiments by Dr. Trillat, of the Pasteur Institute, show that the very air we breathe serves as a medium in which the invisible microbes of influenza flourish when it contains certain gases of organic origin, such as the exhaled human breath contains in great quantities.

Etiquette of Walking.

When in the street, especially in daytime, a lady is not supposed to take a gentleman's arm, unless she is infirm or elderly, though she may properly do so at night. When walking with two ladies a gentleman may walk on the outside, or the inside, or, rather, the side from which he can best guard his companion or companions from obstacles or danger. It is not good form to take a lady's arm, unless to assist her in some way.

Will Human Race Die Out?

From the recorded facts extending over nearly three centuries, it is found that in 1610 the average height of a man in Europe was 1.75 metres, or, say, five feet nine inches, while in 1790 it was only five feet six inches, says Spare Moments. In 1820 it was five feet five inches and a fraction. At the present time it is five feet three inches and three-quarters. It is easy to deduce from these figures a rate of regular decline in human stature, and to apply this, working backwards and forwards, to the past and to the future.

By this calculation it is determined that the stature of the first man attained the surprising average of six feet nine inches. Truly, there were giants on the earth in those days. The race had already deteriorated in the days of Og, and Goliath was quite a degenerate offspring of the giants. Coming down to later times, we find that, at the beginning of our era, the average height of man was nine feet; and, in the time of Charlemagne, it was eight feet eight inches.

But the most astonishing result of this scientific study comes from the application of the same inexorable law of diminution to the future. The calculation shows that by the year 4000 A.D. the stature of the average man will be reduced to fifteen inches. At that epoch there will be only Lilliputians on the earth.

"Aluminum" or "Aluminium"?

The Oxford Dictionary says that "aluminum" was the name given the metal by Sir Humphrew Davy in 1812. As late as 1879, Cassell's Technical Educator used the original spelling, "aluminum." "Alumium," says the Oxford Dictionary, was "the name first suggested by Davy for the metal which he finally called 'aluminium'." In 1854, Pereira said in his "Materia Medica," that "alumium, aluminium, or alumium, is the metallic base of the earth alumina." In 1812, the year in which Davy christened the metal, the Quarterly Review said: "Aluminium, for so we shall take the liberty of writing the word, in preference to aluminum, which has a less classical sound." Apparently it was the Quarterly Review which took upon itself the authority to change the spelling from that adopted by the coiner of the word. The spelling "aluminum" was carried to America, and has not been changed.

Washington Monument.

From floor of shaft to apex, the Washington monument is 555 feet 5⅛ inches high; the shaft itself is 500 feet 5⅛ inches, the small pyramid which tops the shaft being 55 feet. The base is 55 feet 1⅛ inches square. The walls are 15 feet thick at the base of the shaft and taper to 18 inches thick at the top.

Baker's Dozen.

In most countries 13 is always spoken of as "the baker's dozen," but in Italy it is called "a cobbler's dozen." There is a tradition in that land that formerly there was a law compelling cobblers to put 12 nails around the edge of a boot heel, and that when nails were cheap a thirteenth nail was driven in the center for luck.

IDEAL ICE IS ASSURED FOR TONIGHT'S INTERMEDIATE GAME

Both the Petes and Lindsay Claim the Hard Ice and Larger Rink Will be an Advantage to Them.

Don't miss this opportunity of seeing the hockey match of a lifetime at the Brock street rink tonight when the Lindsay intermediates invade this city in an endeavor to get revenge for the locals' victory over them by one goal on their own ice. Since that battle the Lindsay crew have defeated Cannington twice, and their experience, they claim, will be enough to turn the tables tonight.

The Petes don't think so. They say the hard ice and their own rink will give them the advantage they need to gain the victory by a substantial margin. Tonight's hard ice will certainly give the locals a chance to use their speed and machine-like combination, but the Lindsay squad are fast as well as heavy, and claim they will have a great advantage on the large, harder ice.

The only thing that is assured for tonight's fixture is that it will be a battle royal from start to finish, and a large crowd is expected to brave the cold and come out to see one of the best games of the season.

WILL SHIP REDS TO RUSSIA THIS WEEK

FIVE-HUNDRED AND SITY-FOUR NOW AWAIT DEPORTATION

New York, Jan. 15.— Movements of revolutionists from all parts of the country to Ellis Island for deportation are being conducted in secret. Some time this week, it is believed, a transport, with a cargo of rabid aliens will leave New York for port in Soviet Russia.

Thirty-five "Reds" apprehended in the nationwide raid directed against the Federation of Russian Workers by Chief William J. Flynn, of the Department of Justice, on November 7, arrived from Detroit yesterday and were lodged in the detention pen on Ellis Island. The men, whose cases have been passed on by the Department of labor, were to have been deported with Berkman, Miss Goldman and 247 others aboard the Buford, but were detained for non-payment of income taxes for 1918. The new arrivals are violent revolutionists of the worst type who sought to paralyse industry in the Middle West by a general strike.

The Ellis Island authorities now hold 564 aliens for deportation. The immigration authorities have completed examinations in about 100 cases and in most of these deportion warrants have already been issued. Before the next vessel carrying deportees leaves for Soviet Russia, the 400 "Reds" will be sent to New York. These radicals have expressed a willingness to return to Russia.

Many Decline to Talk.

Byron H. Uhl, Acting Commissioner, said that he had received no instructions regarding the second boat load of radicals. He declared that sixty of the Communists picked up in the recent raid by the Department of Justice had answered all the preliminary questions and that their examinations were completed. The others decline to talk until allowed to consult their attorneys.

The decision of Judge John C Knox in the United States District Court in regard to bail for Gregorivitch, Weinstein, "chancellor" of Marten's Soviet Breau, is expected today. Weinstein, whose friendship with Trotsky has made him an important figure in the revolutionary movement here, refused to answer any questions unless he was represented by counsel. Under the regulations of the Bureau of Immigration, an alien is not entitled to counsel until he has answered a set or preliminary questions.

Rose Weiss, a lawyer associated with Charles Recht as counsel for the "reds" held at the island, offered bail of $62,000 for the release of sixty-two of the clients. It was refused by the authorities because they explained the examination had not been completed.

EUGENE O'BRIEN IN "THE PERFECT LOVER"

HANDSOME STAR PLAYS LEADING PART IN PICTURE AT EMPIRE NEXT WEEK

Eugene O'Brien, the screen's handsomest and most popular actor, makes his debut as a star in "The Perfect Lover," a Selznick Pictures production and a story particluarly adapted to his talents.

"The Perfect Lover," which will be seen on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at the Empire Theatre, is an adaptation of Leila Burton Wells' famous novel, "The Naked Truth," and a Ralph Ince production.

It is the story of Brian Lazar, a young artist, who dreams of a career as a painter of beauty. Mrs. Byfield, a strikingly beautiful, love-starved woman in search of sensation, is attracted by a picture of a lovely, charming country girl which Brian has painted. She is informed by the master of the school that the boy's genius may be wasted because he has not enough money to proceed with the calling of his choice.

Mrs. Byfield is impressed with the boy. She realizes that now is her opportunity to have what before she has been denied—the friendship and devotion of a dreamer—young, handsome and idealistic. She takes him to the city, where a start is made possible for him on an advance from her husband. He paints her picture and becomes the vogue among society women, not because of his painting, but because of his good looks and charm. He is the "perfect lover."

After many months of living in an atmosphere of incense among leaning women, with weary eyes and insatiable lips—women whose husbands have no time to be lovers—he rebels. He returns to the small country town and marries the little country girl whose picture brought him fame.

But he has forgotten how to work. Here he is not a craze. People do not adopt him as they did in the city. Fate plays a pretty mean hand until—well, see the handsomest man on the screen in "The Perfect Lover" and learn what happened to him and his girl wife.

No Banks In Mexico.

Since 1914 Mexico has been without banks of any sort within the meaning of the law of 1897. There are at present, it is true, a number of private banking institutions, but their activities are limited almost entirely to the issuance, purchase and sale of foreign exchange and to some few commercial credit transactions.

Czar Planned Treachery

MUCH has been said about the plans of a separate peace which Czar Nicholas, under the influence of his Prussianised court, intended to conclude with the Central Powers, with a view to saving his throne and dynasty from collapse. The Pester Lloyd, a prominent German newspaper published at Budapest, the Hungarian capital, not long ago published an article purporting to contain authentic particulars of these separate peace offers. The article, reprinted in London, says:

"On October 16, 1916, the Russian Court informed Vienna and Berlin through a neutral channel that as Russia's efforts already had exceeded her obligations she would henceforth reserve complete freedom of action for herself. The implication was that peace could be concluded at once. Everything depended on Germany's willingness to give way on the question of Constantinople.

"If Germany were ready to make concessions, Russia would demand nothing from Austria-Hungary and would restore all the occupied territories. Germany was either to leave Turkey to her fate, or at the very least oblige her to internationalize the narrow waters round Constantinople by means of a coastal strip on either side, five kilometres deep, administered by a sovereign international commission, in which all seafaring states were to be represented.

"Stamboul was to remain under the immediate sovereignty of the Sultan and under the administration of the Porte. Armenia was to be an autonomous buffer-state under international protection, with an Armenian (Nuber Pasha, for example,) at its head, and with a defensive gendarmerie, for which Russia would provide the necessary instructors.

"As for Poland, Russia had no objection to an autonomous state, headed by a Pole under the protection of the three empires. Moreover, the czar was prepared to restore complete independence to Finland, and to reduce the connection between Russia and Finland to the original status of a merely personal union. In Asiatic Turkey, Russia would leave Germany a free hand south of the line Beikos (on the Bosporus)-Bolin-Sivas-Bajazid.

"These proposals were submitted to the Ballplatz, to the High Command of the Imperial and Royal Armies, to the German Foreign Office at Berlin, to General Headquarters of the German army and to the King of Bulgaria. King Ferdinand agreed to them, the High Command of the Imperial and Royal armies gave them serious consideration, but German General Headquarters rejected them unconditionally.

"On January 27, 1917, the Russian court again made overtures through the same neutral channel.

"These new overtures were communicated to the Central Powers on February 11, 1917. The result was the same as in the preceding October. Bulgaria was agreeable, Vienna and Budapest were not disinclined, nor did Berlin refuse a hearing — only German General Headquarters definitely rejected the offer.

"The Czar and his colleagues feared that the revolution was at hand, and they realized that peace alone could save them. On March 6, 1917, they made an appeal through the same neutral channel. They pointed out how intense the general desire for peace had become and, above all, how unsafe things were for crowned heads both in Russia and elsewhere —'the position of the dynasties is nowhere pleasant and comfortable at the present day.' They implored the Central Powers to listen to reason. They were even willing to extend their October peace program in several respects.

"This appeal and the accompanying proposals were also communicated to Vienna, Buda, Berlin and Spa. King Ferdinand intervened personally in order to induce the Kaiser and the Emperor Charles to give a favorable reply. But the German High Command remained obdurate, maintaining that the interests of the Central Powers would be better served by a revolution, which would place Russia at their mercy.

"Hardly had a week passed when the Russian revolution broke out, and on the 15th of March the czar was compelled to abdicate.

"Nevertheless, a last despairing attempt was made by several members of the Russian imperial family, again through the same neutral channel. They expressed the conviction that if the Central Powers were willing peace could be concluded and the revolution crushed. 'We will not assume that sovereigns, however hostile they may be toward each other for the time being, are prepared to let a red chaos arise in Russia, the consequences of which would in all probability recoil upon themselves.' But even this offer was rejected."

Judged by Ancient Law.

A law suit was decided in England recently under a decree of Justinian about 1400 years old. Justinian, Emperor of Constantinople and Rome, in the sixth century, drew up the famous code that is the basis of the Roman law that prevails almost everywhere except in English-speaking countries. He decreed that a swarm of bees belonged to a man only as long as he could see them with ease, and no longer; after that they became the property of the first person who saw them. Fourteen centuries later, in the Roman city of Bath, a man seeking to recover the value of a swarm of bees from a neighbor was judged, appropriately enough, by the ancient Roman law of Justinian, and, consequently, lost his case and his bees together.

License Inspector Ross, St. Thomas, made a seizure of 1,080 gallons of liquor owing to it being addressed to a man whom it was found did not live at the address.

MOSLEMS DISLIKE PICTURES.

An Incident Indicative of Women's Progress in Egypt.

An interesting sidelight was shown recently at a meeting of women in Cairo on the progress that is being made toward overcoming the Moslem prejudices against pictures and the appearance of the unveiled woman in public. Of all Mohammedan prejudices which seem so strange to Westerners, the one against pictures and statuary is the most to be respected or, one should perhaps say, the least to be criticized, since it had its origin undoubtedly in the campaign against Arab idolatry which the Prophet and his followers instituted. It has, of course, been breaking down gradually for a number of years, says the Cairo correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor. For example, the followers of the former Nationalist leader, Mustafa Kamel, could think of no better public memorial of him than a statue, and subscriptions were accordingly asked for with the object of providing one, though it has never seen the light if, indeed, it was ever made.

The meeting in question was of Egyptian women and was held in a hall of the Egyptian University in memory of Mrs. Malak Hifni Nasif, who was a foremost writer on feminism in Egypt. As a tribute to her, it was decided to open subscriptions to have a portrait of the lady painted in oils and hung in one of the halls of the university, the consent of the husband having first been obtained. For the privilege of placing the picture on the walls of the university the president of the meeting, Mrs. Sharawi, wife of one of Egypt's land owners, declared she was willing to pay £150 a year to the funds of the university. Thus, although the feminist leader might not, while living, show herself unveiled in public, her face may now be gazed upon by the young men who are studying there, for women are not yet admitted as students, though before the war lectures were given once a week to women. It would appear, therefore, that the idea behind the placing of the portrait in the university is to make it serve as a reminder that Egyptian women have still a long way to go before that equality of opportunity in education is granted to them which will help raise the nation to a higher level of civilization.

Motoring as an Exercise.

Most motorists do not consider automobiling as exercise, providing there are no tires to change en route, and one frequently hears the opinion that the augmenting use of motor vehicles has materially reduced the opportunities for exercise that is so necessary to the physical well-being.

A well-known writer on scientific subjects, Dr. Henry Smith Williams, writing in a recent issue of Motor, takes exception to this general view, and states that automobiling is beneficial and shows accruing benefits under three heads—physical, mental and vocational. He proceeds to point out that, in addition to the exercise, the motorist has been in the open air, buffeting the winds, inhaling ample quantities of oxygen to meet the increased needs of the accelerated currents of blood corpuscles; and that digestion and assimilation are thereby facilitated and the toxic products accumulated through former inaction progressively are in increased measures oxidized and eliminated.

The doctor supports his conclusions in part as follows: It is the muscles of the arms, together with those of the chest and abdomen, that pre-eminently and habitually suffer. When you drive a car 40 or 50 miles over average Canadian roads, or a fraction of that distance in the city, you give your arms and torso a course of purposeful calisthenics that redounds directly to the benefit of your muscles and arteries and heart and indirectly, but less significantly, to the benefit of your digestive apparatus and organs of elimination as well as the nervous system."

Quaint Wedding Customs.

It is an old belief that a marriage should take place when the moon is waxing and not waning, if it is to be a lucky match, and in many north country districts a strict enquiry is made as to the state of the moon before the wedding day is fixed. In the north, too, no wise bride will ask an odd number of guests to her wedding feast, for an old superstition has it that if this is done one of the guests will die before the year is out.

In the Highlands it is taken as a terribly unlucky sign if a dog should run between the bridal pair on their wedding day; while in Derbyshire prospective brides still tell the bees of their wedding, and decorate the hives for the occasion. In parts of England and Scotland there exists an ancient custom for which reason is hard to find, by which part of the wedding cake is broken over the head of the bride, and the guests scramble for pieces.—London Chronicle.

A Valuable Necklace.

A note of interest from London concerns a pearl necklace, valued at $1,500,000, which is in London awaiting sale. It is probable that the necklace will be offered by public auction. The pearls are remarkable not only for their size but for their delicate tinting. There is at the present time much very valuable jewelry in process of realization on behalf of Russian and other owners, who have no option but to convert it into cash.

A partitioned metal tray has been invented that telescopes to fit a desk drawer of any size.

NOTHING DOING FOR JOSEPH

Might Be the Engineer, but Found He Had Little Control Over Steam Powers.

Meekly made up his mind that he wasn't going to be bossed any longer by his wife, so when he went home at noon he called out, imperiously: "Laura! Laura!"

Mrs. Meekly came out of the kitchen with perspiration on her face, her hands covered with war flour, and a rolling-pin in her hand.

"What do you want with Laura?" she asked.

Meekly staggered, but braced himself up. "I want you to understand, madam"—and he tapped his breast dramatically—"that I am the engineer of this establishment, that I am—"

"Oh, you are, are you? Well, Joseph, I want you to understand that I"—here she looked dangerous—"I am the boiler that might blow up and sling the engineer over into the next street. Do you hear the steam escaping, Joseph?"

Joseph heard, and prayed that he might be passed Grade 1 when he went before the medical board.—London Tit-Bits.

Locating Ore Beds.

Beds of ore are stated to have been located at a distance of two and a half miles by the electrical method patented in the United States by Professor R. A. Fessenden. In the locality where the existence of valuable ores is suspected, a number of holes several miles apart are bored, then filled with water, and a Fessenden sound oscillator is immersed in one as a transmitting apparatus, the receiver submerged in each of the other holes being an Einthoven recording oscillograph. The holes may be five miles or more apart over the area being investigated. In the study of the oscillograph records, special attention is given to the relation between sounds received direct and those from echoes, and it is found possible to get a fair idea of the character of intervening masses of rock and of the position and distance of neighboring deposits of ore.

COLD FEET IN ADVERTISING

It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.

Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.

National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.

Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms! Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.

McGRAW OUT AFTER A DRAWING CARD

NEEDS ATTRACTION TO KEEP PACE WITH "KITIES" WHO HAVE RUTH

New York, Jan. 16.— Now that the Kilties are set for a flying start next spring by casting "Babe Ruth" in the clean-up role, the New York Giants are preparing to pluck a star of vast repute to keep pace with their rivals in the race for local and other patronage.

Although individually the Ginats far outrank the avergae major league team in point of value afield and at the box office, aboundant water has gone over the dam since the team has carried a headliner such as Mathewson.

Names do tell in baseball, just as in the theatre and on the screen. Just as the Chaplins, the Pickfords, Fairbanks and other pampered pets of the film lure the multitudes, the Ruths, Cobbs, Speakers, Collinses, Johnsons and Alexanders attract their ten thousands to the ball parks. Critics may carp about the evils of the star system, but it is the star that draws the crowds, from Pawtucket to Pasadena and back again every time. McGraw is to shrewd a showman to permit a competitor to have an edge in that colorful element that lures the customers. It will be no soft task to find a man in the National League to match the mighty Ruth; in fact it will be out of the question if the Back Bay bombadier can keep up his phenomenal stickwork. Just now it seems that the American League has a corner on the baseball firmament. It outnumbers the National five to one in this regard. About the only headliner browsing in senior pastures just now, who approaches Ruth is Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Cardinals. McGraw has bid vainly for this star for months, but he is still out of reach. Only a Hornsby or an Alexander would match the battering Boston blunderbus—now of the killed clan.

WHAT PRICE WOULD JOHNSON BE WORTH?

PREMIER PITCHER SETS AN EXAMPLE TO ALL BALL PLAYERS

Fabulous prices offered for Rogers Hornsby, Babe Ruth and other star players, most of which are greatly exaggerated, brings up the old question again of what Walter Johnson would be worth to a first division team. Last year there were four teams in the American League probably anyone of which could have won the pennant with the addition of Walter Johnson. He would have been worth a fortune that one season alone to the club that won out because of his presence on the team.

Not only could Walter have won the American League pennant for Detroit, Cleveland or New York; but he probably could have won the world series for the team he was on. Thus he would have won $100,000 for his purchaser in a little more than a week, not to speak of the countless dollars he would have attracted to the box office during the regular playing season, inasmuch as he finished the year leading all the pitchers, despite the fact that he was on a mediocre team, the indications are that he has not played indications are that he has not played out by several jumps and will continue to be one of the leading flingers next year. In point of effectiveness his work was easily the class of the league, and it is not to be thought of that he will fade appreciably for a few more seasons.

And yet one never hears of $70,000 and a half-dozen players being offered for Walter. The reason probably is that he has said he is satisfied to continue with the Washington teem as long as Clark Griffith wants him and that probably means as long as he wears a baseball uniform, for everybody has learned that Walter Johnson's word is like his pitching—the best there is. If Hornsby is worth $70,000 and four good ball players, Walter Johnson would be worth at least $200,000. Any investment that pays back the initial outlay in a single year ought to be good. In most businsses it takes several years to pay for erecting the factory or putting through the railroad.

DEMPSEY TO DEFEND HIMSELF

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 16.— Jack Kearns announced tonight that he had telegraphed the National commander of the American Legion in Indianapolis asking for an opportunity for Jack Dempsey to appear before the Supreme Council of that body to give testimony as to his record during the war.

Kearns' action follows adoption by various posts of the American Legion resolution condemning Dempsey as a "slacker" and "draft dodger."

LEONARD SUPREME IN LIGHTWEIGHT CLASS

AUSTRALIAN CHAMPION POSSIBLE OPPONENT BUT NOT IN CHAMPION'S CLASS

That Benney Leonard stands alone among the lightweights of the world, was emphasized again Tuesday, when word was received that Eddie Wallace, of Brooklyn, had been stopped in thirteen rounds by Llew Edwards, the lightweight champion of Australia. There has been considerable talk of Edwards' being a foe worthy of Leonard's best efforts, but details of the Edwards-Wallace bout fail to bear out any such impression. It is true that Edwards handed out such severe punishment from the ninth round on, that the referee had to stop the encounter, but we cannot imagine Leonard taking even half a dozen rounds to land a clean knockout on the Brooklyn boxer. In the early rounds Wallace outboxed Edwards, and held a good lead on points, but Edwards was the more rugged and harder hitter and he wore his man down. It was a big mistake for Wallace to start with the leser lights and then work up to the big bout.

With the certainty that Leonard would be the more clever boxer, and the harder puncher, we can discern no reasons just now for believing that the Australian could make any impression against the world's champion. In France the leading lightweight is Louis De Ponthieu, who would go about a round with Leonard. In England the champion, according to the best of our knowledge it a novice by the name of Bob Marriott, whom it would be criminal to send against Leonard. The lightweight class surely is in a bad way.

DESCAMPS WIELDS PECULIAR POWER

ENGLISH WRITER CLAIMS HE MYSTIFIED BECKETT IN FIGHT WITH CARPENTIER

New York, Jan. 16.— Apparently Jack Dempsey will have to fight two men when he meets Georges Carpentier for the world's heavyweight championship, if the deductions of a London writer are correct. According to this authority Descamps, manager of Carpentier, possesses some sort of a mystic eye with which he cast a spell over Beckett in the recent battle in London with the result that the French pugilist had an easy task in knocking out the befuddled Britisher.

In the words of the discoverer of this alleged dual combination which confronted poor Beckett during the 70 odd seconds he stood before Carpentier, the strange influence made its effects felt as follows:

"There was two personalities fighting Joe Beckett form the moment he entered the ring. Carpentier was one. The other was Descamps, his manager. Descamps is a very excitable man. He is a bundle of nerves, a typically French, overflowing personality, whose individuality oozes from every pore. He does not effervesce. He exudes.

'Descamps says that when Carpentier meets Jack Dempsey, Carpentier will win in six rounds. Watch Descamps. He is the man who is aiding Carpentier with a mental force. His mentality accompanies Carpentier in the ring every fight. He is unseen, silent partner, and to him as much as to Carpentier is Beckett indebted for the blow on the jaw which finished the fight and took the championship of Europe out of his reach.

"What was Descamps doing as Beckett came into the ring. Those who were near him tell me he was watching Beckett intently. The fact is, he began to fight Beckett as soon as Beckett stepped into the ring. Beckett was constantly glancing around at Carpentier as he was getting his gloves adjusted. There you have the personality of Descamps begining to work; impinging its task of confusing the English boxer's thoughts. Possible Descamps is not quite conscious of his own power but it is there all the same. This projecting of personality is not hypnotism, but it is to be seen operating everywhere.

"Descamps, they say, feels every defeat of Carpentier as a defeat for himself. If you took Descamps mind to analytical table you would find that he would make a first class medium. He is a physic subject. His personality stands out for Carpentier in every match, for he has trained Carpentier's mind as well as his body. Carpentier acts as Descamps wills. That is why Beckett made the mistake at Holborn stadium. Carpentier alone he might have beaten. Carpentier and Descamps were too much for him."

MANY OBJECTIONS TO CHANGES IN RULES

SOME THINK OLD WAY OF COUNTING TENNIS GAMES IS BETTER

Which is easier to say "deuce" or "4-4."

The age-old system of scoring in tennis will give way to the mathematical system where every point is counted in figures.

Of course a serious objection will arise from tennis players throughout the country whenever the radical scoring is attempted at tournaments next summer.

A majority of the players feel that the old traditions of the game are interwoven with the present scoring system and that any other would remove some of the familiarity of the game to many. Then there is the objection in the confusion arising as to the point' score and games tally.

Another objection to the new point scoring system is that England, the mother of tennis, and France, Australia, Canada, Belgium, South Africa and other countries, which compete in the International Davis cup matches, will not change their scoring systems even though this country does. This will cause confusion in the matches and United States, being in the minority will have to change its scoring system back to coincide with the others.

Those who oppose the new plan are finding numerous flaws in it. One of the most serious is the plan to decide a match by the number of games won and lost instead of by sets as at present. This method will entirely disarrange the present play and cause confusion.

Tennis has gotten along nicely these many years with the old scoring system. It has been used by the greatest players of all countries and no fault found.

Hicks—You made the same mistake I did.

The right of way is mine, I know,
But I will frankly state,
I turn out for a truck because
It has the right of weight.

Sing Sing Jail Short of Labor.

The labor shortage has hit even Sing Sing, which has a stationary supply of 1,500 men. The officials are puzzled because they are unwilling to employ women. Although Warden Moyer has an allowance for a maid he never has hired one. The only woman ever employed within the prison walls, a telephone operator, left after a few days, saying that there were too many men.

Enterprising Alaskan Village.

Noorvick, a native village near Nome, Alaska, is said to be the only Eskimo village in northern Alaska possessing electric lights and a wireless plant. The light plant and wireless station were installed by Delbert Replogle, teacher at the Noorvick government school. Mr. Replogle, who was in Nome recently on his way to the States, said he left natives in charge of the improvements.

TWO CHIMNEY FIRES

In spite of the cold weather the Fire Brigade were called out at 11.35 o'clock last night to extinguish a chimney fire at the home of Frank Dukar, 255 George Street.

At 10.50 this morning another chimney fire broke out, this time at the home of John Lacheur, 209 Rubidge street. There was no damage at either fires.

THE PIANO WORTH WHILE

It is poor economy to buy a piano because there may be slight difference in price between one piano and another. A good piano will last a lifetime. The pianos of Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co., Limited have in many cases passed from generation to generation. They are built to last a lifetime, besides possessing a distinctive tone, touch and power, that has made them a favorite with great artists the world over. It should always be a pleasure to visit the warerooms at George and Hunter Streets, Peterborough.

POPULAR SOCIAL BY DAUGHTERS OF ENGLAND

ANOTHER OF THEIR FAVORITE ENTERTAINMENTS WAS HELD LAST NIGHT

The D. of E. held another of their popular entertainments in the S. O. E. Hall last evening. These entertainments are growing in popularity and deservedly so, as a good time, free from all formality, is always assured. A special feature, which met with hearty applause, was the sketch by the 9 point 2 troupe of returned soldiers, all members of the Park Street Baptist Church. Life in the trenches and Y.M.C.A. huts is splendidly portrayed and the sketch is a very pleasing one, full of snap and go. It met with such success that the members had to promise a return performance in the near future.

Another pleasing feature was the graceful dancing of the Misses Cooke and Tyner. After the splendid programe, shown below, refreshments were served.

Piano Duet—Mrs. Bugg and Mrs. Nichols.

generously of what they had in food and Red Cross supplies. Italy had needed heartening—had suffered for a time in the need of food and coal. We had come to her rescue—had relieved the situation—and she had proven to be a great ally. The Italians were a great people. We should not judge a people by the less intelligent few whom we have come in contact with, nor would we wish that Canada should be judged by the illiterate few who might drift into other countries. Remember that Italy defeated the Austrians before we beat the Germans, and so made the victory possible.

Dr. Robertson commented on the gracious reception he had been accorded at the hands of the royal personages over there, as a representative of Canada. Continuing, he encouraged the spirit of co-operation—the submerging of self in others. The willingness to accept leadership and be thankful that we have men with brains and bodies, souls and wills, that are such as can assume the position of leaders. Democracy is a good thing, but democracy is worse than nothing if unwilling to accept leadership. Great indeed was the winning power of a big idea, and with us this moving idea was a broader and a better citizenship.

Touching on the high cost of living, the speaker pointed out the grave financial condition in which we stand today. We are all at the present time, regardless of acquired wealth, living on borrowed money. And if we do not conserve and produce, we are only heaping up debt for the younger generation. The adequate organization which was good during war was just as desirable in peace—especially in this period of reconstruction. The unselfish disposition which can sink its individual interests and likings and give way to a nobler power—that was what Canadians and what the world needed today.

At the conclusion of the address Mrs. Kendry thanked the speaker for what she termed the "red letter afternoon," at the same time calling upon any of the ladies present who wished to express their sentiments on the occasion.

Mrs. W. R. Morris, in a brief and bright address, thanked the lecturer for the keen pleasure he had occasioned his listeners, and the noble impulses with which he had inspired them. This clear and convincing message would not only have an uplifting influence, but would tend to strengthen the resolve for a better citizenship. Mrs. Morris' speech was greatly appreciated by the gathering and occasioned an outburst of hearty applause. Mrs. R. Harstone and Miss Dixon also expressed in brief and appropriate terms the thanks of the members, and the meeting dispersed with rousing applause for Dr. Robertson.

DEMAND EX-KAISER'S SURRENDER

NATION-WIDE PROHIBITION IS NOW IN FORCE IN UNITED STATES

First Country in the History of the World to Become Dry by Constitutional Provision.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 17.—Prohibi- ion was the law of the United States oday. The constitutional amend- ent, making it illegal to manufac- ure, sell or give away liquor or bev- rages containing more than one- alf of one per cent. alcohol, went to effect at midnight last night d today violators faced prosecu- on under one of the most drastic ws ever promulgated to fit a crime her than a felony. Officials were ticipating innumerable tangles to unravelled, but because of the aking up of the state and local au- orities of enforcement machinery y felt matters had been greatly plified. One of the greatest prob- ms confronting them is that of e disposal of the large quantities distilled liquors remaining in nded warehouses. Their fate has t been determined so far.

Poor John Barlycorn! He has had as ny lives as the proverbial cat, and so apparently his full quota of aths. So often during the last elve-month has he been waked and ied with all the bibulous honors war and of peace that one hesi- tes to announce a renewal of the ob- quies. What with the vindication of rtime prohibition and the succes- e thrusts from the puissant lance the Supreme Court, his corporal dy has been sore pressed. Surely funeral train of mourners have lebrated his demise not less than ne times already in unwonted li- tions and with incoherent cries of Vale! Vale!"

And yet heretofore there has been ways the remote chance that some ing might intervene—a court deci n, an injunction, or some kind of cataclysm—to keep the breath of e in old John's pickled body— a st the breath of the last of his a ed nine lives.

But today America is face to face th a condition and not a theory vested of all speculation whether e lid can be hammered down at, ghter that it is at present, whether e fateful date can be made to and for" just one more funeral el over the body of old John, this the trenchant fact:

On and after to-night the United ates becomes by federal enact- nt the first nation in all history enter upon a career of prohibition constitutional provision.

One Tiny Ray of Hope

To be sure, there remains even yet just a teeny, weeny bit of a chance that the Supreme Court, in the Rhode Island State suit, which still is pending before it, may sustain Attorney General Rice's contention of the invalidity of the Eighteenth amendment per se. As a "long shot chance that is perhaps just about as good a betting proposition as to back President Wilson's prospect of getting the League of Nations covenant ratified with the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a "t." Judicial miracles have happened even in the United States Supreme Court, but it isn't safe to count upon them.

Admitting, therefore, the possibility of an ultimate delicti, the fact remains that on this present day of grace it looks as though John Barleycorn's eyes are "sot." So, while the mourners are lining up for the usual privilege of "viewing the remains,' the moment seems opportune for a little inquest upon the progressive forces that have put the convivial old rascal out of business.

To the Anti-Saloon League and kindred forces no charge is more repugnant than the assertion so frequently heard that the prohibition movement, culminating in a prohibition amendment to the constitution of the United States, was the product of hysteria, the quick growth of a warm emontionalism. They contend on the contrary, that it was nothing of the kind; that it was not 'put over' by legislatives delegates at the dictation of a movement developed slowly and by orderly stages in response to the dictates of popular conviction. It is the climatic triumph, they tell you of organized effort exerted over half a century or more of nation wide education, an organised effort that has increased to intensity and widened in scope from yeary to year and from in scope from year to year and from

Cite Long Years of Effort

The act of Congress in submitting the Eighteenth Amendment and its ratification later by forty-five of the forty-eight States, say, the champions who bear upon their cuirass and buckler the bone dry device, is only the natural result of years of careful, patient organization and the gradual growth of public sentiment. It is the harvest that has crowned with fruition those long years of plowing and harowing, of fertilizing and sowing the seed in an all too stubborn soil.

ANADA'S FUEL PROBLEMS MAY YET BE SOLVED BY THE PRODUCTION OF PEAT

his address to the Board of de Thursday night Dr. E. V. derick referred to Canada's de- dence upon the United States for pply of fuel. He added that in the Russian miners refused to e coal or the Swedish trainmen transport it, Canadians were in ger of freezing to death and be- ing extinct as a race.

There may be relief from these ditions in sight. Some time ago Dominion Government appointed commission to look into the possi- ties for using peat as a fuel, and rks were established at Alfred in Ottawa district, with E. V. ors, son of D. H. Moore, of this , as engineer in charge. Charles Farlane, also from Peterborough, superintendent of the mechanical partment of the business. Mr. ore has invented a machine for ducing and drying peat, and after orough test the operation of this trivance proved entirely satisfactory. It has been demonstrated that peat can be produced and sold to the consumers at a lower rate than coal, heat units in a ton of each being the basis of comparison. Quantities of the peat taken out last summer have been sent, by way of making a practical test, to the Parliament Buildings both at Toronto and Ottawa and will be used there for the heating of public offices.

One serious difficulty has been encountered at the start. The railway freight rates for peat makes its transportation practically prohibitive. Until better terms can be secured it will be impossible to distribute this fuel generally throughout either the Dominion or the Province of Ontario. In the meantime the plant at Alfred are closed down, as work cannot be carried on during the winter months, but the supply on hand is being disposed of to advantage to the local trade.

The deposits of peat in Eastern Ontario are practically inexhaustible. It is found in out-of-the-way places and in the swamps on a number of farms.

To make its general production possible a smaller drying machine has been placed on the market. Two or more farmers can combine to secure one of these, just as is now done in the case of ditching machines, and so be in a position to secure a supply of peat fuel on their own property.

:-: ANOTHER OPPORTUNITY FOR PETERBOROUGH :-:

The Board of Trade has received a letter from Mr. E. J. Irwin, Canadian representative of the Manchester Guardian, announcing a great exposition by that world-famous daily of Canada's resources and trade opportunities in England and throughout the British Empire.

In writing Mr. Irwin the Board said that such enterprise on the part of the Manchester Guardian was a distinct service, not only to the Empire but to Canada; also that no daily journal in the world could do it better or more helpfully.

The Board said that the hope had long been entertained that some long-sighted British journal would take this important subject in hand and now that the Manchester Guardian has taken it up. Mr. Irwin was assured that he would have the cordial help of the city administration and the Board.

Mayor McIntyre City Clerk Armstrong and the Board of Trade will be pleased to receive suggestive letters from citizens who are interested in the grant of British industries in Peterborough.

LOCAL CASE OF SLEEPING SICKNESS IS CURED BY TRANSFUSION OF BLOOD

A case of sleeping sickness in this city has been cured by the surgical operation known to the profession as the transfusion of blood. The case is likely to attract the attention of medical men the world over.

Lilly Ellis, the seven-year-old daughter of James Ellis, 48½ Mark street, Ashburnham, was taken ill shortly after Christmas. She was in a comatose condition from the beginning of her affliction, and a number of medical men who were called in agreed that it was a case of sleeping sickness, so called in this country, and which is due to paralysis of a portion of the brain. The technical term for the disease is eu cephalitis lethargica, and it differs essentially from the genuine sleeping sickness that is peculiar to the tropics, although it resembles it sufficiently to be so popularly named. All the usual remedies employed in such cases were of no avail, and the little girl's life was in danger. Then a young surgeon in the city was called in and decided to perform the operation of transfusing blood into the body of the patient, who was removed to Nicholls Hospital for that purpose.

The first step was to find a person whose blood was of the same consistence as that of the patient. Human blood is divided into four classes by the profession, and after tests had been made it was found that the blood of the child and of her father were of the same class. Mr. Ellis readily consented to the operation as the only means of saving the life of his child.

A vein in the father's arm was opened, and about half a pint of blood was secured. After this had been treated it was infused into the veins of the patient, who showed improvement from the earliest stages of the operation. The father experienced no inconvenience by his sacrifice, but, after the surgeon had finished his work, was able to walk from the hospital to his home in Ashburnham. The little girl is improving daily, and the operation is regarded by the local medical fraternity as one of the highest triumphs of surgical art.

According to the ethics of the profession, which seem to regard anything like publicity as the unpardonable sin of medical jurisprudence, the name of the surgeon is withheld from the public.

POLISH TABLES TURN ON THE BOLSHEVISTS

REDS ARE DRIVIN BACK WITH HEAVY LOSSES ON WIDE FRONT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Warsaw, Jan. 17.—The Bolsheviki forces on the Lithuanian and Esthonian fronts have been beaten and demoralized and are retreating east of Dvinsk, according to an official statement issued at the general staff headquarters. The Reds are reported to be destroying railroad stations and bridges to prevent pursuit by the Lettish and Polish units.

The Lettish and Polish front now runs along the shore of Preli Lake and thence to Czereg, the report says. Strong attacks by the Bolsheviki east of Lepel have been repulsed with heavy losses and prisoners taken by the Poles.

LONDON PAPERS EXPRESS VIEWS

DIFFERENCE OF JOURNALISTS' OPINION AS TO THE SITUATION IN RUSSIA

LABOR CHARGES DECEPTION

OTHER PAPERS REGARD MATTER AS ONE OF DANGER TO BRITAIN

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 17.—London newspapers choose for prominence the development in the Russian situation most suited to their respective views, thus:

The News, which advocates peace with the Bolsheviki, describes the announcement of the re-opening of trade relations as "momentous news which on the face of it means the raising of the blockade."

The Labor organ, the Herald, says if the announcement sincerely means what it says it definitely implies the raising of the lockade. "But," it continues, "the Russian policy of allied governments has been so tortuous, and their deceptions have been so many, that it will be well to wait and see."

"The dominant fact is that the anti-Bolshevik side in the Russian civil war has collapsed," remarks the Chronicle. "The best thing now, if it could be done, would be to obtain satisfactory peace with Russia."

The Daily Mail, the Telegraph and the Morning Post, strongly anti-Bolshevik, generally comment on what they regard as a position of extreme gravity for Europe and especially for Great Britain.

BIG INCREASE IN CANADIAN TRADE

Exports of domestic products for the period under review were valued at $941,841,366 a decrease of six millinos against the corresponding period last year.

AUSTRIANS, TOO, PROVE FALSE TO TERMS OF TREATY WITH ALLIES

Ships of War That Should be Turned Over to Allies Have Been so Badly Damaged as to be Incapable of Navigation

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Geneva, Jan. 17.—Austrian war vessels, which, under terms of the peace treaty, must be handed over to the Allies, have undergone a second "Scapa Flow," according to a telegram received here from Turin. The dispatch states that the Allied Naval Commission, which recently arrived at Cattaro, confirms the first reports that the Austrian fleet had been seriously disabled. The Austrians were said to have removed the principal parts of the machinery of the ships, rendering them incapable of navigation, only the hulls remaining in good condition. The fleet includes one battleship, three large cruisers and various smaller craft. The Austrians are declared to have acknowledged the damage, but to have blamed the Czecho-Slovaks and Jugo Slave. Repairs will require several months of work.

CITY CAN OBTAIN NO FUNDS FROM CITY TRUST

ALD. TURNER'S SUGGESTION NOT APPROVED BY CITY TRUST COMMISSION

At the meeting of the Finance Committee yesterday afternoon at which the members of the City Trust were present, it was decided [illegible] the Trust had no surplus funds that could be used for park purposes or other city improvements.

Ald. Turner, chairman of the Committee, thought there was on hand some $30,000 above what is required for the interest and debentures falling due in the near future. If such were the case, the City Trust were to be complimented upon their handling of the sinking fund of the city he said.

Mr. W. H. Moore, stated that the City Trust had no money that was not either required or already invested Mr. E. A. Peck pointed out that even if there was $30,000 surplus gained by the City Trust this should be added to the sinking fund as a guarantee against any bad invectuent that might be made.

After considerable discussion, Ald. Turner admitted that the meeting must have been called for the education of the chairman because he had been under the impression that there was $30,000 available for park purposes. He did suggest that if it was only authority the City Trust lacked, the city would attempt to have legislation passed to give them such power.

Those present were Ald. Turner, (chairman); Mayor McIntyre, Ald. Whelan, Gainey, Morrison, Hamilton, and Messrs. W. H. Moore, E. O. Peck, Richard Hall, E. H. D. Hall, C. R. Vididfield, V. Eastwood, J. J. Hart[illegible] and A. Stevenson.

TWENTY-EIGHT MILLIONS.

Will Be Required to Carry Toronto Through Current Year.

Toronto, Jan. 17.—Toronto will spend on current account (including interest and sinking fund) approximately $28,000,000 in 1920. The tax rate bids fair to be as high as last year, 28½ mills, or at the best 28. At this early date it looks as though the city may have to raise the following amounts:

From taxation at 28½ mills	$18,000,000
From local improvement rates	1,500,000
From other sources ...	8,500,000
Total	$28,000,000

COUNTIES REQUEST INCREASED SUBSIDIES

ANOTHER PETITION IN CIRCULATION FOR GOVERNMENT TO DEAL WITH

A petition has been received by County Clerk Elliott started from Dufferin County and being sent to the county councils of the Province, in which they ask the Minister of Public Works to amend the Highway Improvement Act.

The petition complains of the large sum of money that has been expended on the trunk roads of the Province This county deems the county roads of vastly more importance to the general public than these Provincial Highways.

They ask that the Provincial County Roads Committee may receive a subsidy of 70 per cent for both construction and maintenance and upon the county road systems generally, a subsidy of 50 per cent, instead of 40 per cent.

The recommendations made in this petition have not yet been dealt with by the Peterborough County Council. It is unpossible to predict their attitude but it is an assured fact that some of the members at least will not favor the present system of the distribution of the expenses, which would be unchanged if the proposed system were adopted with the increased subsidies from the Government.

NOT ENOUGH COAL.

Vessel Sends a Message to Halifax Asking for Help.

Halifax, Jan. 17. — The U. S. shipping board steamer Guildford reports by wireless from a position 135 miles off Halifax that she has only enough coal to run her within sixty miles of his port and that she is leaking and requires assistance. A tug will be sent to tow her into port. The Guildford is a steamer of 3500 tons. She arrived at Norfolk on the 2nd of January, and is believed to have sailed with a cargo of chemical salts for a trans-Atlantic port.

RECEIVE DEPUTATION ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

MINISTER OF WORKS WILL DISCUSS FEDERAL BUILDING MATTER WITH CITY

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has received word from the Minister of Public Works that he will be able to receive the municipal deputation from Peterborough on Wednesday next. It is understood that Mayor McIntyre and members of the Council will go down to Ottawa to urge upon the Government the immediate construction of the Federal building the contract of which was let before the war for $200,000. The Government has heretofore pleaded delay on the ground of war expenditure, but the Council and the Mayor are anxious that employment should be provided as soon as possible.

Five new sub-postal stations are to be opened in Windsor.

ANTI-PATRONAGE BUNK.

SATAN SHOWS SIGNS of repentance only when he is ill. There is none so righteous as the political party that happens to be knocking out its brains as it flounders in the cimmerian darkness of opposition. With all such the so-called evils of patronage furnish a constant text. When Satan recovers his wonted vigorous condition, it is common report that his evil nature again holds sway. Let the preachers of righteousness in public place once more find their way back to the Walhalla of office, and it is impossible for them to find patronage plums sufficient to appease the hunger that has been intensified by long years of famine.

It is just as well to realize the fact that we are facing conditions, and not theories. If patronage is really an evil, then it is one that cannot be entirely eradicated until human nature has been made over. Gratitude should be regarded as a virtue rather than a vice. It is natural for the party, as for the individual, to recognize and reward fidelity to a cause or to a personality.

When a new party takes control either in Dominion or Province, it is only a matter of justice that those who have borne the brunt of the battle should share in the material trophies of victory. This can be done without endangering in any sense the public service. The fact that an appointee to office is a supporter of the party in power is no reason why his efficiency should be questioned. A man's political affiliation does not affect his ability to discharge the dties of a sheriff, a county clerk or any other office in the gift of either a legislature or a council. Men active in politics have also made efficient school inspectors. In fact, no public spirited citizen can maintain a neutral attitude on any question which affects the public interest. If a local vacancy occurred in any office the filling of which rested with the Legislature, what more natural than that a farmer should be named for the position or a man of any other class who had supported the party in power, and that in making the selection the sitting member should be consulted? Such appointments have been made in the past, and the system still survives.

The idea of filling vacancies by promotion is not without its objections. Under such a system length of service is not always a guarantee of efficiency, for it is a well-known fact that in public office the standards insisted upon are not always as high as those in private business life. The incentive to gain promotion by fidelity of service is also removed. The men on the waiting list realize that there is no chance to win over the heads of those above them, no matter how the indifference to effort may mark the work of the latter.

Appointment by competitive examination also has its drawbacks. The student in the university who graduates with the high honors does not always make the most successful preacher, teacher, doctor, lawyer or engineer; indeed, scholarship is no longer regarded as an infallible test. As a rule it is the student who while at college makes a record in athletics rather than in class work, who scores a success in future life.

Political righteousness is an ideal creed, but political hypocrisy is the meanest of all human vices, and that is what all this anti-patronage bunk really amounts to.

THE PASSING OF "THE WOMAN'S PAGE."

AT THE MEETING of the daily section of the Canadian Press in Toronto the other day it was announced by the executive officers that woman journalists were to be secured in various parts of the Dominion in order that adequate prominence could be given to this department of the news of the day. The political movement among the farmers and labor men is also to be featured.

This move is likely to mark the passing of the distinctive "woman's page," which for some years has been conducted, generally by a woman, as a separate department in all of the large dailies. This page has been filled with the chronicles of purely feminine doings, whist and bridge parties, afternoon teas and the like. At the beginning it was deemed sufficient to give the name of the hostess, but journalistic enterprise grew with the passing of years, until lately no account of such a function is regarded as complete unless the name of the lady who poured the tea is given. It is only a step to another atrocity committed against good taste. Some editor of the woman's page will yet deem it her duty to inform the reading public that Mrs. Montague Smythe-Bjones rendered efficient aid in taking care of the soiled dishes after the dainty refreshments had been disposed of.

The women of the day are concerning themselves with graver matters than these. They have been endowed with the franchise, they are not only running for office on the same footing as men, but they are actually getting elected. The future records of women's activities are likely to be featured not in a separate column, but in the daily chronicle of the day's news. Entertainments peculiarly feminine may remain the vogue for years to come, but these are no longer likely to be described with such a fidelity to detail as that which has marked them in the past. Men have their stag parties, at which they indulge in relaxation of a purely masculine nature. It has never yet become the custom to give these functions prominence in the society column, which sets men in a class by themselves. The spirit of the time is changing. The feminine form of such words as author, poetess and the like is falling into disuse in the best publications. The lady who presides at a meeting is now generally referred to as the chairman. The language has not yet provided a distinctive term for the lady member of a municipal council or a school board, but none is needed. Alderman Hamilton and Trustee Morris is sufficient. Women candidates for office during the campaign seek no special favors. They will be found of the same spirit when they actually undertake the duties which they have been chosen to discharge, and will be inclined to resent anything which implies that they are not in every sense the equals of man.

It is the fashion these days to deplore anything like class legislation or a distinction between the various grades of society in the community. There should, for example, it is claimed, be no Labor members in the City Council, Legislature or Parliament. All members of these bodies should work not for the interests of those in the same social or industrial station as themselves, but for the general welfare.

That is the ideal for the attainment of which all should strive. But it can never be reached until campaign methods are remodeled. The candidate for mayor should make no special bid for the vote of the workingmen by professions of friendship for their cause, a friendship which exists in a purely Platonic sense, if at all, or by reference to the past efforts he has made in their behalf. If the general welfare is the objective, exertions with that end in view should be the candidate's one best asset when bidding for public support.

T. Tooms, M.L.A., addressed a public gathering the other night, and a local newspaper announced it as a meeting of the Independent Labor Party. His object was to outline the work he had in view and the questions he proposed to advocate at the coming session of the Legislature. Every class of citizen was invited, but all except the members of the new party kept themselves away. Mr. Tooms is ambitious to represent the entire community as the legislative member for West Peterborough. He is above distinctly class action, but his services will always bear such a suspicion if the members of the old parties fail to recognize him as their representative.

The U. F. O. is still regarded as a class organization, and selfish legislative action is yet anticipated by the politically disappointed and the pessimists. It should be admitted, however, that if anything of the kind actually occurs, the real reason will be that neglect of these interests in the past made the success of the U. F. O. and Labor possible to a great extent in the last provincial election. But, like the woman's movement, the U. F. O. and the Labor party will be held as separate entities so long as the newspapers make individual departments of their activities. If all are to be regarded as alike, with a common aim, then they must be treated as workers in the general economy.

RACIAL AGITATION.

THE CONGRESS of the United States, by way of stamping out the spirit of revolution, is dealing with legislation which provides for the punishment of all those who engage in any agitation which threatens the peace and welfare of the State. A special punishment is to be imposed upon all those who foment creed or racial differences, this form of agitation, hitherto carried on with impunity, being regarded as the most pernicious form of all, as it is invariably the starting point for all serious outbreaks.

In Canada all these years the religious and racial agitator has waxed fat on his propaganda. Newspapers with no other gospel have managed to exist. The cheap politician has made it the single plank in his platform and for a time at least has got away with it. But this particular form of public service is, fortunately, becoming more and more unpopular. Laws against it, such as the one proposed in the United States, would hasten its final and complete overthrow. Some one suggests that all such agitators be deported, holding them rather more dangerous to the public peace than the most loud-mouthed Bolshevists. But to where can they be sent? They are native-born Canadians mostly, men with the provincial spirit developed to the highest extent. Until some penal colony is established for the reception of such gentry, their native land will be called upon to tolerate them. But if they cannot be deported they can at least be repressed.

ANTICIPATING EVILS.

THERE IS NOTHING to be gained by anticipating evils, especially when there is no real ground for such forebodings. It is foolish to take it for granted that the Ontario Legislature will abandon the housing plan of their predecessors and advance no more money to the municipalities for the erection of dwellings for those of small means. In that event, Peterborough will be unable to avail itself of the opportunity to provide at moderate cost houses for its steadily growing working population.

Why should it be deemed the part of wisdom to assume that the U. F. O. members will oppose any measure designed for the special benefit of urban residents and that all their efforts are to be devoted to the promotion of the rural communities? The farmer members of the Legislature are not as wooden headed as some of the editors so free with their unjustifiable criticism. They are not blind to their own interests, but are well able to realize that a prosperous urban community, affording as it does a ready home market for their perishable produce, is one of the best assets that any farming district can possess, and that the value of a farm increases in proportion to its proximity to such centres.

There is another and more material reason why the Legislature is not likely to drop the housing scheme. The Labor members are in favor of it, recognising as they do its benefits to themselves. And there are Labor men enough in the Legislature, holding as they do the balance of power, to carry their point in this regard even if the farmers in the House were disposed to be lukewarm.

Reminiscences of an Editor

(By A. McG.)

Does the fear of punishment, such as the death penalty, for example, act as a deterrent to the commission of crime? This is a question that is pertinent in view of the recent double execution in this city.

Experience compels an answer in the negative. Years ago, when men were hanged for sheep stealing and women for shoplifting, those crimes were more common than they have been since the statutes have been purged of these atrocities. Restore the law that made it a capital offence to wear green in Ireland, and the adoption of that color would become more fashionable than ever.

Criminologists are now agreed that offences against the law are due to mental diseases. Surgery, too, is adopting this idea, and the feeble-minded and degenerates are now being restored to the status of the normal by operations.

I have had pass under my observation, and have, in the course of my my profession, dealt with every form of misdemeanor and crime from neglect to shovel snow from the sidewalk to premeditated murder. If the penalty for any class of offences was less severe, I am convinced that their commission would be no more frequent. People cannot be made righteous through fear. They are saved from themselves and from inflicting wrong upon others largely through education.

For twenty years I followed the newspaper calling in Michigan. In all that time there was no capital punishment law. It never struck me that, considering the make-up of the population, murder occurred with startling frequency. Premeditated homicides were rare. The most of the murders were committed in the heat of passion during personal altercations or while the parties to the fatal affray were under the influence of "squirrel" whiskey. When intent to take life is so often really lacking in these cases, the existence of a capital punishment law would certainly not act as a restraining influence.

One remarkable fact has not escaped my observation. What may be called the refinement of crime is attained only by those who up to the time of their fall have lived blameless lives, outwardly at least. The church member, the man high in the social scale, pointed out as a paragon of integrity, too often becomes the bank wrecker, the defaulter or the forger. Some of the murders that I recall, the most diabolical in the list, perpetrated not for gain so much as for revenge of jealousy, planned in secret and carried out with cold-blooded deliberation, have been committed by men or women against whom no word of suspicion had ever been uttered. Memory fails to recall a single instance of homicide in Michigan, no matter with what skill the plot was laid, that was not eventually solved by the police, and in all the murder trials which I have attended, drawn out as these hearings may have been, the attorney for the defence fighting desperately every inch of the way, there was none regarded as a miscarriage of justice. Contrary to a somewhat general impression in Canada, the offender across the border gets what is coming to him, but is never denied a fair opportunity to establish his innocence.

I have come to regard crime as a disease to which all are prone. Some contract it while others escape. All men do not catch smallpox, largely because all are not exposed to contagion. Of course, there are some whose inherent power of resistance enables them to defy infection. Just as there are men and women never seriously tempted to commit crime. Righteous living is due to heredity, to the development of the bump of what phrenologists term moral sentiment, rather than through fear of the law. All men have not robbed a bank or stolen the funds entrusted to their keeping by widows and orphans. All men have not had the opportunity, it may be stated, but even if they had, the percentage of such defalcations would be comparatively small. There is still left on earth such a virtue as honor.

But since the days of Cain, a homicidal strain has run through the human race. Every honest man who communes with himself and peers into the corners of his own spirit, cannot fail to be startled by the traces of depravity that he discovers. Evil thoughts come to the best of humanity. Self-repression rather than the terror of the rope of the hangman or of the avenging electric chair is the real agency that preserves the world from a holocaust of violence. It is only the Pharisee praying in public, thanking God he is not like other men, who has so swaddled himself with hypocrisy that he has, perhaps, succeeded in hiding his inherent moral blemishes even from himself. And it is such characters as these who are most to be dreaded by society, and who, breaking out at last, poison the entire community with an infection of evil-doing.

A CASE OF HICCOUGHS.

Dr. Frederick Adams, Formerly of Toronto, Is the Sufferer.

Windsor, Jan. 17. — Dr. Frederick Adams, Medical Officer of Health for the border district, is suffering from an acute attack of hiccoughs, an epidemic of which was recently predicted. The spasms became so severe that Dr. Adams was ordered to bed. Dr. Adams resigned from the Toronto Health Department last June, when he came to Windsor.

During his long and public career Viscount Milner has set his hand to many difficult tasks, and his achievements have earned for him a high place among the Empire's great servants. A difficult and most trying task now confronts him. He is the British Secretary of State for the Colonies, and he has gone to Egypt, the head of a mission sent there to study conditions and reconcile the aspirations of the Egyptians with the interests of Great Britain. Lord Milner has asked the Egyptians to express freely their opinions, but the leaders of the Egyptian Nationalists are not co-operating and have declared that conferences with the Commission headed by Lord Milner are "useless."

Viscount Milner is the son of a physician. He was born on March 23, 1854, and as a boy and young man enjoyed the advantages of the best schools of England. At Oxford he distinguished himself. He was admitted to the Bar, but never took up the practice of the law. For a time he was engaged in journalism, which led him into public life.

The present is not his first official connection with Egyptian affairs, for he was Under-Secretary for Finance in Egypt from 1889 to 1892, and in the latter year published a work, "England in Egypt."

For a number of years he was associated with the affairs of South Africa—Governor of the Cape of Good Hope from 1897 to 1901; Governor of the Transvaal and Orange River Colony after the war from 1901 to 1905; also High Commissioner for British South Africa. In 1902 he was raised to the peerage as Viscount Milner.

SPURRIER FINDS SERVICE PAYS BETTER THAN SPEED

Service from the retailer's standpoint isn't confined to seeing how fast you can deliver the goods and take the customer's money. That idea of service is out of date.

"When we quit that sort of service," he says, "and commenced to practice the real sort of service our business commenced to grow by leaps and bounds.

"And the thing we did was very simple, almost inconsequential, it would seem. But it worked, and that's the acid test of worth."

The point was simply this: When customers came into the Spurrier store and asked for a given article, a screw-driver, for instance, Spurrier or his clerks would try to find out just what they intended to use the article for.

If they happened to be carpenters, artisans or builders, he would show them the best screw-driver in the store, for such customers demand quality first, and they are willing to pay for it.

But if the customer merely has a screen door to put up or a storm window, a cheaper article will serve his purpose just as satisfactorily. Spurrier and his clerks never fail to drive home the point that they are willing to sacrifice a few cents' profit in order to better serve the customer in a large way.

If a customer states that he merely has an odd job to do he is directed to the ten-cent counter in the basement, with a smiling statement that there is no use in him spending seventy-five cents when ten cents will do his work.

This never fails to make a hit with the customer: Put yourself in his place and run over what you'd be thinking.

People get confidence in the store and the management after just one such experience, and their attitude is crystallized to such an extent that they become fixed patrons of the store in the future.

If they cannot find out just what the customer has in mind to do with the article he's buying, where they carry several grades in stock, or it seems the best of diplomacy not to lay too much stress on inquisitiveness, they size up the customer and select a moderately priced article, according to his apparent need for it. One can usually tell at a glance whether a customer is a carpenter or a business man.

"It has more than repaid us," says Spurrier. "I believe it is the best piece of advertising we have done, and it has given us the confidence of the community in a short time. We clinch the trade then, and, besides, it makes us feel as if we were really doing some of the things the word 'service' means."

DRUG STORE FEATURES PRESERVING RECIPES

Advertising recipes for canning, preserving and putting up of catsups, chutneys, chili sauces and India relish is usual with grocers, but buying space for such a purpose is hardly expected from druggists.

Wotring's Pharmacy of Bethlehem, Pa., set the fashion by using a 2x6 space daily in local papers to give the best "tried and true" recipes for such commodities, when the putting up season was in full blast.

The firm claims it gets the business from many who follow its recipes, the housewives naturally figuring the formulae given have been tested with Wotring's salt, spices sealing wax, etc. The stunt has proved to be a business gainer.

WHAT WILL A SHOW WINDOW SELL?

Houses—A Philadelphia real estate man tried it out by putting a model of a house he had for sale in his window. It worked so well that he has made a steady policy of it. It pays him well, and he wonders why other real estate men have not taken it up.

Bricks—A southern brickmaker wondered why he could not sell his product in New York. His business was good in other sections of the country, but somehow he couldn't attract attention in the New York market until he put a display in a window near Fifth avenue.

Land—Bloomingdale Brothers, of New York, sold the entire tract of Scarborough Park, several years ago, from blueprints and a window display.

Ice—A Philadelphia ice company rigged up a high-selling power window with an alarm clock frozen into a cake of ice, and so arranged that the alarm would go off when the ice released its grip. The public's registered guesses were for much shorter periods than it really took. This in turn made good advertising copy.

Ponies—The Cinotee Pony Farm, of Maryland, for years found it hard to market its ponies until the THE MERCHANTS—Gal TWO manager of a big store saw their possibilities as window displays. Fifty were sold in a week, more than the farm had sold in a year.

Cows, "parked" in the lobby of a western bank, fulfilled the hopes placed in them, and drew farmers' attention and patronage. They have also been used as displays by milk dealers to drive home public faith in the quality of milk.

What will a window sell?

The answer, apparently, is everything!

USEFUL THINGS THAT CAN BE SALVAGED IN A STORE

An Oklahoma store that sells an advertised line of men's made-to-measure suits from a large sample book used to throw away the absolete sample books. One day the proprietor wished to find a certain advertisement for information that would help in the preparation of a new insertion. He spent over an hour pulling dusty clippings from a box into which he had been stuffing them as the accumulation became too much for the desk pigeonhole.

Then his eyes fell on a sample book about to be discarded. He had a girl tear out the swatches. He began using the book as a scrap book for his advertisements. In this he not only pastes the clipped advertisements, but adds data such as dates, sales results, notations about the contemporary window displays, suggestions for a similar campaign the next time and the like—for he finds that experience gleaned from a campaign will help him avoid making the same error twice.

That was not the only use he "salvaged" from the book. There are three churches in the district and they have quilting societies. To each of these groups of women in turn he gives the swatches that have been pulled from the book.

There are articles in every store that may well be "salvaged" rather than thrown into the paper baler. A dry-goods store had an inquiry for some spool boxes from a school child. She said her teacher used them in kindergarten work. That gave the saleswoman an idea. From that time on she saved each thread box and sent them over to the school by one of the children, thus making a number of friends.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if bladder bothers You.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become sluggish; they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy, before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for a generation to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

TEACHERS SLEEP IN SCHOOLS.

Windsor Pedagogues Unable to Find Proper Boarding Places.

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 17. — Unable to find rooms in the border municipalities, women teachers of the Windsor Public schools have been provided with sleeping accommodation at Assumption street school.

The shortage of rooming accommodation and houses is explained by official figures, which show that from 10 to 20 new families are arriving weekly in the border municipalities. A majority of these are seeking homes in the vicinity of the big new plant of the General Motors Corporation.

TEACHERS ASK INCREASE.

Toronto Staff Want a Raise of 25 Per Cent.

Toronto, Jan. 17. — About two thousand of the school teachers of the city assembled in the Convocation Hall of the University of Toronto for the purpose of meeting Premier Drury, Hon. R. H. Grant, Minister of Education, Mayor Church and Dr. John Noble, chairman of the board of education, and others, with reference to educational matters.

"This meeting marks the opening of the campaign of the teachers for an increase of 25 per cent in salaries," it was stated.

Old Roman Strikers.

On the word of a decipherer of ancient records, there was, in the year 309 B.C., a strike of the musicians' union in Rome. The officials of Rome, it appears, thought that the musicians should play without pay at a forthcoming festival in honor of Jupiter. The musicians thought otherwise, and although Rome, then engaged in one of the Samnite wars, had little money to spend for music, decided not to "do their bit" by performing without pay. Apparently the argument that they were really playing for Jupiter himself was tried without effect. So the city officials decided on an appeal to public opinion; they evolved a stratagem by which they decoyed the striking musicians to the scene of the festival, and, with all Rome looking expectantly at them, the musicians changed their minds and there was "music as usual."—Christian Science Monitor.

The Rice Queen.

A charming, attractive young woman is at present in London as the representative of the Southern Rice Growers' Association, trying to sell 500,000 tons of rice. She is known in America as "the Rice Queen." In private life she is Mrs. A. M. Hayes, and represents the best type of American business woman.

"There are women in the United States," she says, "who earn as much as £10,000 a year. Plenty are making £2,000 a year. What is the secret? Be an optimist: Don't take any notice of people who tell you that you can't succeed.

"And to women I would say, in addition, make your self attractive. It is a great asset. Dress for the part in business."

Fine Feathers These.

A record price was paid for a small bunch of feathers at Oudtshoorn recently by two American gentlemen of the Washington Smithsonion Institution Expedition, says the Johannesburg (Transvaal) Sunday Times. The feathers were from a female bird and weighed exactly seven ounces, and changed hands at the phenomenal price of £2 per ounce or, £14 for the bunch.

Lord Montagu Earned a Tanner.

"During my experience between Bournemouth, Eastleigh and Waterloo there were, of course, unexpected and amusing incidents. One was when an old lady came up to me at Waterloo, and after a good deal of fumbling in a black handbag gave me sixpence, remarking in a motherly tone: 'Well done, young man. I am so glad you are defying your union.' Again, two children came up, and one said: 'Driver, we haven't got any money to spare, but here are two apples.' Thus age and youth thought alike. It was symbolic. The public almost always subscribed a considerable amount of money at terminal stations, mostly from 'thirds,' in coppers and small money, which shows how grateful people were for any train and to any driver who would take them along to their destination.

"One naval officer at Waterloo said to me on arrival there: 'This is the happiest day of my life!' 'Why?' said I. 'Because I'm to be married to-day, and if I hadn't been able to get up this morning I shouldn't have been in time.' People waved hand kerchiefs from windows, and allotment-holders waggled spades and forks at passing trains. There was once more the tingle of war in the air, the feeling of the nation attacked and compelled to defend itself.

"The comparative desertion of the line led to wild animals and birds beginning to use the permanent way in a manner I had never seen before, and one morning, coming up to London, I put up on the 'road' no fewer than five coveys of partridges between Winchester and Basingstoke."

A King's First Smoke.

King Alfonso has been telling the story of his first cigarette. The incident, it appears, occurred immediately after he had been formally enthroned as King of Spain on attaining his majority on his sixteenth birthday.

Up till that time he had not been allowed to smoke, nor even then was the prohibition withdrawn. Nevertheless he came to the conclusion that, as a ruling monarch, he might at least do as he liked in this respect.

Accordingly he asked his brother-in-law, the Prince of the Asturias, for a cigarette.

"I haven't got one," said the prince, faithful to family orders.

Then the king applied to the officer of the guard, who said solemnly: "I regret that I do not smoke them, your majesty."

At last the young king made his way to the sentry at the palace door, who amiably produced a plug of black tobacco from his trousers' pocket and rolled a cigarette for his majesty, who smoked it proudly through the palace.

"It made me violently sick later on," he said, in telling the story; "but I enjoyed it at the time. I felt, as I puffed and puffed, that I was really and truly grown up at last."

DAN'S EXCUSE

Editor Review— A man is no good if he cannot make a good excuse. I know a man in Peterborough who is always challenging anyone to come into his store. He tells them, that he has got the strongest wrist in the city. One morning, he met his match, and was put down, and the excuse he made was because it was Friday and he had had no meat that morning.

So Dan has a chance, too, to make an exclse. What Dan calls an open winter is not too much snow, so a man can do as he likes because it is open.

We have been running our auto up to January 12th, 1920, and if it had been a hard winter, you couldn't run a car.

BUSINESS FOR UNDERTAKERS

(New York Herald)

Miss Jane O'Ryan, sister of Major General John F. O'Ryan, has done a real public service in drawing the attention of members of Congress to what is probably the most surprising appeal that ever appeared in print. This is published by a journal devoted to the interests of "funeral directors." who are urged by the trade writer to arouse "public opinion" with a view to having our honored dead brought back to America from Flanders and other battlefields of the great war.

But why should the brave be disturbed, the brave who sank to sleep by all their country's wishes blessed. The answer is a simpel one:— "Extra business, gentlemen, legitimate, patriotic. Kindly, sympathetic, remunerative extra business. No increased death rates, no additional number of widows and orphans, only the final laying away of America's sons in the bosom of their dear motherland. The Congress pauses in its vote to hear the expression of the public's wishes. What are you going to do about it?'

It is in all seriousness that the question of "dollars and cents, plus sentiment,' is addressed to "Mr. Director.' He is asked to consider this situation. Suppose someone were to some into his office with a scheme for "increasing the number of funerals this year by more than 50,000," without adding to the mortality in any way! Would not such a one deserve to rank with Swift's true benefactor of the race who made two ears of corn or two blades of grass to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before? Would he not do more essential service to his country than the whole race of politicians put together?

In the same way—so the argument runs—why should not the Representative in Congress from the First Arkansas District, the Hon. T. H. Caraway, be regarded as a true friend of "funeral directors" all over the country, who would benefit thus directly from the bill which is now before the lower house of the national Legislature?

Nothing more unconsciously cynical than his plain "business talk" can be imagined. The combination of profit sentiment and patriotism would be delightful if it were not horrible to those of any sensibility.

This "booming" of trade at the cost of the former soldiers of America and the feelings of their families ought to be effectual in killing the scheme once for all.

Let the dead rest where they fell and in the ground that they consecrated by the great sacrifice!

DISTILLERS ARE A MONTH BEHIND WITH ORDERS

SAY THEY CANNOT KEEP UP WITH ONTARIO'S RUSH ORDER FOR LIQUOR

Montrael, Jan. 17. —— Thirsty ones in Ontario are becoming impatient at the delays they are experiencing in receiving their liquor from Montreal. The trouble appears to be that the exporters here are swamped with orders, and a large number are refusing to take any more until they get caught up with those now on hand.

Two of the largest distilleries in Ontario, from whom the exporters in Montreal have their whiskey shipped direct to the consumer are not taking any more orders for four weeks, it is understood. One of the reasons given for this cessation in shipping is the congestion in orders, and also they are experiencing difficulty in getting the necessary receptacles in which to ship the wet goods.

It is estimated on good authority that six express cars per day leave Montreal for Toronto.

Judicious diet and exercise will frequently improve a man's opinion of his neighbors.

Religion Is Patriotism

It is the Root of Personal Righteousness, the Mainstay of Social Order, the Bulwark of International Peace

The Makers of Canada

The earliest settlers in Canada were roused by the Call of the Church to develop a noble and useful citizenship. Young and old were invited to turn their eyes from material things, and to regard the splendor of unseen realities. Knowing that Religion is the only true safeguard of stability in the State, they built Churches, Schools and Colleges, to train men for the Christian Ministry, and to spread abroad in the land the benefits of education. This they did in their poverty, and thus directed the course of history in Canada to this day.

The Testing of Canada

Because of such sacrifices, there arose in Canada a public spirit hostile towards all injustice, dishonesty and cruelty. The War tested the moral fibre of the Canadians of a later day. Would they choose material ease and wealth, or would they risk all in defence of freedom and the rights of the weak?

Over 400,000 men voluntarily offered their lives, and endured hardness as good soldiers for the defence of equity and fair dealing in all human relationships, and for the vindication of public right. Nor were the people at home less steadfast. Besides bearing the national cost of the War, they gave voluntarily for the help of the soldiers more than $90,000,000. Canada nobly stood the great trial.

Fight the Good Fight

The Menace of To-day

That conflict is ended. Now comes another test. Not only in Canada, but all over the world, sectional and class struggles for material rewards and for mastery threaten the present basis of Society. The vision of spiritual values gained in the War is in peril of being forgotten. The supremacy of sacrifice, the nobility of service, the reality and glory of the Unseen and Eternal, the promises of Christ; these were the things by which we lived during the War. Now there is great danger that they may fade from view, giving place to selfishness and the love of ease.

The great non-Christian peoples of the world comprise two-thirds of the human race. They are mastering our modern scientific knowledge, and if they remain Pagan may yet turn it to our destruction. Paganism stands for the supremacy of Might, the very ideal we fought and conquered in more than four years of war.

Victory only through Christ

How can we retain the heavenly vision? How can the world be guarded against another attempt to establish the Pagan ideal? Only through the Church of Jesus Christ. There is no other agency or society that has any possibility or hope of bringing about a full realization of the brotherhood of all mankind, and the reign of the Prince of Peace.

What the Church Has Done

All the progress of humanity in Civilization for the last 2000 years has been inspired, directly or indirectly, by the Gospel of Jesus Christ. It has ended slavery, protected life, ennobled women, educated the children and safeguarded their lives, sanctified the home, established schools, missions and charities.

The Coming Era

The Church must prepare to meet the needs of the new day. Old standards of life with old habits of thinking and of giving will be wholly inadequate. We must do in our day what our fathers did in theirs. The hope of the world is bound up with the strengthening and extension of the Church of Jesus Christ.

The World's Need is Spiritual

I speak as one standing upon the watch-tower, and know what the need of the land is. It is not material, it is spiritual. Get the spiritual, and the material will follow. The wounds of the world are bleeding, and material things will never heal them. And that is why I hail any movement which brings the great spirit of brotherhood. The one need of England and France today is the healing and the brotherhood of the Cross of Christ.

—Rt. Hon. David Lloyd-George,
Before the Brotherhood Convention, London, September, 1919.

The Forward Movements

FIVE Christian Communions, Anglican, Baptist, Congregational, Methodist, and Presbyterian, are convinced that the time has come to rouse all Christians to a clearer understanding of their calling and stewardship in Christ, their King. They believe that the Church should be equipped adequately with men and money to enable it to meet the needs and opportunities of the New Day.

These five separate Communions are of one mind as to their belief in God, the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth, and in Jesus Christ, His Son, Our Lord. They now declare to their respective constituencies, and also unitedly, to the Canadian people, that the only effective method of making good citizens is by urging men to a more faithful practice of Christianity, by inculcating personal faith in Jesus Christ. They insist that there is no other dependable way of correcting evil tendencies in individual and national life. They call the people to repentance. To all Christians their message is, "Awake, Arise. Fight the Good Fight, For Canada and For the World."

EACH of the Communions named is in the midst of a Forward Movement. Each is seeking by prayer and by earnest effort to accept all its responsibilities. Each is striving to extend its activities in Canada and in Foreign Lands.

Your Church needs your help, but, far more, you need the help of your Church to learn the difficult art of living wisely and well.

Consult your Clergyman. He serves you and your children. Ask him how and when you can serve in this day of national emergency. Give yourself to the task. Say: "Here am I, send me."

FARMERS PURCHASE TWINE IN STATES

CANADIAN FIRMS CLAIM THEY WERE NOT GIVEN FAIR CHANCE TO TENDER

Toronto, Jan. 17.— A contract involving some 100,000 tons of binder twine and about $500,000 has been signed by Mr. J. J. Morrison of the U. F. O. for the United Farmers Co-operative Company, of Ontario, with the International Harvesters' Company of Chicago. This action has caused a certain amount of resentment among the binder twine firms operating in Canada.

Canadian firms, particularly the Plymouth Cordage Company, a two million dollar firm with a mill at Welland claim when they submitted prices they were informed that the contract has already been awarded to an American firm.

"The contract was awarded in the best interests of the United Farmers Co-operative Society of Ontario and I do not care what the Plymouth people say in the matter at all" said T. Loblaw business agent U. F. O. Co-operative Company. "All our cards are on the table."

"We would like to do business with a Canadian firm. It is a matter of dollars and cents and obligations to the people."

FAVORS SUNDAY SKATING.

But Winnipeg Judge Convicted on L. D. A. Complaint.

Winnipeg, Jan. 17.—In fining J. and F. Williamson, owners of a skating rink, for allowing Sunday skating, Sir Hugh John Macdonald said the action of the defendants was advisable, but the Lord's Day Alliance Act compelled prosecution.

Crown Prosecutor R. B. Graham agreed.

ARE YOU WEAK AND RUN DOWN?

IN THIS CONDITION ONLY A TONIC MEDICINE CAN RENEW YOUR HEALTH.

The condition of being "run down" is one that doctors do not recognize as a disease. The physician of today who gets his training in a hospital where only severe disorders are encountered knows little about it. But those who are run down in health know that it is not a fancied affliction.

The expression "run down," applied to health, means a condition in which all the bodily functions are enfeebled. Appetite fails, the digestion is impaired, the nerves are impoverished, the complexion becomes pale or waxy, there is no animation but rather worry and mental depression. Fatigue is a constant symptom. No particular organ being affected, you must look for relief to the blood. As it circulates through every part of the body, any improvement in the condition of the blood is quickly felt throughout the entire system. As a restorer of the blood and builder of weak nerves Dr. Williams' Pink Pills stand at the head of all tonic medicines. Every dose of these pills helps to enrich the blood and strengthen the nerves, and thus the various organs regain their tone and the body recovers its full vigor. Ample proof of this is given in the statement of Mr. William Devine, Gerard street east, Toronto, who says: "Two years ago while employed as a conductor on the Toronto Street Railway, I became much run down. I consulted a doctor who gave me medicine, but it proved fruitless as I was constantly growing weaker. My appetite completely failed and I fell away in weight until I only weighed 126 pounds. I was sometimes taken with fainting spells and finally felt compelled to resign my position. I tried what I thought was lighter work, but with no better results. I was growing weaker and weaker. One day a chum urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but by this time I was heartily tired of medicine, as nothing I had taken did me any good. Finally he bought me a box of the pills and I could no longer refuse to try them. After a time I felt they were helping me and then I gladly continued their use, with the result that I was finally enabled to go back to my old position fully restored to health. I owe this splendid condition to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and can strongly recommend them to any one suffering as I did."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be obtained through any medicine dealer or may be had by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

AI LURE NOT FROM HARD LUCK—

Many an unsuccessful man charges his failure to hard luck, when his eyesight is mostly to blame. Poor eyesight has made him incompetent for the better positions, and he never realized it. Probably his employer could not understand his inability to improve. If you are a young man and going slower than you think you should, let Dr. Fowler examine your eyes and see if the difficulty lies there.

WAS NEVER HUNGREY LIKE OTHER FOLKS

EVEN SIGHT OF FOOD WAS DISTASTEFUL TO THIS VANCOUVER MAN—FEELS FINE NOW.

"My three years of troubles have left me since I began taking Tanlac and I feel as fine as I ever did in my whole life," was the statement made recently by A. J. Trimnell, a well-known iron-moulder, who lives at the Burrard Rooms, 324½ Bowell St., Vancouver, B.C.

"I had indigestion so bad that everything I ate disagreed with me and caused so much gas to form that I felt like I was going to choke," continued Mr. Trimmell. "My heart would palpitate so bad that I could almost hear it beat and I would get so dizzy at times I could hardly stand on my feet. I was never hungry and a few mouthfuls would be all I could eat, and many a time the sight of food would make me deathly sick at my stomach and I had to leave the table without ever sitting down. I had pains in my back just over my kidneys and they were so bad I had to quit work at times and rest. I had severe headaches that nearly drove me frantic, and I was so nervous and restless that many a night I could get only a few hours sleep and then it was broken and irregular.

"During these years I tried many different medicines but nothing ever helped me until I started taking Tanlac. Well, it put me on the right road and from the very beginning my improvement has been steady until I have been restored to perfect health. I have a splendid appetite and no matter what I eat I digest it without any trouble at all. I am not bothered with dizzy spells or palpitation any more, and the pains in my back have disappeared entirely. I don't have any more headaches and the nervousness is all gone. In fact, I haven't an ache of any kind. I am sleeping sound all night long and I have so much more strength and energy that I feel like my old self again. You can put me down for Tanlac because I am going to boost it every time I get a chance."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Canopus, Giant of Suns.

Canopus, the giant of the solar system, is, according to a recent calculation, 49,000 times as bright as the sun, it is 18,000 times larger in surface, and 2,420,000 times larger in volume. The distance of it from the earth, according to this calculation, is 489 light years.

"Suppose," says another authority, "that instead of being at this enormous distance it were placed in the centre of the solar system, in lieu of the sun? It would then occupy .85 of the space lying without the orbit of Venus, and as seen from the earth would subtend an angle of about 70 deg. of arc. Thus, when its lower limb was on our horizon, its upper would be within 20 deg. of the zenith. Needless to say, no life could exist on earth with such a neighbor."

Music Turns Itself.

Stopping to turn a stubborn page, the musician not infrequently finds the effect of his performance spoiled by an awkwardd pause. From France now comes an invention which will obviate this annoyance, says Popular Mechanics. The music is printed, not on pages, but on a long strip, as is the practice with music for the player piano. Placed on motor driven rolls, the music passes before the eyes of the player at any desired speed. The controlling lever is conveniently placed at one side.

Casket Was 120 Years Old.

The casket used in the recent funeral of Grand Prince Yi of Korea was fashioned 120 years ago, and was coated with black lacquer 2½ inches thick. In Korea it has been a custom from olden times to keep various sizes of coffins in the chosei (long life) palace, and to apply a new coat of lacquer twice each year, in spring and autumn.

WHAT TORONTO HAS DONE FOR HOUSIHG

The Toronto Housing Company had its inception about the same time that Dr. Hastings began his housing activities. It started as a committee of the Civic Guild, with the late Prof. Edward Kylie as Chairman. The next step was a joint committee representing the Guild, the City Council, the Board of Trade, the Manufacturers' Association and the Trades and Labor Council. A small committee spent some months in studying the subject and a good deal of intermation was got together. One of the first conclusions reached was that there was little outside of England worth studying as an example for Canada. For 50 years England had been legislating to improve housing. The alarming percentage of men of military age found unfit for service during the South African war gave a great impetus to the movement for better housing, and a great number of constructive undertakings were launched, including demonstrations of the garden city the garden suburb and the co-partnership plan of building. Then in 1909 came the Housing and Town Planning Act, the first legislation anywhere looking to a comprehensive solution of the housing problem.

The Toronto committee decided to follow the British practise and build, being convinced that little progress could be made by agitation and legislation alone. A stock company was organized and as the result of a rather arduous campaign 165 citizens subscribed $100,000. This was considered entirely inadequate.

The committee had a meeting with the late Hon. W. J. Hanna and laid all their cards face up on the table. The result was the first Ontario Housing Act, which was drafted for the committee by Mr. C. J. Lash, and passed the Legislature without a dissenting voice, almost as it left his hands. It was based on the idea of co-operation between public spirit and the public credit. A municipality was empowered to guarantee the bonds of a housing company to the extent of 85 per cent. of the value of its property and the municipality was given adequate control of the operations of the company.

Under authority of the act the City Council by by-law provided for guaranteeing the bonds of the Toronto Housing Company up to $850,000. By September, 1914, Spruce Court and Riverdale Courts were constructed, providing accommodation for 242 families. At Riverdale Courts the company took five acres of waste land that would otherwise have developed very badly, and converted it into one of the show-places of the city. Then came the war. Riverdale Courts was but two-thirds completed and the company had 1,000 feet of vacant land on its hands, besides a large suburban property on which a garden village had been projected.

The Toronto Housing Company is one of the most interesting housing undertakings in the world, if properly directed, but it has not been understood or appreciated by the citizens. If it is a failure from the standpoint of housing the fault will lie, in the first instance, with Council, which backed its note to the extent of three-quarters of a million dollars and then forgot it.

The Toronto Commission.

The Toronto Housing Commission is contemporary history. Early in 1917 Sir William Hearst was asked to assist the holding of a Housing and Town-planning Convention. Instead, he offered to loan the municipalities $2,000,000 for housing. There was no response. The next year the Dominion, inspired by the same idea, enlarged the offer to $25,000,000. The Ontario Government appointed a Housing Director and the ladelling out of the money was begun, but with what result cannot be known until a competent survey has been made of the work done.

The gentlemen selected to compose the Toronto Commission objected to the supervision of the Provincial Housing Director as required by the Hearst Housing Act. Representatives of the city approached Sir William Hearst and asked for a separate act, stating that if he would give it the city would do its own financing and not draw on the Government loan fund. Statements since made by Mr. Bradshaw and Mr. H. H. Williams seem to indicate that the money for improved housing in Toronto is to loose 6 per cent. instead of 5 per cent., the rate at which the Government loan is offered. Who will ultimately pay the one per cent. seems to depend upon the terms upon which the new Government will implement the promise of a separate Housing Act for Toronto given by Sir William Hearst. The Commission began operations on May 13 with large and handsome offices in the Temple building. It has undertaken 238 houses, of which over 30 have been completed. Considerable criticism is heard of the design, the plan, the construction and the cost of the houses. It is rumored that the Commission does not intend to undertake any further work, and nothing had been erected in the way of real housing improvement in Toronto.

Housing betterment cannot be accomplished by money grants. Housing is the key problem in any scheme of social reconstruction, and its solution must be based upon (1) town planning, (2) the elimination of speculation in land, and (3) the ultilization of the public credit.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

"Amen Corner."

The phrase "amen corner" is said to have originated in London, where, at the end of the Paternoster row, the monks at one time finished their recitation of the "Pater Noster" as they went to procession on Corpus Christi day at St. Paul Cathedral. They began in Paternoster row with the Lord's prayer in Latin, continuing it to the end of the street, and then said "amen" at the corner of the row. As used in this country the phrase describes the corner of a church where the elderly members sit and pronounce the word "amen" at intervals.

African Elephants Scarce

One of the many after-war shortages that the world will have to suffer, but which will not prove the hardship that other lacks have imposed upon the people, is that of African elephants. It is all because the "mighty pachyderms," as the circus bills say, have appropriated the irrigation canals in Southern Africa for their own particular bath tubs, and when they plunge into the cooling water to enjoy their dips they are not particular about the manner in which they tread about the dams and banks. As a result much damage has been done and the agriculturists have been waging a relentless war on the ponderous and destructive animals. Many housewives who have male members of the family of the "splashing" variety can appreciate the feelings of a South African farmer when he views the clutter left by the elephants.

Recent reports say that no more elephants remain in Zululand, that Southern Rhodesia's herds have been wiped out and that few are left in the Eastern Transvaal. The African elephants, unlike those from India, are far from docile and are not easily domesticated.

"FAIR AND WARMER" AT GRAND ON WEDNESDAY

MOST POPULAR PLAY OF ITS KIND NOW BEFORE THE PUBLIC

Spaeth & Company will present their newest big success, "Fair and Warmer," whose fame has spread all over the country on the strength of its year-long run of unprecedented prosperity at the Eltinge and Harris Theatres, New York, and six months at the Cort Theatre, Chicago, at the Grand on Wednesday evening only.

Avery hopwood, author of this farce classic, is also the author of "Seven Days" and "Nobody's Widow," and started the long-run farce on the career it has never since abandoned. So Mr. Hopwood is fairly entitled to his rank as America's first master of farce writing.

Spaeth & Company, who present "Fair and Warmer," established their reputation as pickers of winners by "Within the Law," etc. When they followed this success with "Fair and Warmer," the wise acres said. "Trust Spaeth & Company.

In "Fair Warmer," Avery Hopwood uses just the idea he knows best how to put through its paces—a satiric and richly humorous complication arising from the fact that two respectable young persons try to be wicked without knowing how, and end by covering themselves with ignominy, while the pair at whom they aimed their wickedness, as retaliation, go joyously scot free.

"Fair and Warmer" begins in the early evening, stays up all night and comes to a festive conclusion at noon of the following day, after having disrupted two households, devasted one "tame robin," reassorted and finally hailed blessings and benedictions upon righteousness and uprighteous with an impartial hand.

PICTURE VERSION OF THE PLUNDERER

FILM FILLED WITH THRILLS WILL BE AT GRAND MON. AND TUESDAY

The William Fox 1919 version of "The Plunderer," which will be shown at the Grand Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, is crowded with thrills. In the very beginning of the screen story William Farnum, who is the star of the picture, is made a prisoner in a mine when his enemies roll a giant stone down the mountainside and into the mouth of the mine. His struggle to get out and to save his companion keeps the viewer on edge all the time. Then there is the strike of the miners working for Farnum, which is followed by the blowing up of the reservoir that gives power for the working of the mine. Other thrills are worked in and finally the big one—the bare handed fight between Farnum and about twenty husky miners. If Shakespeare were alive today he, too, would call it "Some Scrap."

Scene from Avery Hopwood's gale of laughter, "FAIR AND WARMER," at the Grand on Wednesday evening.

Salmon from British Columbia Fisheries

Unloading Salmon from Scows, Westminster, British Columbia.

There are salmon and salmon, but the finest specimens of this sporting fish come from the waters of British Columbia. There is a variety of salmon on the Atlantic coast which is highly prized as a delicacy, but the supply is very limited; the catch on the Pacific coast is about thirty times as large and also very fine in size and quality.

The Salmon canning is one of the principal industries of British Columbia and the Fraser River catch is now almost looked upon with envy owing to the tremendous decrease of the salmon catch in the State of Washington, where the famous variety called "Sockeye" once abounded in Puget Sound in such enormous quantities. It is now feared that unless the United States Government prohibit fishing in Puget Sound the salmon industry will suffer.

To date the State of Washington has failed to accede to the Canadian proposals for a joint control of the Puget Sound and Fraser River fisheries, but the Dominion Government is again taking the matter up, proposing a joint protection for fifteen years.

The reason for salmon fishing is short, being about 48 days in the Fraser River section and about 62 days, including Sundays, for the northern canners. The British Columbia catch runs about 1,500,000 cases of 48 pounds each a year.

There are five varieties—Sockeye averaging 6 pounds, maturing in the fourth year; Quinnet, 18 to 30 pounds, sometimes reaching 100 pounds, maturing between the fourth and sixth year; Silver, 3 to 8 pounds, mature at three years; Pink, 3 to 6 pounds, mature at two years, and Chum, 10 to 12 pounds, mature at three to six years.

All these fish return once on maturity to spawn in the stream where they were hatched, and both sexes die after spawning. The main fisheries are the Fraser River, Skeena River, Naas River, Rivers Inlet and around Vancouver Island. The fish are caught in gill nets and seines and by trolling.

The Potato.

In its native country, on the mountains of Chile and Peru, writes Jean Henri Fabre, in Field, Forest and Farm, the potato in its wild state is a poor diminutive tuber about as large as a hazelnut. Man takes the worthless wild stock into his garden, plants it in rich soil, tends it, waters it; and behold, from year to year the potato thrives more and more, gaining in size and in nutritive properties, and finally becomes a farinaceous tuber as large as your two fists.

Ancestors of Sheep.

All the present breeds of sheep are probably descended from the Mouflon, the European wild breed. The other leading wild breeds are the Argali of central Asia, and the Bighorn of the Rocky mountains in America; but it is doubtful if any domesticated varieties have been evolved from these. All the recently opened countries have been stocked from Europe, and nearly all from English breeds, with the exception of the Spanish merino.

The Almighty Dollar.

Bribery has been the downfall of many public men during the course of history. Francis Bacon, the greatest thinker of his age, was ruined by his cupidity. Lord Chancellor Macclesfield and Waterbury were destroyed by the same vice. Benedict Arnold sold a fort in New York to the enemy for $31,575. For this same sin Gorgei betrayed Austria, Ahithopel forsook David and Judas delivered up Christ.

PICTURES OF FIGHT WORTH MILLIONS

IF THEY ARE ALLOWED TO BE SHOWN IN THE UNITED STATES

As large as the gate receipts will be when Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier face each other in the ring, it begins to look as though the moving picture rights to the match will be worth even more than the money taken in at the gate. Dempsey already is under contract by a large moving picture concern and for several weeks passed has been working before the camera at Los Angeles. Carpentier is considering an offer from another American concern to do stunts for the camera and one of the leading moving picture men of the country has put in the largest bid for the bout. Altogether the movies appear to have a strangle hold on the fight.

There never was a match in which interest was so world wide as the present one. France, England and the colonies as well as other countries in Europe have been aroused and are taking an absorbing interest in Carpentier and his attempt to land the heavyweight championship. No matter where the fight is held, only a very small per centage of the millions of people interested will be able to see the battle, but all will be able to see the movies.

At present there is a law in the U. S. that prevents moving pictures of a ring contest being shipped from one state to another. That means that if the battle were held in an interior state the pictures could not be shipped abroad. But if it is held in any of the coast or border line states there is nothing to prevent the films from being sent around the world. England got all the fight pictures taken in New York during the Frawley days.

It is more than probable that a vigorous attempt will be made to have the law repealed so that the pictures can be shown all over the United States. The reason for the law no longer exists. It was aimed directly at the pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson battle, which so stirred up race prejudice that there were riots between whites and black in many cities where the films were shown.

After Johnson was deposed the law was allowed to stand because many states do not permit boxing. Some authorities objected even to showing pictures of something that was unlawful. However, now that boxing has grown so big, it may be that this narrowminded point of view no longer will be allowed to prevail at Washington.

Should the ban on fight pictures be lifted it is possible to estimate the value of the movie rights to a battle showing Carpentier the winner. In that case the pictures would be worth millions and the promoter could well afford to give up the entire gate receipts to the fighters provided he was entitled to keep the films. If Dempsey won, the pictures would still be worth a fortune provided Carpentier put up a battle.

LINDSAY TIE UP INTERMEDIATE SERIES BY DEFEATING THE PETES

Score Was 5 to 4 After a Fast Brilliant Game of Hockey, Winning Goal Came With Three Minutes to go in Final Period.

The large crowd which filled the Brock street rink last night to see the clash between the Peterborough and Lindsay Intermediates waited patiently until 9.30 for Referee Box, the Toronto Dental star, to arrive and start the players off. Their patience, however, was rewarded, because, although the home team lost, it was one of those battles royal that anyone might win up to the last minute.

Although the game was fast and all used everything they had during the time they were on the ice, from last night's performance it must be said that never before were two teams more evenly matched. The Lindray fans may, say more shots were fired at Murray than at O'Loughlin. But then "Mickey" is part of the local team and must be considered as such.

Murray is certainly proving himself a top-notcher as a goal guardian. His two performances against Lindsay have been spectacular and he is cool all the time. He stopped a host of shots last night, many of them difficulty ones, and the winning goal, which came within three minutes of the end of play, would never have found the net had it not broken the strap in "Mickey's" skate.

The local defence worked nicely. Both Hapin and Pete Thornton use their weight to good advantage and Capt. Coombs and Co. found them very difficult to pass. In fact, they rarely attempted to go through, but contented themselves with shooting from outside.

On the forward line Rose was, perhaps, the best, although Evans played a good heady game. In the first period Evans played around centre ice with the puck in Lindsay terreitory, working largely the old rover position. This kept the opposition pretty well bottled up and the locals were unfortunate not to add more to the scoring column in this period. Harry Thornton worked hard all night and at times was very effective. Jackson turned in some good work while he was on. Cherett, who was suffering from a very badly cut lip, was on the ice only a few minutes and never really got warmed to his task.

The brunt of the work on the Lindsay forward line fell to Capt. Coombs at left wing. He is a big fellow, a fast skater and works hard. He was handed a rather rough passage last night by the Petes, which he did not appear to enjoy. McEllrroy tried hard, but "Chuck" Carew was "all in" during the greater part of the game.

Garnett in his first game with the Intermediates was second to none on the ice for effectiveness and all-round hockey. He blocked nicely and his rushes were always dangerous. His mate on the defence, Flavelle, worked hard and only for his inability to find the net, would have given the locals something serious to think about.

Started Fast.

The ice was as hard and smooth as glass, the puck gliding splendidly. The game opened with the Lindsay forwards tearing down on the local citadel. They were chased into a corner and Halpin, receiving the rubber, rushed it to the other end. Then the play grew fast and furious with most of it at the Lindsay end of the rink. Rose and H. Thornton bored right in while Evans played around centre ice and kept the Lindsay forwards from playing the boards.

Body checks began to become heavy and Box determined to keep it clean. Evans was banished and soon after his return Halpin got a rest in the penalty box. The play was all over the ice until Coombs grabbed the disc from a mix-up and scored the first goal.

Garnett was penalized and shortly after his return a pretty piece of three-men combination gave H. Thornton the puck in front of the goal and he quickly tallied.

Garnett shot and the puck glanced off Halpin's hip into the net. Soon after Halpin rushed nicely and Jackson grabbed the rebound, scooping it into the net, tieng the score agian.

Second Period Fast.

The second period was as pretty an exhibition of hockey as has ever been witnessed here. The puck was rushed from one end to the other with dazzling rapidity, but the puck-carrier was usually chased into a corner or forced to shoot from well out.

Soon after the period opened Rose grabbed a rebound and slammed it in, putting the locals in the lead for the first time. Carew was penalized. Lindsay tried hard to tie the score and finally their efforts were rewarded when McEllroy slammed one in.

Rose, who was using his weight rather roughly, was put off for spilling Coombs. The Petes again jumped into the lead when Halpin and P. Thornton combined nicely, the former getting the goal.

Tied Again.

Soon after the final period commenced Lindsay tied the score once more. Then the pace started to tell upon the players and they went after each other like real enemies. P. Thornton was put off, followed by McFee, Lipsett, Evans, P. Thornton and Garnett. The last two got five minutes for mixing it at the south end of the rink and as there was only four minutes to go left the ice for the dressing room.

Finally, with a little over two minutes to go, Coombs put one through Murray's skate, breaking the strap to do it.

The last couple of minutes were fast and furious, but the Petes had not the stamina to place the puck past the Lindsay goalie.

The Line-up.

Lindsay—O'Loughlin, goal; Garnett and Flavell, defence; McEllroy, centre; Carew, right wing; Coombs, left wing; Lipsett and McFee, subs.

Peterborough—Murray, goal; Halpin and P. Thornton, defence; Rose, centre; H. Thornton, right wing; Evans, left wing; Jackson and Cherett, subs.

BABE RUTH ANSWERS FRAZEE'S STATEMENTS

Babe Ruth is not averse to playing with the Yankees, but he says Frazee sold him for spite. Some people with an eye for figures compare a purchase price of $2700 with a sale price of $100,000 and hold there was considerable profit in the transaction.

In an effort to still the wrath of Boston fans, Frazee had a few uncomplimentary things to say about the big home run hitter, and these remarks have roused Babe's ire. Delving into a dusty past, Babe drags forth numerous grievances, among them the following:

"Take the Ruth Day in Boston, for instance, the Knights of Columbus, of which order I am a member, turned out to honor me, and what did he do? He raised the price of the grand stand seats and held them up. After the game he called me into the office and gave me a nickel cigar for drawing $2,000 people into the par." Was the weed a Babe Ruth special from the pitcher's own factory? No wonder the memory rankles.

"I am not worth the money in Boston," says Ruth, "but I am in New York. That is a swell laugh, but the Boston fans are the ones who are being made the suckers. I am refused the privilege of playing in my favorite city all because the man who owns the club is money mad."

Met rate of the Weak.

It seems that there can be no doubt that the cliff dwellers were exterminated by their more savage and warlike neighbors, the men being killed and the women being adopted into the tribe of the conquerors, though in some cases migrations may have become necessary as a result of drought or pressure from outside tribes.

Great Care Taken of Silk.

Silk is the most costly of all fibers, and in the raw state represents a value so great as to be guarded in its transportation like a shipment of bullion. It is shipped from coast to coast in special, solid express trains, under strong guard, the shipments ranging in value from $5,000,000 to $25,000,000.

Fruits of Old.

Many of the fruits and vegetables now eaten in England were almost unknown to our forefathers. Not until Henry VIII's time were raspberries or strawberries or cherries grown in England, and we do not read of the turnip, cauliflower and quince being cultivated before the sixteenth century.

Big Man in His Day.

Goliath, the Philistine giant, must have caused a lot of trouble for the army quartermasters of his day. How did they get a regulation uniform to fit him for he stood eleven feet three inches in his stocking feet; if, indeed, Philistines of those times wore stockings.—Boston Post.

RECIPROCITY WITH THE UNITED STATES

HAS BEEN AGREED UPON WITH REGARD TO TREATMENT OF SOLDIERS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 17.—The United States Congress having passed the necessary legislation, the provisional agreement entered into between the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment and the United States Bureau of War Risk Insurance, which has been acted on temporarily, has become definitely operative. Under this agreement, all ex-members of the U. S. forces resident in Canada who require medical attention for disabilities due to or aggravated by war service, may apply to the medical representative of the department for examination. Should treatment be considered necessary, it will be furnished through the institutions and clinics of the department. Primary Classes.

The next stage to the Cradle Roll is the Primary Class, where the little tots of four and five years are taken in hand and with the aid of sand tray, pictures, etc., instructed in Bible truths suitable to their age. These classes are held in connection with the company meeting on Sunday afternoons.

Directory Class.

Held at 10 a.m. each Sunday at the Salvation Army Citadel, when the young people are instructed by a series of questions and answers on the Bible, etc. All children welcome.

TORONTO FEARS RETURN OF FLU

CANADIAN SHIPS FOR CANADIAN EXPORTS

The Board of Trade is advis-d by the head office of the Ca-adian National Railways, "of which Mr. D. C. Wood is gene-l manager, that direct steam-hip service has now been estab-ished with South America, ouching the ports of Pernam-buco, Rio De Janeiro, Santos and Buenos Aires.

Canadian exchange rates will e hastened to normal if Cana-dian exporters will direct ship-ments via Canadian Government hips. The Government has, at public expense, established a corporation known as the Cana-dian Government Merchant Mar-ine, Limited, which is operated y the Canadian National Rail-way Board. Twenty-six ships are already in this service.

Canada has in actual opera-tion eleven ships sailing between our ports and those of the Unit-ed Kingdom: ten connect with the British West Indies and Cuba; three reach South America ports, and two Australia and New Zealand.

This will directly interest the manufacturers of Peterborough who are doing an increasing export trade with South America. Brazil and the Argentine Republic are anxious to cultivate closser business relations with Canadian exporters. Communications addressed to the Canadian Trade Commissioners at any of the larger centres in South America will be promptly answered.

Referring to the balance of trade and rates of exchange it is already certain that British trade will soon reach normal. British ships are now bringing in a freight revenue of more than $5,000,000 per day. Under such influences the stability of exchange will soon be restored.

The Board of Trade will be glad to give all desired information to its members who are interested in exports or imports or in the development of Canada's Merchant Marine.

ATTACKS ARE SUDDEN AND HIGH PERCENTAGE OF CASES FATAL

(Canadian Press Despatch)

The disease is marked by a suddenness of attack and high percentage of fatalities. Hundreds of persons are dying daily in Warsaw, reports show, while three-quarters of the hospital attendants have been stricken. The doctors are amazed at the almost instant infection upon exposure and the quick development of the disease.

Montreal City Council adopted a resolution endorsing the building of a 16-storey hotel.

BUY AT HOME CAMPAIGN IS IMPORTANT QUESTION

MERCHANTS OF THE CITY BUILDING UP REAL LIVE ORGANIZATION

Ald. Frank Whitehouse, the president of the Mercantile Association, reports that the merchants are coming together splendidly, at their meetings in the Board of Trade rooms, and would, before long, have a real live organization to make this the magnetic trading centre for miles around. One of the important questions that will be taken up is a sound economic foundation for the buy-at-home campaign.

The merchants are here to serve the customers and are dependent upon the populous for their trade developments and with the formation of the association will work together to make the retail trade economic and attractive.

HOLLAND WILL FAIL IN HER DUTY BY REFUSING TO GIVE UP EX-KAISER

Text of Allies' Note to Netherlands Government Made Public To-day—Should Associate With Entente Powers in Bringing Violator of International Morality and Treaties to Justice.

Paris, Jan. 19.—Holland is told, in the Allied note demanding the extradition of former Emperor Wilhelm, that she will not fulfil her international duty if she refuses to associate herself with the Entente Powers in chastizing the crimes committed by Germans during the war. The text of the note sent to The Hague was made public this morning. It informs Holland that the Allied Powers have decided to put into execution immediately Article 227 of the Versailles reaty, which arraigns Wilhelm for the supreme offence against international morality and the sanctity of treaties. Consequently the Powers address to the Netherlands Government an official demand to deliver into their hands the former emperor in order that he may be judged.

One paragraph of the note, which is signed by Premier Clemenceau, reads: "The Powers cannot conceive that the Netherlands Government can regard with less reprobation than themselves the immense responsibility of the former emperor."

SOME OF THE EX-KAISER'S CRIMES.

"Among so many crimes," the note recalls, "the cynical violation of the neutrality of Belgium and Luxemurg, the barbarous system of hostages, massed deportations, systematic devastation without military reasons, the submarine war," and declares: "For all of which acts responsibility, at least moral, reaches the supreme chief, who ordered them, or abused his unlimited powers to break or permit others to break the most sacred rules of human nconscience. The Powers cannot conceive," it adds, "that the Netherlands would regard with less reprobation than themselves the responsibility weighing upon the ex-emperor. Holland would not be fulfilling her international duty if she refused to associate herself with other nations, so far as she is able, to prosecute, or at least not impede, the punishment of crimes committed."

DUTY OF THE ALLIED POWERS.

The note points out that it is the duty of the Powers to insure execution of Article 227, without entering into argument, because it is not a question of public accusation having throughout a legal character, but an act of high international policy, imposed by the universal conscience, in which legal forms are employed solely to insure the accused body guarantees such as have hitherto been unknown in public law.

It concludes by expressing the conviction that Holland, one of the first to claim a place in the League of Nations, will not desire to cover by moral authority violation of the essential principles of the solidarity of nations, and that all are interested to prevent a return of a similar catastrophe.

ANOTHER REMAND FOR GUISE BAGLEY

PLEADS GUILTY TO FOUR CHARGES OF THEFT—OTHER CHARGE WITHDRAWN

After a period of two months' confinement in the county jail J. G. Guise-Bagley appeared before the county judge this morning.

He pleaded guilty to the four charges of theft brought against him and asked for a six weeks' remand for sentence, during which time he hopes to be able to make restitution.

His solicitor, Mr. F. D. Kerr, stated that he was in telegraphic communication with both his brothers and he was still hopeful of receiving the necessary fund from them to make restitution for the money J. G. Guise-Bagley had stolen. It was due to the disturbed financial conditions in the old country that the money had not yet arrived. He was very hopeful that satisfactory arrangements might be made inside of six weeks.

Both the judge and Crown Attorney Hatton were agreeable to this, the latter stating that if restitution were made the accused might properly be given his liberty on suspended sentence.

The charge of performing a criminal operation was withdrawn as the Crown had no evidence to produce.

LIFTING RUSSIAN BLOCKADE

Details as to Financing Trade are Not Yet Arranged.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 19.—Details of how the Allies are to finance trade with the people of Soviet Russia under a modified Russian blockade have not as yet been announced. It is contended in some quarters that the decision of the Supreme Council to reopen trade conditions was not a sudden one, but had been the subject of negotiations for months past and that the initiative in these negotiations was taken by the Russian co-operative societies.

DRURY CABINET IS NOT FACING CRISIS AND WILL NOT RESIGN

Hope of Finding Seat for Attorney General Raney Not Yet Abondoned—Sensational Story in Morning Papers Branded a Fake.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 19.—The report in a local morning paper of a Cabinet crisis because of the difficulty of finding a seat for Hon. W. E. Raney, was branded as "wild, false, sensational" today by every member of the Cabinet at the present time, including Hon. R. H. Grant, who is the Cabinet representative on the committee commissioned to find seats for the ministers who do not as yet represent constitutencies. The report has it that an emergency meeting of the Cabinet was held Saturday night, at which the committee, headed by J. J. Morrison, U.F.O. secretary, reported to the Cabinet that they had given up in their effort to find a seat for Mr. Raney.

As result of this, it was reported, the Cabinet had set Wednesday as the last day upon which they would hold office unless in the meantime a seat was secured for the Attorney-General.

It was ascertained this morning that there was no meeting of the Cabinet Saturday night. Of eleven ministers only two were in the city at that time. These were Hon. W. E. Raney, whose home is in Toronto, and the Premier. The Cabinet did not meet Saturday, either in secret session or otherwise, Hon. Mr. Grant stated today.

"I left town Thursday and did not return until this morning. Moreover, the Cabinet has never met upon the subject of finding seats for three ministers that work has been left to the committee."

"Has the committee given up the task of finding a constituency for Mr. Raney?"

"Absolutely no. There has never been a discussion, word or thought of such a possibility on the part of the committee."

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

MONDAY, JANUARY 19, 1920.

THE VETERANS' CONVENTION.

PETERBOROUGH has an opportunity to give expression to its appreciation of the services rendered their country by the veterans of the late war, when the Provincial Convention of the G. W. V. A. is held in this city on March 11, 12 and 13. It is expected that between five and six hundred delegates will be in attendance. They will come from all parts of the Province and will represent the best in the membership of the organization, just as the veterans collectively are made up of the finest that could be found in the young manhood of Canada. The holding of the convention here will be one of the best advertisements this city has ever had. The proceedings will be featured in all the leading dailies. What Peterborough does on behalf of the soldier boys will be duly noted the country over.

The presence of so many strangers in the city will tax the hotels beyond their capacity, and the majority of the delegates will have to find accommodation in private houses. No one need hesitate to open his home to this class of visitors. They will be guests whom any one should be proud of an opportunity to entertain, and guests, too, who will pay their way. Nothing like free accommodation is asked for. The delegates will neither look for nor accept charity.

There will, naturally, be something in the way of a civic reception. Mayor McIntyre and Ald. Crowe, the latter chairman of the committee that looks after such affairs, have the opportunity of their official careers to do something worthy of the great occasion. The Board of Trade is not likely to pass up the chance to welcome the visitors. If money for the purpose is needed, the citizens will not hesitate if asked to contribute.

No such convention, either as to size or importance was ever yet held in Peterborough. It will be a tax beyond all question on the hospitality of the city, but Peterborough citizens will prove themselves equal to the demands likely to be made upon them. Aside altogether from the sacrifices which they have made and the exalted service which they have rendered their country, the visitors would be entitled to everything of the best at the disposal of the city. But as veterans of the late war, they have special claims upon the consideration of those who stand to them in the capacity of hosts.

When the convention here is over, the same delegates will leave in a body to attend the Dominion gathering at Montreal. Let the recollections of Peterborough which they carry away with them be of a reception whole-hearted and enthusiastic.

EXPERIMENTAL FARM FOR PETERBORO'.

YEARS AGO, when the Agricultural College with its experimental farm adjunct was established at Guelph, Peterborough County was a close competitor for the honor, and missed securing the institution by a narrow margin. Peterborough County now has another opportunity in the same line. The Provincial Government proposes to set up four experimental farms, two in the eastern and two in the western section of the Province. The agitation to secure one of these has already begun.

It started in the local branch of the U. F. O. in this city last Monday night. It was taken up at the meeting of the Plowmen's Association last Saturday, and the Board of Trade has already taken action. The directors of the Industrial Exhibition can be relied upon to give the matter their warmest support. There seems no reason on earth why this county cannot secure one of the farms. Its record as an agricultural centre ranks second to none in Eastern Ontario, and the location is in every sense one that is highly desirable.

One of the best arguments that can be employed in favor of the establishing of one of these farms in this county is the fact that the city of Peterborough has a Normal school. A practical knowledge of agriculture is now insisted upon as one of the essentials in the equipment of a teacher. This cannot be secured here under present conditions. Every summer numbers of teachers from this county are under the necessity of going to Guelph to take a course in agriculture. No Normal school is complete without such a farm adjunct, and no better reason could possibly be urged why an experimental farm should be established in this county.

The object of an experimental farm is to give practical illustrations in every department of agriculture, something that cannot be attained by lectures alone. The modern methods as to efficiency are demonstrated. The best in the way of raising fruits, all kinds of grains and stock, is shown by experts. And, best of all, an experimental farm pays its way, instead of imposing additional burdens upon the taxpayers. The prize in sight is worth going after. T. Tooms, M.L.A., now has an opportunity to render the riding a real service, backed up as he is sure to be by every organization and all classes in the community.

MR. DEWART'S LITTLE JOKE.

MR. HARTLEY DEWART introduces another of his famous veins of pleasantry into the political situation in Ontario. He offers to give Premier Drury a chance to contest a seat in Toronto in order that the Prime Minister of Ontario may not find himself under the necessity of appearing before the public as a homeless member of the Cabinet. Mr. Dewart does not say what seat he proposes to open for the purpose, but it is easy to imagine that he has his own in mind and that his real purpose is to defy Premier Drury to combat. In this way the leader of the Liberals could make a cheap hero of himself by provoking a contest in which the odds were all in his favor. He challenges the Premier to a game of cards which he holds himself, with the deck carefully stacked, and would not even give his opponent a chance to cut the deck.

A farmer candidate, even if he be Premier of Ontario, seeking the support of a Toronto constituency, would be considerable of a comedy. An avowed temperance man as Premier Drury is, running for office in the constituency that has twice elected Mr. Dewart largely, if not entirely, on his well-known opposition to temperance legislation, would be nothing short of tragic. Mr. Dewart is safe to take his present stand. No one is likely to call his bluff.

How would Mr. Dewart like to have the tables turned? Suppose, for example, Representative McDonald of East Peterorough should make way for Premier Drury, would Mr. Dewart be willing to resign his own seat in Toronto and enter the lists against Premier Drury in the rural constituency, especially in a constituency where the people would be likely to pass judgment on the Liberal leader's attitude on the temperance question?

Mr. Drury regrets the fact that the Premier of Ontario lacks a legislative seat. But why worry? The Premier is the leader of a legislative group that outnumbers the following of Mr. Dewart himself almost two to one. The Premier has the confidence of the party that was carried into power at the last election. No such claim can be set up for Mr. Dewart, who in that same election lost ground

MACKENZIE KING'S TOUR.

HON. MACKENZIE KING, the new Federal Liberal leader, never enjoyed a reputation as an astute politician. He is likely to lose it now as a result of the speaking tour which he is making in the Dominion. The Liberals' one hope of support is the farmers of Canada. Mr. King is alienating their support by his attacks on the concerted political action among the residents of the rural communities. He assumes that they are making a mistake in cutting loose from their former political affiliations and essaying to go their way alone. Instead of trying to win them back to the fold, he simply drives them further away by the very harshness of his adjurations. The Liberal newspapers that are featuring Mr. King's public addresses are really rendering a service to the party now in power.

If Mr. King's free trade propaganda should by any chance make him friends in the rural communities he will lose supporters in the cities. He has no hope of success without the undivided support of Quebec, and his free trade doctrine will in that Province turn friends into enemies.

Mr. King is anxious for an election. He is willing to take a mere gambler's chance; having lost everything but his last coin, he is willing to risk that in a final throw of the dice.

SMOKED AT SIX; VIGOROUS AT EIGHTY

Does tobacco shorten life?

Henry Holt, the New York publisher, is afraid he will not live long enough to determine this important question. Recently, full of youth and vigor, he celebrated the eightieth anniversary of his birth.

He outlined some of the things he believed had enabled him to outdo the slotted span of man. First, he made this confession:

"I never smoked before I was 6 years old, and then only at rare intervals until I was nearly 11. For the last 20 years I have smoked only after dinner, but—after dinner I have smoked all I wanted to—usually four to six cigars, sometimes a dozen."

Ten years ago Mr. Holt announced he would retire, but day in and day out during that decade he has ridden half way to his office and walked the rest. Since the first announcement of his retirement he has doubled the scope of his firm, and personally brought out and edited a new publication.

Likes Dinner Company.

He still has the erect carriage of a vigorous slender man of 50. His physician told him that the reason he kept so young was because of his sense of humor and optimism. He himself declares it is due to laughter and companionship. "I have always been fond of company, especially at dinner," he said, "and am satisfied that the taste tends strongly to longevity.

"Life is a Greek period—ending as it began. The infant begins in unconsciousness — in sleep. I am satisfied that as age comes on the tendency to nap should not be resisted, but that one should be taken even after breakfast, if there is any inclination for it, and certainly one after lunch."

Mr. Holt keeps his vigor by indulging in light exercises every day. "These done," he said, "I give each eye enough dabs of hot water to bring the blood to it, and then get an immediate reaction with as many dabs of cold water."

At "Scotch Whisky Age."

He admitted that he had reached "the Scotch whisky age," and his doctor insists on a tablespoonful of it at lunch and dinner. He was told that wines were bad for gout, "yet so far does practice sometimes depart from principle that a good deal of it has failed to do me any harm, and I am no mean goutist.

"Perhaps all this experience with alcohol, except the rider, comes too late, but I do so quite sure that prohibition won't last long."

OUR PHOTO GALLERY

By the Treaty of Versailles Germany's standing to 105,000 men, all old; but it has since been asserted that her effective fighting land force a much greater than that, by reason of the organization of voluntary clubs of a military nature whose members are practicaly trained soldiers, although not on the payroll of the state. On the roll of this volunteer force is said to be the name of a man who played a large part during the first year of the war—General von Kluck, who is said to be now a volunteer private in the force organized in contravention of hte terms of the treaty of Versailles.

British people, and British soldiers especially, have abundant reason for remembering von Kluck, because he commanded the army that formed the right or most westerly wing of the German force that swept through Belgium and down to the gates of Paris in August and the early days of September 1914. It was before the advance of von Kluck that Britain's "contemptible little army" retreated until it stood behind the Grand Morin River and joined hands with the French Army that came out of Paris.

Considering the comparatively small British force beaten, disorganized, and out of the fight, von Kluck marched across its front. The error was fatal. Attacked on the flank, von Kluck received a staggering blow, which as much as any other operation contributed to the German defeat along the Marne, and made it impossible for the Huns to win the war in a whirlwind campaign.

By birth von Kluck did not belong to the upper class, and he had reached the rank of colonel before the Kaiser bestowed nobility upon him, which authorized him to write the prefix von before his name. His critics at home after the defeat at the Marne made a pun of his name, and instead of General von Kluck, they called him General von Ungluck, meaning General misfortune.

After the retreat of the Germans from the Marne to the Aisne, next to nothing was heard of von Kluck. He was retired, and durink the closing years of the war he was living on his country estate in Prussia.

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD F. HOUSE
(Copyright.)

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

"INTEREST THE BOYS AND YOU INTEREST THE FAMILY"

A basement gymnasium and playroom as a strictly service feature in connection with its boys' clothing department, is being planned by the John Harlan Clothing Co. in Topeka, Kan.

The gymnasium idea is a new one to merchandising boys' wear, but John Harlan, president of the company, has implicit faith in its ability to draw trade.

Briefly, the plan contemplates the fitting of the basement under the store with gymnasium apparatus which can be used by boys of all ages. It includes boxing gloves, a spring board, tumbling mats, parallel bars, wall exercisers, rocking horses, indian clubs and hand weights.

The gymnasium-playroom to be open at all times and the mothers to be invited to leave their boys while they are shopping in the department stores. This feature of the service will be emphasised in all advertisements. Special athletic evenings at which members of the various classes will compete and put on stunts will also be held and the parents of the boys will be invited to attend these contests.

The store, likewise, plans to take its boy customers and friends on hikes at stated intervals.

Space in all the store advertisements will be devoted to the doings of the gymnasium classes and boys in general. A box insert in the advertisement will give the dates of the contests or hikes, announce any special plans, tell of the doings of the boys visiting the gymnasium and describe their good times. In this same box the advantages of the gymnasium will be stressed—how it is designed to keep the boy healthy, develop him physically, train him to be a good sportsman, and to give him a special interest.

The value of the playroom to mothers who could leave their sons there while they were shopping will be frequently pointed out, together with the fact that the boys will be safe and under the direction of the gymnasium master until they mothers return.

The entrance to the gymnasium is in the room which will be occupied by the boys' clothing department. This department will be separate from the men's wear section and will be under the direction of a specialist in boys' clothing. It will feature both clothing and furnishings of all kinds.

Mr. Harlan holds that success in merchandising boys' clothing depends very largely indeed on gaining the attention and interest of the boys themselves.

"Catch a boy's interest and get him to want to come to your store," says Mr. Harlan, "and you have a customer in his dad. If the boy likes your store and boosts for it, his father is pretty likely to buy his clothes there. And if he gets good service in the boys' department, it is likely that 'dad' will buy his own suit in the same establishment."

A "WAGON YARD" THAT BRINGS RETAIL TRADE

In common with other merchants of the territory adjacent to the Missouri-Kansas-Oklahoma mining region, A. J Cavanaugh had for many years a "wagon yard" in connection with his general merchandise store at Galena, Kan. And, like the others, when the farmer deserted the farm wagon for "going-to-town" purposes in favor of the automobile, Cavanaugh discontinued the use of his wagon yard. But he never closed up the space—he converted it into a "flivver yard," together with an auto repair shop, adding a full line of auto accessories to his stock of other merchandise.

Cavanaugh had ideas of his own and he has since proved that they were perfectly sound. Now, when a farmer and his family, or others, come to town, instead of having to store the machine in a garage, or else park it in the street, they simply drive into Cavanaugh's "flivver yard," an attendant checks the car and the family is free to go where they please for any length of time, without the least worry as to the safety of their machine, or as to what As a plain profiteer he i saure to be no charge.

But that's not all. The car may need repairs. If so, the owner speaks to the head repair man, and while he, the owner, is attending to other business, his car is put in perfect shape. Parts that may be needed are taken from the store and when the owner comes back all he has to pay is the actual cost of the parts—no charge is made for the work.

In addition, Cavanaugh supports a "trouble car," the same as do the other garage owners. If a customer of the store breaks down on the road, a telephone call is all that is necessary to bring him immediate relief.

"Profit on that sort of thing? Why, it's the most profitable section of my business," declares cavanaugh. "Do you imagine for a minute that any man or woman would store his car in my yard, have it overhauled and put in good shape, get his repairs for nothing and his accessories at actual cost, and then go elsewhere to buy his groceries and household goods? No! Never yet have I had a person do that. They buy everything they need from me, if I have it, and I generally manage to have it."

THE DISPLAY DREW ATTENTION, BUT—

A display manager who was determined to attract attention to a new kind of ladies'—ahem—supporter—

A beautiful young model, feminine—

A swish of skirts in the window—

A mad rush of every man within a radius of eighteen blocks—

A struggle for posts of vantage, even on telephone poles—

A horse—not a mare—which dragged a delivery wagon up on the sidewalk in order to get a better view—

A hurry call for the police—

Curtain—Slow music.

P. S.—Not a woman saw the demonstration!

THRIFT WEEK-INSURANCE DAY

The future is secure for the families of men who insure. It is saving, investment and protection in one. An insurance policy cuts off a multitude of worries. An insurance policy means that there will be no interruption of family policy after you have gone.

The value of life insurance is so much taken for granted in some circles that we fail to appreciate the large number of pepole who have no conception of its value.

Don't be like the Arkansas Fiddler.

There was a man in Arkansas who was very fond of fiddling. A passing stranger found him sitting on a stump in front of his cabin sawing away on his fiddle with intense earnestness There was a great hole in the roof of his house and the stranger asked him why he did not repair it. He replied "when it ain't raining it ain't necessary and when its raining it can't be did."

Here was a man who believed in enjoying himself regardless of consequences and doubtless had a sneaking idea that he was thrifty because he was saving himself the cost of repairing his roof.

There are many people who are in the same class as the pleasure loving fiddler who prefer to fiddle away their money, over and above necessities instead of saving a portion to protect them and their loved ones against the rainy day that is sure to come to all of us.

Insure during this Thrift Week.

"After all what a man does with his money is to invest, and there is no better way to in it than in Life Insurance.

As an ESTATE BUILDER there is nothing to equal Life Insurance.

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210380) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $66.30 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $2495.00 in case of death.

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

U. S. WAS READY TO FIGHT THE BRITISH

ADMIRAL SIMS REVEALS ORDERS GIVEN HIM BY SECRETARY DANIELS

Washington, Jan. 19.—"Do not let the British pull the wool over your eyes. We would as soon fight the British as the Germans."

These were the instructions received by Admiral Sims before his departure from the United States to take command of the American fleet overseas during the war, he testified before the Senate committee investigating the award of navy medals and crosses by Secretary Daniels.

That he had received such instructions was referred to in a letter from Admiral Sims to Secretary Daniels, which was made public at the hearing.

Withheld His Letter.

It was this letter that Secretary Daniels called "critical" and did not make public.

In his letter to Secretary Daniels Admiral Sims made the following statement:

"Brief orders were delivered to me verbally in Washington. No formal instructions or statement of the navy department's plans or policy were received at that time, though I received the following explicit admonition: "Don't let the British pull the wool over your eyes. It's none of our business pulling their chestnuts out of the fire. We would as soon fight the British as the Germans."

Accompanied by One Aide.

"I assumed that my mission was to confer with the heads of the Allied navies to learn the actual situation and discuss means for naval cooperation in case the United States declared war against the Central Powers. A lieutenant commander accompanied me as aide.

"We were directed not to take uniforms and to travel under assumed names. I expected to return and supplement my cables by reporting the situation in person. I had no idea that I would be designated to command the naval forces in Europe in case of war."

Admiral Sims did not reveal in his letter who gave him the order relative to the British.

Aid was denied him for four months, Admiral Sims said.

Took Men From Ships.

"It was only after my only aid broke down that three officers were sent me," he said in a letter. "I was forced to take men from ships to make the administration of the fleet effective."

"It would have been difficult to conceive of a greater misunderstanding of the situation abroad," the letter said.

The letter was a full review of the attitude of the department during the war. Admiral Sims charged in the letter that "the department demanded the impossible," before they approved any notice. "No policy was extended until three months after we entered the war," the letter says.

JUDGMENT OF $448 FOR TIM BOWLER

In the County Court case of Bowler vs. Redman and Vass, which was heard last December, judgment was given this morning in favor of the defendant, to the extent of $448.49. The defendant, Vass, is responsible for the $300 of this amount that was received for the automobile of the plaintiff.

In giving this judgment, Judge Huycke stated that he based his decision chiefly upon the grounds that undue influence was brought to bear upon the ignorant, eliterate, simple-minded farm laborer, Bowler.

Although Mrs. Redman denied that any engagement of marriage had been made, the Judge found there had been, because the evidence of the plaintiff and by the letter which the defendant signed sweetheart.

The evidence of Mr. O'Brien, who said there were three people in the office the morning the bill of sale was drawn up, was significant, he said. That other party must have been Vass, as stated by the plaintiff Therefore Vass was a party to the undue influence and was held responsible for the value of the car.

In the matter of the bank account Mrs. Redman is called upon to make restitution, but the Judge found no evidence that proved Vass was connected with the transaction.

The claim for the $180, the assigned pay, was dismissed, the circumstances of this being so hazy. Even according to the plaintiff's own evidence, no restrictions had been placed upon the defendant as to whether she should spend some or all of this money. The defendants must pay the costs.

G. N. Gordon for the plaintiff, G. W. Hatton for Mrs. Redman and R. R. Hall for Vass.

PLOWING MATCH TO BE HELD THIS YEAR

COUNTY PLOWMEN'S ASSOCIATION DECIDES TO RESTORE THE ANNUAL CONTEST

A meeting of the Peterborough County Plowmen's Association was held in the City Council chamber on Saturday and was largely attended by farmers from the surrounding townships. Officers were elected for 1920 as follows:

President—Wm. Cleghorn.
1st Vice-President—R. Dixon.
2nd Vice-President — James Hatherley.
Secretary—H. McFee.

North Monaghan—H. G. Webber, Walter McKee.
Smith—W. A. Roseborough. Wm. J. Grant.
Ennismore—F. J. Cavanagh, Dan. Crough.
Harvey—Robert Shaw.
Douro—Walter Garbutt, C. S. Brown.
Otonabee—Joshua Smithson, W. G. Henderson.
Asphodel—William Knox, William Breckenridge.
Dummer—C. J. Darling.
Peterborough—H. B. Cowan.

Last year's auditors, Messrs. Alex. McGregor and E. M. Elliott, were also re-appointed.

Mr. Chas. E. Moore was appointed a delegate to the meeting of the Provincial Association to be held in Toronto on February 3.

Mr. W. Cleghorn made a speech in which he advocated the continuance of the county matches and also recommended the five-acre contest if possible. At the conclusion of Mr. Cleghorn's speech it was moved by C. E. Moore and seconded by James Hatherley that a county match be held this year.

In this connection the directors from each township were instructed to interview their respective township councils in order to secure a grant of $10 from each to carry out the five-acre contest. Messrs. Cleghorn and Moore were appointed a committee to ask the County Council for a grant to carry on the county match.

The president and the secretary were authorized to arrange the date for the meeting in June. It is hoped at this meeting to have a demonstration of tractors, which no doubt will prove interesting to all who attend.

On motion of Messrs. Webber and Gillespie, the Provincial Government will be asked to establish one of their demonstration farms in Peterborough County.

After a vote of thanks to the retiring president and to the secretary for their work during the past year had been passed the meeting adjourned.

NO NEWSPAPERS ARE ISSUED AT WINNIPEG

RESIDENTS OF THAT CITY GET NEWS OF WORLD IN BULLETINS

Winnipeg, Jan. 19.—Winnipeg is back to the old days of "waitin' round the postoffice about mail time." No newspapers are being published. A bulletin of about 500 words covers the world news, and folks stand about in the 25-below-zero weather with their coonskin coat collars turned high and supply their own comment. The old-timer "minds when we got all our news like this," and the persons with the 'Did you hear about—?" question are getting a show. A small portion of the city gets authentic news from the bulletins, and the remainder get it in amazing detail, for—

"Scarce any tale was sooner heard than told,
And all who told it added something new,
And those who heard it made enlargement, too."

Most people know what they don't want—also that they don't often get what they do want.

Nature has arranged things so that a poor man is able to display as many virtues as the millionaire.

BEANS SOLVE COST OF LIVING PROBLEM

PRISONERS IN SANDWICH JAIL ARE FED FOR TWENTY CENTS A DAY

Windsor, Jan. 19.— "Beans and stil more beans." is the secret of how they conquer the cost-of-living menace at Sandwich Jail. According to the report issued by Governor Wanless the cost of feeding each man in the institution per day has been less than twenty cents. Last year it was nineteen cents, but beans have gone up a bit.

Of course, the jail has the advantage of being in the happy position of not catering to the appetites of its customers. When they get "fed up" on beans they can skip a meal and then go back at them again, but they can't go elsewhere. Moreover, skipping meals reduces the cost a little more—so the bean diet at the Essex house of internment and correction works out wonderfully well.

EIGHTEENTH ANNIVERSARY OF CREATION OF ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

Services Fitting to the Occasion Yesterday---Memorial Shield Dedicated to the Memory of Soldier Dead.

:-: HONOR ROLL :-:

Members of All Saints' Sunday School who made the Supreme Sacrifice:

LEONARD BLAKE
WILLIAM HALL
GRANT LATTIMER
HARRY LATTIMER
CRAWFORD RUSH
HERBERT MOORE
CLAUDE MANLEY
HERBERT EDWARDS
HAROLD HUXLEY

Yesterday marked the eighteenth anniversary of the creation of "All Saints" as a separate parish from that of St. John's Anglican Church. Prior to 1902 "All Saints" was a mission of St. John's Church, in care of a curate-in-charge under the Rev. J. C. Davidson, then as now entitled to the dignity of rector of Peterborough as well as of St. John's Church. From January, 1902, till 1910 the old mission building at the corner of Rubidge and Sherbrooke streets served for public worship, but in October of the latter year, saw the nave of the present spacious sacred stone edifice, a little further south, erected and dedicated. The chancel, vestry and other offices were completed and dedicated in January, 1915. There yet remains of All Saints' Church to be finished its tower, or steeple (whichever may be determined on), and signs are not wanting that the time is not very far distant when this work will be undertaken by the energetic and growing congregation of this parish.

The first rector of All aints' parish proper was Rev. W. L. Armitage. He was followed by Rev. William Major(and he in turn by Rev. H. R. Trumpore, during whose ministrations the nave of All Saints' Church was built. The present incumbent, Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A., assumed his charge in 1912, and three years later the chancel was erected and dedicated, and All Saints' Church, as it stands today, completed. The old mission building is now used as a Sunday School.

The anniversary services yesterday were conducted by the rector, assisted by Rev. J. E. Gibson, M.A., of the Church of Ascension, Toronto, whose sermons were replete with moral truths and interest-holding throughout. Special music by the choir was very acceptably, rendered under the able direction of Mr. Geo. Chandler, with good work at the organ by Miss Flowers.

Perpetuate Their Memory.

The outstanding feature of the day, however, was a young people's service in the afternoon, when All Saints' Sunday School children and their friends gathered in the church and paid touching tribute to the memory of former soldier members of the Sunday School, who lie buried in France and Flanders, victims of the world war. Nine there were who, together with eighteen other members of this church, paid the supreme sacrifice in defence of liberty and justice; and to the memory of those gallant nine an oak shield was dedicated and placed reverently on the altar yesterday afternoon. On this shield are emblazined the names of the following honored dead:

Leonard Blake, William Hall, Grant Lattimer, Harry Lattimer, Crawford Rush, Herbert Moore, Claude Manley, Herbert Edwards, Harold Huxley.

The rector took occasion to explain that while this memorial shield is presented by the Sunday School, it was not purchased by them. It is in reality a shield presented by the Missionary Society of the Church of England in recognition of All Saints' Sunday School, having contributed $100 toward mission work among the Esquimaux. And thus, while the shield constitutes a means of perpetnating for many years to come, the memory of those braves Sunday School boys who gave their lives in defence of home and empire, it will also serve as a reminder of that real memorial of their great sacrifice—the good Christianizing work among people in the far north, made possible in part by this Sunday School's contribution of $100. He (the rector) hoped that before long a memorial tablet to all the 27 members of All Saints' who had fallen overseas would be set up in the church.

Credit To Little Ones.

The Sunday School turned out in good strength, despite the bitterly cold day; from little tots to elder members of the Bible classes, and this reflects credit on home training and Sunday School influences alike.

Rev. R. B. Grobb read the prayers and made the dedication proper, Mr. C. E. Sisson, superintendent of the Bible classes department, read the lesson, and the choir was present in full strength. The hymns were exceedingly approprite to the occasion, and "Once in Royal David City" was sung by the boy choristers in a manner which reflects considerable credit on their training. The boys who took duet and trio parts were Sydney Parkins and W. Warren, Herbert Carr and J. Milburn, Wilfrid Reid and Victor Chandler, Gordon Sabin, Gordon Dobbin and Jeffrie Steele.

The whole service was beautifully commemorative, and carried one back in memory to the days of unselfish heroism, in which Canada and the Empire gave of their best.

The Glorious Dead.

Rev. J. E. Gibson prefaced an exceedingly fitting discourse by expressing appreciation of the privilege of being present at this unique and historical occasion. He asked all to stop and think of what the sacrifice of these nine boys meant to All Saints' congregation and to some of its families in particular. Those young men had laid down their lives that we might go on in our own chosen way. While we give them honor now, he said, still it will not be for years to come that people will realize what such services as these really mean.

Referring to records of heroes in ages past—even away back to the time of the Crusaders—to be found in British churches, perpetuating the memory of gallant deeds, the reverend gentleman declared that in like manner, 50, age 500 years hence, people will gaze on such shields as that dedicated this afternoon, and on memorial tablets in churches, which will kindle in their hearts the ideals of service and sacrifice as exemplified in the great war of 1914-18.

The speaker here touched on his own experience in France and Flanders, having gone overseas in 1916 as chaplain. With those boys, whose memory is now being perpetuated, he had gone through some of the greatest tragic events in history; and perhaps having lain so many away in their last resting place abroad he could the more readily appreciate such occasions as this when tribute is paid to their honorable sacrifices and undying memory.

A Measure of Comfort.

In comfort of the bereaved he enlarged on the possibility of visiting the graves of loved ones in France and Flanders when relatives could be surprised at the splendid and beautiful manner in which such graves are kept. Even under most trying conditions unusual care and pains were taken to lay in their last resting place with tenderness and revence Canada's glorious dead. The reverend gentleman characterised the work of the army surgeons, their assistants and stretcher-bearers as wonderfully considerate and humane in the extreme.

Talking of the horrors of the past war, Rev. J. E. Gibson contended that the only thing that preserved the sanity of our brave boys was their courage to look death in the face calmly and fearlessly, and always with tender solicitation for those at home should the worst happen.

Not Dead.

But the shield dedicated today, the speaker continued, is not in honor of dead people. Those boys who lie in France and Flanders are not dead; they have simply gone a little further on the journey we must all take—to the West, as they called it—where they are awaiting their loved ones. No, they are not dead; they have gone away. We said that over there, and we say it here. And we are commemorating their courage and sacrifice, not their actual death.

Died For Others.

Talking directly to the children, the reverend gentleman pressed on their attention that the nine former members of their own Sunday School, whose memory the shield dedicated and to be placed in the school room is to keep green through coming years, lived and died for others, and now live forever. He hoped there would be no more wars in which his hearers might emulate the glorions deeds of Canada's young men; but yet there are other things they can do in civilian life for which their names may be written great on high, one of which is service for the good of others.

AILURE NOT FROM HARD LUCK—

Many an unsuccessful man charges his failure to hard luck, when his eyesight is mostly to blame. Poor eyesight has made him incompetent for the better positions, and he never realized it. Probably his employer could not understand his inability to improve. If you are a young man and going slower than you think you should, let Dr. Fowler examine your eyes and see if the difficulty lies there.

THEATRICAL

BEST FARCIAL OFFERING BEFORE THE PUBLIC

"FAIR AND WARMER" AT THE GRAND WEDNESDAY EVENING

When Spaeth and Company present "Fair and Warmer" at the Grand Opera House theatre on Wednesday evening, they will offer to a grateful public the first Avery Hopwood laughmaker since his far-famed "Seven Days" and "Nobody's Widow" the biggest success in the long and distinguished line of Spaeth's successes; the farce which packed the Eltinge and Harris Theatres in New York for just one year, and is now in its sixth month at the Cort Theatre, Chicago.

Avery Hopwood is past master of farce, and in "Fair and Warmer" he has just the kind of idea he knows best how to handle. Four young and prosperous persons with leisure to take themselves very seriously, are oddly assorted as one very good husband with a giddy wife, and one very good wife with a philandering husband.

The festive two overtax the patience of their respective marriage partners, who in their turn for purposes of revenge vow to be thoroughly wicked.

They do not learn till it is too late to do them any good, that wickedness needs a practised hand and that, with amateurs, it is much more apt to be a boomerang than a projectile. The result is three acts of fast and cumulative fun in which the amateurs struggle ignobly but finally successfully to get out of the difficulties they had arranged for their spouses.

These farcical situations are graced with brilliant lines, fresh slang and keen social commentary. There is one scene which became famous overnight—the one in which the innocents make a cocktail by putting into it all the things they have ever heard their naughty families mention. By the time they have concocted this brew and drunk what of it they could, the audiences are invariably on the verge of hysteria.

If time were money the average man would have his watch geared to run forty-eight hours a day.

"FRIENDLY ENEMIES" AT THE GRAND SATURDAY

FAMOUS COMEDY THAT IS ACCLAIMTD WHEREVER ENGLISH IS SPOKEN

There has never been a play in the history of the English-speaking stage that has created the sensation, or become so vital a part of the history of the theatre, as "Friendly Enemies," the famous comedy by Samuel Shipman and Aaron Hoffman, which A. H. Woods will present at the Grand on Saturday for an engagement of matinee and evening. Of some plays it is said that they come to such and such a city direct from a long run in New York; of "Friendly Enemies" it may be truthfully said that it comes from a long run wherever the English language is spoken.

The history of this play is as dramatic and romantic as a story by Dumas. About two years ago Samuel Shipman, a young playwright who had met with many discouragements on Broadway, came to A. H. Woods with an idea of a play. Mr. Woods liked the idea and told him to go ahead and write it. Mr. Shipman secured as his collaborator, Aaron Hoffman, a well-known writer for the vaudeville stage. The two authors went to Atlantic City and in five days returned with the manuscript of the play. It went into rehearsal immediately, and on the last day of February, 1918, the epoch-making play was presented for the first time on any stage in Atlantic City.

This play was "Friendly Enemies." From Atlantic City it went to Washington, where it was accorded the extraordinary honor of public endorsement from President Wilson, who witnessed the first performance. On March the 11th, 1918, it opened the new Woods Theatre in Chicago and remained there until October 12, breaking all records for long runs in that city. In the meantime, the New York company opened at the Hudson Theatre on July 22nd and played a year to audiences that overflowed the theatre. During this time four companies were touring the United States with enormous success, and other companies were playing long engagements in Boston and Philadelphia. Australian companies were formed, and on February 12th, 1919, the play was presented at the Haymarket Theatre, London, where it immediately became the reigning hit of the season. Such a record is without parallel. There is every indication already that the forthcoming production of "Friendly Enemies" at the Grand will turn hundreds of eager playgoers away.

BEAUTIES AND GOWNS IN "THE PERFECT LOVER"

EUGENE O'BRIEN'S STELLAR PRODUCTION COMES TO EMPIRE TONIGHT

Some of the most beautiful girls, gowns and scenes ever seen on the screen are among the many extra ordinary attractions of Eugene O'Brien's first stellar production, "The Perfect Lover," which comes today to the Empire Theatre.

One of the acts representing a ballroom of the home of a member of the "Four Hundred" in New York is without doubt one of the most elaborate and stupendous scenes ever erected for a motion picture. It took up the entire floor of the huge studio where the picture was filmed, and no expense was spared in fitting up this set. The result is astounding. When you see it on the screen you will not be able to believe it is merely a studio set. With its parquet floors, glass doors and shining mirrors, handsomely framed pictures Queen Anne furniture and huge baskets of flowers, this ballroom is the essence of elegant reality.

To complete the set the most beautiful girls in New York were hired to grace it. Blondes, brunettes, tall girls, short girls, artists' models and many Ziegfeld girls are among those in this superb collection. Not only are they the most beautiful group of girls that have ever been seen at one time, but the clothes they wear are the most gorgeous collection that ever graced a ballroom. The value of the wonderful gowns worn by these girls aggregates a small fortune. And handsome Eugene O'Brien in the centre of this galaxy of gorgeously gowned beautiful women completes the scene.

Patti Liked "Darky" Music.

Adelina Patti, on one of her first visits to San Francisco, was the guest one evening at the home of some people who were her intimate friends and had been her guests in her home in Wales, says the New York Sun. Another guest that Sunday evening was an ambitious young tenor who, at Patti's request, sang and nearly expired in the excitement of the occasion, although he was generously praised by the great artist.

Then Patti discovered in the company two young fellows she had heard on an overland train singing to their own banjo and guitar accompaniment. To their confusion she demanded that they must "oblige," and insisted that it was just what she wanted to hear when they protested that they sang only darky songs.

Instruments were produced and the young men began rather haltingly with the quietest and most sentimental songs they knew. Patti was not satisfied. "Those funny, lively ones," she demanded. They, encouraged, gradually worked into brisker songs, to Patti's undoubtedly genuine pleasure. She hummed along with them until they swung into a rattling medley, when she joined with full throated voice in these words:

Chillen, keep in de middle of de road.
Doan turn onto de right,
Doan turn onto de lef',
Jess keep in de middle of de road!

Then, laughing and singing, she led the nonsense when the medley came to these words:

Shame, shame, 'tis an awful shame!
Landlady's raised de rent, boadahs ain't to blame.
Chuck full of hungah,
Cain't stay no longah—
Bye, bye, my honey, I'se a-gwine.

She sang these and other nonsense patter until she had the youngsters gasping for breath. Then she declared enthusiastically, "I never before had such fun singing. I wonder what a concert audience would do if I gave as an encore:

Chuck full of hungah,
Cain't stay no longah—
Bye, bye, my honey, I'se a-gwine?

JUNIORS PLAY HERE TONIGHT WHILE THE INTERMEDIATES GO TO LINSDAY

Game Here Promise to be a Hummer From Start to Finish With Every Player on His Toes, Good Crowd Expected

The local Juniors go into tonight's game with the Lindsay Midgets with a three goal lead, which they are determined to increase to six or seven. The local kids are very ambitious and are confident of winning tonight's fixture on the Brock street Rink.

The Midgets are equally confident and expect to cut down the lead of the locals on their own ice. Bill Garrett who played with the Intermediates Friday night, will strenghthen his team considerably.

It promises to be a battle royal from start to finish and a large crowd will be on hand to see these junior teams in action again.

At the same time the Intermediates will invade Scugogville in an attempt to repeat their victory of two weeks ago on the Lindsay ice.

GOOD HITTERS ARE THE ENEMIES OF PITCHERS

HOW DIFFERENT BRAINY TWIRLERS FAILED TO FOOL THE MIGHTY RUTH

(By Billy Evans.)

If you are a great hitter, you become the common enemy of all pitchers. They are in every league pitchers who are given credit for having more brains than others. There is Christy Mathewson, for instance. He was known as the "Old Master" because of his cunning. Batters always claimed no pitcher was easier to hit with the bases empty, or harder to even foul with the bases filled.

In every league it is customary for the so-called brainy pitchers to go to work on the great hitters, to find out if such hitters have a weakness or more than one weakness. Woe to the batter who has a fault at the bat. Pitchers are clanish, and the moment something worth while is doscovered about a star hitter, it becomes the common property of the league. It has been interesting to me to watch the way pitchers have worked on "Babe" Ruth the last two years or since he required the reputation of being a hitter to be feared. Three or four years ago, Ruth got little or no consideration from pitchers. He was known as a wild swinger, whose favorite specialty was to strike out. Then "Babe" became famous over night, began to establish records for home run clouts and became the common enemy of the pitchers.

Breaks Up Game.

There is Jim Bagby of the Cleveland Club, a brainy pitcher. Jim with his change of pace, usually makes trouble for Ruth. In a series at Boston, Ruth had done things to the Cleveland pitchers. Despite his care in working on Ruth, "Babe" after failing four straight times, got hold of one late in the game on Bagby, hit it for three bases and broke up the game. Stanley Coveleskie had been the victim of a home run clout the day before that had lost him his ball game and all other Indian pitchers had suffered equally. The Cleveland pitchers had been pitching low and inside to Ruth. After the series it seemed they decided low and outside would have been more profitable. Of course that was the second guess. The Chicago Club came from New York that afternoon, and arrived in Boston several hours before the departure of the Cleveland Club. Deductions of the Cleveland pitchers were passed on to the Chicago staff. Eddie Cicotte worked the opening contest. Eddie is a close student of the pitching game. He works on every batter. When you make a base hit on Cicotte you earn it. Eddie, after following the advice of Cleveland pitchers, worked low and outside. In the Cleveland series, Ruth had been hitting them a mile to right field. Of course, that was impossible the way Cicotte was pitching. However, in three chances against Cicotte he rattled three doubles off the left field wall.

Johnson's Solution.

Someone told Fred Coumbe once that Ruth couldn't hit a slow floater pitched at about his letters. Last year Coumbe was called on in a pinch to face Ruth with the bases filled. He remembered the slow floater advice, tried one, and got away with it. Ruth's swing just about drove all the air out of the park. He glared defiance at Coumbe for his nerve. The little southpaw came back with another. Ruth was set for it and made a fast one out of the floater. It cleared the right field wall a mile, more or less.

Walter Johnson is one of the few pitchers who says he doesn't try to pull any strategy on great hitters. When Ruth or Cobb is up according to Walter, he simply tries to throw the ball past them, that is, tries to throw it just a bit faster than they swing. They don't hit Walter much, and perhaps he has the right idea but all pitchers do not have the speed of Johnson.

Rose Leaf Spoiled Rest.

The present meaning of the word sybarite is a person devoted to luxury and pleasure. It is derived from the ancient city of Sybaris, situated in southern Italy, near to the shores of the Gulf of Taranto. It was founded by the Greeks 720 B.C., and became very powerful. In the days of its opulence it was ruler over four nations with their twenty-five towns, and could raise an army of 300,000 men, and equip them well for the field. The walls surrounding the city were said to extend six miles, and the suburbs covered an area of seven miles.

It was the old story, however, for as the city grew in wealth its people degenerated and became noted for effeminacy and self-indulgence, and it is told of them that no trade that made a noise was allowed within the city limits. Seneca, tells the story that one of the Sybarites complained that he had not rested comfortably during the whole night, and upon being asked why, he stated that he had found a rose leaf doubled up under his pillow, which had hurt him painfully. Thus it is easy to see why the word sybarite has been bestowed upon one who lives for pleasure and self-gratification.

CASE AGAIN ADJOURNED

Not Sufficient Evidence Yet Produced to Convict Mrs. McClennan.

The case of Mrs. McClennan, corner of Brock and Aylmer streets, who was charged with being a common prostitute, was continued in Police Court this morning. The accused pleaded not guilty.

Constable Young swore he had been watching this woman about the streets on various occasions and had frequently seen her stop men and talk to them. He had seen this in the daytime, and at night and sometimes the men appeared to know her and sometimes they did not. When questioned about her conduct, she was unable to give a satisfactory explanation of herself, he said. He had heard of her as a woman with a "loose character."

Sergt. Dearnard swore that he had had frequent complaints of the woman and people had often asked him why she was not placed under arrest.

The case was adjourned for another week, the accused in the meantime residing at the county jail.

ST. THOMAS INCREASES TEACHERS' SALARIES

HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS AT COLLEGIATE, ASSISTANTS AND JANITORS

St. Thomas, Jan. 19. — The Internal Management Committee of the Board of Education started the New Year with recommendations for substantial increases in salaries of all Collegiate Institute teachers, Public and High School janitors, and the Inspector and Secretary, at their initial meeting. Under the new schedule approved of by the Committee, the heads of departments at the Institute are to have their stipends boosted from $2,000 to $2,300 per year, while assistants in various departments will receive $200 increase. Dr. Voaden, Principal of the Institute, was granted an increase of $500, making his salary $3,000. Inspector Taylor was given a $300 increase, and Secretary Stevenson $200. The janitors receive increases from $75 to $200 per year.

It is not known whether the new schedule will be satisfactory to the Collegiate teachers or not. They petitioned early in December for their salary schedule to be placed on a par with that of London, which would have given the department heads $2,500 per year at that time.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES OF THE GEORGE STREET SUNDAY SCHOOL

Rev. C. S. Applegath Delivered Two Helpful Messages to the 500 Children of School Who Attend—$1,435 This Year for Building Fund.

The anniversary services of the George Street Methodist Sunday School held yesterday morning and afternoon were exceptionally well attended by the children, upwards of five hundred scholars being present at each service. Rev. C. S. Applegath, of Port Hope, addressed the children and his messages were such as will have a lasting and uplifting effect upon them.

In the morning Mr. Applegath chose for his subject a rose and for his text, "I am the rose of Sharon." The rose, he said, is symbolical of Jesus and is the most beautiful analogy of Him we have.

Jesus was the most beautiful light the world has ever seen. All other lives, no matter how great or good, had blemishes.

The rose is never out of place whether in courtship, at a wedding, at times of affliction or in any place. Even so, the presence of Jesus Christ is always appropriate and will transform any place into which He is carried. We have no right to go any place where we cannot carry Jesus with us.

But the rose must be handled carefully because it has thorns. Any who volunteer to follow in the footsteps of Jesus must be prepared as He was to wearn the crown of thorns and suffer for His cause.

Building Fund.

At the afternoon service the different classes brought for their earnings so far this year for the Sunday School building fund. Some of the larger classes reached as high as $200 and even some classes of the smallest children had raised $10 for their cause. The total sum occupied by the school this year is $1,435, it was announced.

Breaking Habits.

With the assistance of Ivason Walker Mr. Applegath gave a very impressive talk on the forming and breaking of bad habits. He brought a boy to the platform and tied a thread around him. This was easily broken, but as more thread and stronger cord was wound around it was more difficult to break. Finally a chain appeared from the box whence the string came and then the boy was firmly bound and could not break the things that held him fast.

Mr. Applegath explained that that was the exact way bad habits acted. After the first bad act one could easily break away but finally, if not checked, the habit would go so strong that it would be impossible to shake it off. The only thing then to do was to ask someone to unfasten the cords and in the case of evil habits, the only person who could free one of their influence was Jesus Christ, the Saviour of all.

Women and Cigarettes.

During his address Mr. Applegath made a strong attack upon cigarette smoking, especially the growing custom of smoking among fashionable ladies. It is a terrible condition, he said, and the church and the men must try and save the women from calamity.

ARRANGEMENTS ARE COMPLETED TO RESUME TRADE WITH RUSSIA

Wheat, Cattle, Flax and Other Cereals Will be Furnished by Russians in Return for Farm Implements, Clothing, Locomotives and Medical Supplies

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 20.—Elaborate plans for the resumption of commercial relations between the Russian people and the Allied nations have been worked out, and it is reported that the Bolsheviki will permit the free interchange of manufactured goods and raw materials. Negotiations to this end were carried on before the Supreme Council by Alexander Berkenheim and Constantine Krovopouskoff of the Foreign Board of the Russian Co-operative Union. In an interview Berkenheim emphasized that the arrangement had no political character and was merely an economic financial and humanitarian arrangement. Great stocks of wheat, cereals, cattle and flax exist in Russian and in order to arrive at an exchange of these goods, three problems must be met first—the transformation of raw material outside Russia, the mode of payment to the Russian producer and the distribution of imported goods to Russian consumers.

"We require in return farming and agricultural implements," said Berkenheim, "as well as cloth, shoes, locomotives, motors and medical supplies. Ship tonnage must be furnished by the Allies as Russia's shipping has completely disappeared."

Imports to Russia will be consigned to the Co-operative Union and will be distributed to the stores throughout the country. The union will purchase grain and cereals from the peasants paying in rubles at a fixed rate. Berkenheim was emphatic in stating that the stores were not under the control of the Bolsheviki and felt sure that satisfactory agreement with the Soviet Government could be made for impartial distribution.

WIRE MESSAGE TODAY DESCRIBES PLIGHT OF THE STEAMER POWHATAN

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, Jan. 20.—The following message from the disabled United States transport Powhatan and relayed by the stamer Bardic was intercepted here this morning:

"Our situation not being definite, the Cedric proceeded on the approach of destroyers who will take off the passengers when the weather moderates. The Bardic is trying to get line aboard now. [illegible] fire rooms are full to the water line, bulkheads shored and tight. The Northern Pacific is due tonight. Will ask her to stand by also."

The message is timed aboard the Powhatan at 10.45 a.m.

BREAD PRICES TO JUMP

Board of Commerce Says Increase is Unavoidable

Ottawa, Jan. 20.— The Board of Commerce monthly report on the production and cost of bread in the Dominion for November shows the average price of flour to have been $10.63 against $10.72 in October, which is taken to indicate that the trade is using more winter wheat flour, at a lower price, to blend with Manitoba spring wheat.

The returns tbaluated show an increase in cost of production of about one-tenth of one cent. per pound, indicated in cost of ingredients, management and fixed charges. The Canadian Wheat Board issued a new price list for flour December 29, 1919, showing an advance of $2.25 per barrel of 196 pounds. This increased cost of flour, says the report, will necessitate an increase in cost of bread of about one cent and a quarter per pound and a half loaf, so that where bakers were selling at eleven cents per loaf they would be justified in advancing the price to say 12 12 cents per loaf. While this increase is to be regretted from the standpoint of the consumer, the public must bear it, says the board.

GEN. KOLCHAK'S UNITS ARE BEATING RETREAT

HAVE BEEN DRIVEN OUT OF SIBERIAN TERRITORY BY BOLSHEVIKI

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 20.—Bolshevik troops occupy all of the Siberian territory west of Krabnoyar, from which they have driven Admiral Kolchak's forces, according to dispatches received here. The Kolchak units are reported to be beating a retreat eastward. The revolutionary government recently established at Irkutsk is said to be already very weak, being strongly combatted by General Femenoff, who is supported by last remenant of the Kolchak army.

GIVEN TIME TO EARN MONEY

Four Lindsay Men Allowed Out on Their Recognisance

The case of the four Lindsay men who are charged with obtaining goods under false pretences was resumed yesterday afternoon at four o'clock after the arrival of their solicitor, Mr. Weldon, of Lindsay.

Mr. Weldon stated that he knew the boys and they were of such good character that be felt sure they had no intention of stealing the money, but were just unable to pay their debt at the time. He urged that they be let out on their own recognizance for one week to allow them time in which to earn the money to make restitution.

The men stated that they could earn the $54 and $23 costs in that time, and were allowed eight days to earn the money.

The case will be reopened a week from today at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Working For The Experimental Farm

An alliance of the organized Farmers and Businessmen has been formed for point work to present the claims of Peterborough as the logical and economic centre for a great Experimental Farm which the Provincial Government may establish in Eastern Ontario this summer.

A deputation from the Farmers' Club waited upon President Turner of the Board of Trade, who acted immediately and appointed the following members as a committee of cooperation: Geroge A. Gillespie, chairman; Thomas Barrie, W. R. Breyfogle, Ernest V. Frederick, M. D. and James R. Hamilton.

The Farmers' Committee is composed of the following prominent agriculturists: A. E. Wilson, chairman; R .B. Rogers, C. E. Douro; Bruce Savigniy, Morley Smithson and Harry G. Webber, of North Monaghan.

Headquarters will be established at the Board of Trade rooms and the joint committee will meet at once and organize so as to actually interest the Public School Boards in the several towns, villages and townships and all interested bodies.

Both committees feel strongly that Peterborough has unequalled advantages and is the natural centre for the Government Farm. The joint committees will be backed by the County Council which meets this week and by all who are interested directly or indirectly in practical agricultural education.

BOLSHEVIKI WELCOME AMERICAN DEPORTEES

EMMA GOLDMAN AND BERKMAN GIVEN OFFICIAL RECEPTION IN FINLAND

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Treijoki, Finland, Jan. 20.—The Radicals, who were deported from the United States, were given an official reception just outside of this village today. In the crowd that greeted Alexander Berkman, Emma Goldman and their comrades was M. Zorien, a member of All-Soviets' Executive Committee, who after a brief conference with Berkman, agreed to permit the whole party to enter Bolshevik Russia.

"There is no question that they will be welcomed in Russia," said M. Zorien. "We will give them work according to their professions and trades, but first we must provide them with comfortable homes and feed them well."

Madame Gorky, wife of the prominent Russian novelist, said when she met the deportees: "Russia opens her arms to all who are politically persecuted."

CANADIAN RAILWAYS SEEK POSTPONEMENT

CLAIM CONDITION IS CHANGED BY RECENT AMALGAMATION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 20.—The Board of Railway Commissioners this morning reserved their decision in the application of the Canadian railways for a postponement of the Board's order with regard to joint freight tariffs.

Last August the Board issued an order instructing the railways to adopt joint tariffs where freight must be shipped over two or more lines, and compelling publication of these tariffs. The chief traffic officer of the Board, James Hardwell, made a report containing recommendations with regard to the new tariffs, which was considered the basis for the order. The railways this morning asked for the repairing of the whole matter on the grounds that the coming amalgamation of the G. T. R. with the C. N. R. altered the situation, and because certain practical features of the situs tion had not been considered.

FORTY-NINE SAILORS LOST IN THE CATTEGAT

AMERICAN SHIP "MACONA" THOUGHT TO HAVE STRUCK A MINE

Stockhlom, Jan. 20.—Details of the wrecking of the American steamer "Macona," which struck a rock off Nidingen Light and foundered Saturday night with the loss of 49 members of the crew, were received here today. One man, who was rescued hours later from the rigging, told his rescuers that he was the sole survivor. One report attributes the disaster to a mine, several of which are said to have been floating in the Cattegat recently.

WILD RUMORS ALARM PEOPLE OF WINNIPEG

ABSENCE OF NEWSPAPERS LEADS MEN TO IMAGINE MANY EVILS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, Jan. 20. — The third day of the enforced suspension of the local newspapers as a result of the exhaustion of the nswsprint supply and the failure of the Fort Francis mills to continue normal shipments, brought home with renewed emphasis today the important position the newspaper occupies in the life of the community. The brief bulletin service furnished to the citizens on behalf of the newspapers has not served entirely to allay the spread of a wild crop of rumors of world-shaking events.

Boston, Jan. 20.—The destroyer Leary reported today that she was in the vicinity of the Powhatan. The message reads: "Powhatan's passengers not taken off. Am trying to establish contact with her, but so far unable."

MACHINE GUN BRIGADE TO ORGANIZE COMPANY

AUTHORITY FOR THE PURPOSE HAS BEEN RECEIVED FROM HEADQUARTERS

Authority has been received at No. 3 military district, Kingston, for the 4th Machine Gun Brigade, consisting of four companies. One of each to located at Kingston, Ottawa, and Peterborough.

The objects in organizing this brigade are:

1.—To perpetuate the name of the 4th Canadian Machine Gun Brigade of the C. E. F., which was chiefly organized and maintained at the front by this district.

2.—To re-organize as many as possible of those who have gained such valuable information at the front in the use of this arm of the service.

3.—To use this highly trained body as an instrument wherewith to impart to the "new material" that will be absorbed from time to time into its ranks, all that good training and those valuable lessons that could be learned in no harder nor no better school.

With this aim in view, it is hoped to build up in Peterborough a strong and efficient company.

Twenty nights of training, equivalent, for the purposes of pay, to 10 days at militia rates, have already been authorized. These must be commenced at an early date to be completed before the 31st of March—the time limit.

The allotment of Vicker's guns and equipment will arrive at an early date.

The adjutant of the brigade, Capt. J. Edwards, M.C., will arrive in the city on Wednesday in connection with the organization of the Peterborough company. Officers and prospective officers are hereby notified to assemble at the Empress Hotel at 8.00 p.m. of the 21st inst.

Further applications from officers are required to complete establishment. It is hoped to have these all in on that date.

Men are also required to fill the other ranks. If you are interested, come to the armouries and get your name on the roll. A parade will be held for that purpose at 8.44 p.m., on Friday, Jan. 23rd.

AGRICULTURISTS NOW IN SESSION AT GUELPH

REPORT CLAIMS A SATVING OF $134,667,403 FROM RESUTS OF EXPERIMENTS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Guelph, Jan. 20— The forty-first annual meeting of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union commenced at the O. A. C. this morning with Hon. Nelson Monteith, of Stratford, presiding. Secretary Lavits reported that during last year co-operative experiments were conducted throughout Ontario in poultry, Agriculture, Botany, Chemistry, Book keeping and a survey has been made on the subject of Farm Literature. Owing to the great scarcity of labor the number of experiments has fallen off, the actual number being 2,468. Through the influence thus exerted, the report contended an increased yield had been secured that had resulted in added market values of $134,667,403 on oats, winter wheat, and barley. Prof. Toole dealt with the Srub Bull campaign and N. K. Ledrew dealt with the proposed memorial to be erected at the college.

The statement had been made at a conference of the majority Socialists. Days before the revolution he said, Germany had proposed to offer the Entente complete capitulation of Germany.

KNOX CHURCH HAD MOST PROSPEROUS YEAR IN HISTORY OF CONGREGATION

Every Depatment of Work Shows Gratifying Growth and Attendance in Church, and Sunday School Has Also Increased.

The annual meeting of Knox Church was held last Wednesday evening in the Brotherhood room of the church, with Mr. J. F. Morrison in the chair and Mr. J. W. Buyers as secretary.

The reports of the various organizations gave substantially good indications of the progress each is making. All were of a decidedly encouraging character.

The report of session, read by Mr. M. N. Clark, included the following:

"The past year has been in many respects a memorable one and has been unmistakably one of progress. The attendance at ordinary services has been gratifying and of late shows considerable increase. The communion services of the past year, and notably the last two, have been marked by impressiveness and the spirit of true fellowship, the last one surpassing all others in the history of Knox in point of attendance. Increased interest is also noticeable in our prayer meeting, and in the work of our Young People's Society, Sabbath School and other organizations."

The treasurer's report showed that the congregation had met the financial obligations for the year by meeting all current expenses and paying in full the interest on the church mortgage, and $1,000 on the principle. This is very creditable, especially in view of the fact that the Board of Managers had to deal with new and important expenditures during the year, which considerably added to the financial burdens of the church.

A number of the achievements and events that make the year 1919 memorable to Knox congregation are the following: The purchase of a manse, the growing of the choir, the introduction for congregational use of the new hymnal, the appointment of a new organist and choir leader in the person of Mr. F. E. Walden, the installation of a memorial window in honor of Knox soldiers who made the supreme sacrifice in the great war, and the appointment of four new elders, in the persons of Ernest Benson, Adam Gillespie, Andrew McKenzie and William Watt, while one of the most gladdening features of the year's experience was the return of our soldiers who have been spared by the Providence of God to unite with us here in efforts to advance His kingdom.

Among many organisations whose flourishing condition deserves special mention, it is hard to single out any one as meriting particular notice. There are many which in spirit and achievement set forth admirably the genius of Knox Church. In this respect there is, perhaps, none that excels the Ladies' Aid and the Bureau Bible Class. The enthusiasm efficiency, faithfulness and generosity of these organizations afford at one and the same time, an indication of the spirit that animates all the workers and organizations of Knox, and an example of what is possible along the line of devoted service.

The report of session closed with these words, "The outlook for 1920 is distinctly forward and upward. May this be true of the membership of Knox both individually and collectively."

German Representative at Paris Believes There is no Law for Such Extradition.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 20.—Disbelief that the efforts of the Allies to get former would prove successful, was expressed today by Baron Kurt Von Lersner, Germany's chief representative here.

"I am absolutely sure the Dutch Government will never surrender the former German Emperor for trial on charges that are not provided for in any constitution, any laws or any treaties regarding extraditions," Baron Von Lersner said.

With regard to the expected demand for the extradition of German subjects for trial for acts committed during the war the German Plenipotentiary declared himself certain that public sentiment in every country was against such a demand.

SUPREME COUNCIL IN SESSION TODAY

HEAR REPRESENTATIVE OF ROUMANIA WITH REGARD TO ANNEXATION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 20.—At a meeting this morning, the Supreme Council heard Caida Voivodez, the Roumanian premier, regarding the desire of that country to annex Bessarabia. The Council informed Voivode that it would make a decision regarding Bessarabia after the Roumanians had entirely complied with the Council's instructions regarding the evacuation of Hungary.

Marshal Foch informed the Council that the British were unable to send their quota of troops, 25,000 men, to the plebiscite area. The Marshal recommended that they be replaced by French and Italian forces if necessary. The Council will come to a decision on these matters this afternoon.

Fire, believed to have started in the chimney, destroyed the home of James Hoy, at Roseville, near Galt.

ANNUAL CONCERT TRINITY CHURCH CHOIR

What has come to be regarded as one of the outstanding events in musical circles, the annual concert of the famous choir of Trinity Methodist Church, was held last evening, and proved one of the most successful affairs of the kind yet given. The program was interesting, and the execution of their various parts by members of the choir showed the careful training to which they had been subjected. Mr. George H. King, the accomplished organist and leader, has added another to the many laurels which he has won as a director since his coming to this city. Mrs. King charmed everyone as usual by her perfect renditions of the various solo parts in which she appeared. The reputation of the choir, composed last night of thirty-eight voices, twenty-three ladies and fifteen male members, was enhanced once more by their performance last night, and individual reputations were made by members who came to the front for the first time. Mr. Fred. Hartshorn, who has begun the study of vocal music under Mr. King, won special praise for his work last night both in solo and chorus. Some of the old favorite hymns in new settings were charmingly rendered. The opening number of the program, after an organ solo by Mr. King, was "Son of My Soul," superbly sung by a quintette composed of Messrs Park, Lee, Turner, Hartshorn and Baldry, the solo parts being taken by Mr. Park, who may well be regarded as one of the leading tenors in a city in which musical talent abounds. Nothing finer was ever heard in this city. The beautiful hymn, filled as it is with the finest imagery and most fervent adoration, shone with a new charm.

The next offering was "Abide with Me," by a double mixed quartette, composed of Mrs. King and Miss T. Givens, sopranos, Misses Corbett and Wilson, alto, Messrs. Flemming and Lee, tenor, Messrs. Naish and Ridyard, bass.

Messrs. Park, Flemming, Downey and Skitch rendered "Lord of Our Life."

Mrs. King, with characteristic expression and feeling, sang "Out of the Depth," and the entire choir, unaccompanied, rendered "Yea Though I Walk." The closing number of the first half of the program was "Perfect Day," by Messrs. Lee, Turner, Hartshorn and Baldry.

The second half of the program was J. H. Maunder's cantata, "Penitence, Pardon and Peace," a beautiful story told in song of the Christian life, beautifully unfolded step step, showing how pardon is vouchsafed sorrow for sin, and peace follows forgiveness. Mrs. King, soprano, and Mr. Hartshorn, baritone, were the soloists. One of the most striking effects of the presentation was scored near the close of the cantata, when Miss T. Givens, soprano, and Miss Wilson, contralto, stationed in the gallery, sang the closing notes in unison with the choir. The performance was concluded with the singing of the National Anthem, after which Mr. King and the members of the choir received the hearty congratulations of their friends.

By special request the cantata will be repeated at the evening service in Trinity Church one week from Sunday night.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1920.

A CITIZENS' COMMITTEE.

OUT IN LETHBRIDGE they have the same grievance as that complained of in Peterborough. The majority of the electors will not turn out to vote at the civic elections. The Herald of the Western city has a remedy. It says that there has been frequent allusion to the apathy shown in municipal matters among the citizens at large in the city. It is a reflection on our ideas of democratic form of government that though we place great stress on this in theory, we fail to show that we estimate its importance in practice. In other words, how much we may be opposed to government by the few, we allow it to hold in practice is that to all intents and purposes we have government by the few, that is by those who take an active interest and part in municipal politics. These are the minority of the city electorate as shown by the results of the polls when polling days come round. They for all practical purposes decide the fate of our by-laws and other things which have to be ruled by the expression of opinion at the polls.

It is well that we give this phase of municipal government our serious consideration, if only in the way of showing that we are true to ourselves in the ideals we hold as to democratic government. It is perfectly true that so far results, as determined at the polls, may be satisfactory, but this, if so, is something on which we may congratulate ourselves in that those who show their interest in municipal matters, even though they constitute the minority of the voters, have not made any grievous mistake. This however, is more by a lucky chance than anything else, but it does not follow that the results will always be the same if the citizens as a whole are content to allow a minority to act for them.

There is abundant need in this city of a citizens' committee, not merely formed at the time elections take place, but one which the year through will watch over and create interest in city affairs. A function of this committee would be to keep an eye on probable candidate for vacancies in the civic government when the same arise. It should take on itself to discuss and criticise civic policies, not necessarily in a carping spirit but in the best interests of the city. A body such as we refer to should be one for co-operating with the civic government, the spirit for its formation should be a sympathetic one, with at the same time full license to criticise civic policies adversely when the need arises.

At the present time anything in the way of reviewing civic policies is left to the press. The press approaches these matters in an impartial spirit, without favor and without prejudice, looking on policies as a whole and not on individuals. But it is often difficult to convince those against whom any criticism is directed that it has not a personal motive, however absent such a motive is from the mind of the press. How often is this used by the person against whom the criticism is levelled and by his particular friends to offset the value of the criticism by an attempt of this description to lay a red herring along the path of the real issue. It cannot be denied that such a state of things exists in the city. To offset this a citizens' committee will well have its place. It will be in the position to analyse the real inwardness of criticisms made, and by this process we shall get somewhere. In the present state of things criticism by the press is more often than not a thankless job in the spirit in which it is construed in certain quarters. This arises from the lack of real interest in civic matters taken by the citizens at large. The press has its functions to perform in expressing its opinions candidly, if it is at all worthy of its responsibilities, but the press demands a co-operation in the interest it shows in civic affairs.

NO COMPULSION.

A 70-YEAR-OLD MAN, who made a visit to Toronto last week, had lived nearly all his life in a remote part of New Ontario, and had never before seen a street car. Still, he needn't feel utterly broken up and bitter about the matter, for even this time he didn't have to ride on one.

"PAP-FED" NEWSPAPERS.

(Montreal Herald.)

THE GAZETTE had an editorial yesterday in which it defended Canadian newsprint manufacturers in refusing to supply Canadian newspapers with paper at the generous price of $80.00 per ton as fixed by the Paper Controller. It lays down the extraordinary proposition that manufacturers who are allowed to use the raw material of our national forests practically free of cost are entitled to ship all the product manufactured from that raw material out of the country without the slightest heed for domestic requirements.

At the present time, the United States newspapers, having had their supply of paper from Scandinavia cut off through the extraordinary conditions prevailing on the other side of the Atlantic, are now using vast quantities of Canadian newsprint and are calling for more. One of the reasons for this demand is the publication of huge Sunday editions. As everybody knows, the law does not permit the publication of Sunday papers in Canada. The Canadian publishers are now told by the Gazette that unless they are willing to out-bid the frantic bidding of the foreign publishers who exhaust their supplies by huge Sunday editions, they are to suspend publication and go out of business. The Gazette continues: "If the Government will put an end to the Paper Controller and all his works, the difficulty will quickly be overcome. When they cease to be pap-fed, the newspapers will stand upon their feet, and no longer will there be talk of shortage of newsprint, or suspension of publication."

It is rather a striking commentary on The Gazette's reference to "pap-fed newspapers" that it is itself the most pap-fed newspaper concern in the Dominion of Canada. This pap is fed to it by the Dominion Government in the form of contracts for printing. We find from a reference to the Auditor General's report that during the fiscal year ending March 31, 1918, the Montreal Gazette drew from the public treasury in hard cash the following sums:

Militia Department	$7,548
Trade and Commerce	12,948
Legislation	8,235
Immigration	2,706
Agriculture	1,612
Naval Service Department	175
Interior Department	190
Or a total of	$103,514

The Gazette's article, inferring, as it does, that the Winnipeg papers, who have to suspend publication because of all supplies of newsprint being shipped out of the country, are meeting the just fate of what it calls pap-fed newspapers, comes with peculiarly bad grace from an organization pap-fed to the extraordinary extent revealed by the above figures—and with more pap being fed to it all the time.

ITS EVER THUS.

ONE THOUSAND, three hundred and thirteen western Michigan young men and women took agricultural courses in the schools during 1919, according to a late report. This is bound to have a tremendous effect on agriculture, when one of the pupils goes on the farm, and the other one thousand, three hundred and twelve take jobs in the city, and tell him how to do it.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

A MYSTERY.

(London Free Press.)

How a "criminal lunatic" can call a "family conclave" is one of the mysteries of royal primogeniture.

BOOST; DON'T KNOCK.

(Galt Reporter.)

The stimulation of business is never accomplished by a pessimist; the progress of a community never furthered by the destructive critic.

A PURELY TEUTONIC CONCEPTION.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

It is now reported that Spain planned to join the Germans in 1918, but we can hardly believe it. Deliberate suicide as a national policy is a purely Teutonic conception.

THE PARASITES OF SOCIETY.

(Buffalo Courier.)

Detecting crime is good, but preventing crime is much better. So long as any city permits a class of loafers who live by their wits the problem of crime must be contended with. Chicago is setting a good example when in raids to clear out criminals, it includes vagabonds, the parasites of society.

NOT A SOLUTION.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

One of the factors in the problem of the prevalent unrest today is the high cost of living. Because of the extraordinary prices of things, labor is insisting on extraordinary rates of wages. But experience has shown that the problem is not to be solved by the mere process of increasing wages. Increases in wages simply mean further increases in prices, and these in turn mean further demands for higher wages.

"PLAYING POLITICS."

(Toronto Globe.)

Mr. King's suggestion that the Grand Trunk purchase project should be referred to the people, presumably by referendum, is not a practical one, and leaves his own position undisclosed. To the vital question of prohibition he made no reference. It is patent that his statements on public affairs are colored, consciously or unconsciously, by the fact that his parliamentary support comes almost entirely from east of the Ottawa River. From all Canada west of the Ottawa he has only thirteen followers in the House. Quebec is disposed to ask for advanced legislation on public ownership problems and prohibiten; it has not the same interest in them as have other provinces. But Mr. King cannot take a neutral attitude and expect any accession of strength in Ontario and Western Canada.

OPPOSED TO PATRONAGE.

(Toronto Star.)

Some of the supporters of the Farmers' Government see no reason why they should not receive appointments to office. They do not believe in patronage, but——. Perhaps their views are not unlike those expressed on one occasion by the late Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, at a time when he was a strong influence in local politics. Someone in a speech had accused the doctor of being one who believed that to the victor belonged the spoils. A representative of the Star questioned him on this point. "No," said Dr. Nesbitt, "I do not believe in any such pernicious doctrine. I am firmly opposed to it. Every public office should be filled by the best men in sight. As for me, the best men I see are Conservatives. In the grand old party to which I belong are men possessing every conceivable qualification, and it would be strange, indeed, if any office fall vacant without a highly qualified Conservative being able to fill it. But the idea that the spoils belong to the victor is abhorrent to me."

:-: LIBRARY NOTES :-:

(By F. M. D.)

This article is headed "Library Notes," because it is going to deal with something more than the mere call to the reader to peruse certain books. First and foremost, it is going to take the form of a short sermonette on the subject of thieving and mutilation of periodicals. During the past three weeks there have been three distinct cases of theft and mutilation in our library. A copy of the Woman's Home Companion has had the whole middle portion torn bodily out, and a copy of Elite has been stolen, whilst on the men's side a short poem has been clipped from a recent issue of the Canadian Bookman.

There are certain misguided souls who look upon such acts as "smart" and think that because such misdemeanors are common in all libraries, they bear the hall-mark of a prerogative and may be smiled at and condoned. Such individuals seem to forget that "smartness" does not usually imply the possession of an ample supply of honesty. They seem to forget also if they ever were aware of the fact, that in being given all the advantages and facilities of a free library they are being treated, first and foremost, as ladies and gentlemen. No watch is set on their movements and they are trusted just in the same way as guests are trusted in a private house. They are given, and given gladly, the full use of the house on the assumption that they are above walking off with the spoons or slashing their host's collection of books and prints with knives or scissors. It is pitiful to know that the hospitality that the city metes out to its inhabitants can be foully abused by even one individual. When one comes to think of it, it shows a depth of depravity and meanness beyond that of a burglar or a footpad. In the latter case the robber carries his life in his hand, whereas in the former, the culprit can pursue his or her vile calling in almost perfect immunity. The library authorities are helpless to prevent depredations of this kind. All that they can rely upon is the good will of library patrons, who detest such acts, in assisting them in the two ways possible, either by pointing out any suspicious circumstance that may come to their notice or in notifying any of the staff on duty of the mutilation of papers and periodicals as soon as they discover it. It is needless to add that an adequate punishment will be handed out to the first one, man or woman, found guilty of such offences.

And Now to Other Matters.

Walking along the shelves a few days ago, I came across the name of A. M. Broadley. To the present generation he would be almost unknown, but in his day he was a well-known figure, in England, for besides being a lawyer of high standing he was a distinguished writer and collector of articles of vertu. For many years he was legal adviser to the Bey of Tunis and was instructed by the British Government to take the leading part in the defence of Arabi Pasha when that historic figure was placed on trial for the rebellion in Egypt. Mr. Broadley had, perhaps, the finest collection in existence of pictures, portraits and caricatures of Napoleon the Great. He has written a book about him and also one in conjunction with Mr. Barttelot, entitled "Nelson's Hardy."

Mr. Broadley was the man who, unfortunately was intrumental in introducing Mr. Ernest Terah Hooley to influential financial men in England. It will be probably remembered by many how wide a swath Mr. Hooley cut in that country in the fields of frenzied finance some years ago.

Psychic Phenomena

For those interested in psychic phenomena, most fascinating reading may be found in a book by F. Bligh Bond, entitled "The Gate of Remembrance." Mr. Bond was, for many years, architect for the diocese of Bath and Wells, and whilst acting in that capacity has under his supervision the ruins of Glastonbury Abbey. The remains of the Abbey offered an inviting field for research along psychic lines, a subject in which he had long been interested, and the result of the investigtaions of himself and his friend, John Alleyn, is embodied in this book. It is sufficient to say that he claims to have discovered by means of automatic writing the site of the long-lost Edgar Chapel. Not only did the two friends discover this, but they found through the same agency, that the proportions of the building were exactly the same as mentioned by those with whom they had been in communication. The book has apparently stood the test of the most rigid examination by the keenest minds in England. Sir Conan Doyle has referred to it in glowing terms as a most remarkable exposition of the fact that unseen forces in the spirit world are within our hail and can be communicated with, and at more than one Synod it has been made the subject of serious comment.

For those who know Glastonbury and the region round about the book must possess additional interest. It is a place famed in legend and story. It was to Glastonbury that Joseph of Arimathea, acording to tradition, bore the Holy Grail, and it was there also, acording to the same legend, that he planted his pilgrim's staff which took root and blossomed every year until an unbelieving Puritan, in the time of the religious upheaval in England, cut it down. But there are additional reasons for the interest that anything connected with Glastonbury must awaken in people's minds. It is situated in that wonderful Vale of Avalon, in which ancient legends say dwelt the mighty smith who forged King Arthur's sword, Excalibur. It is the centre also of all the stories connected with the doings of the Knights of the Round Table. But if there was nothing else to make Glastonbury dear to the hearts of all English-speaking people, the fact that its abbey was the "one church of the first rank in England which stood as a memorial of British days, the only one which had lived unscathed through the storm of English conquest." would be enough to know.

Many an unsuccessful man charges his failure to hard luck, when his eyesight is mostly to blame. Poor eyesight has made him incompetent for the better positions, and he never realized it. Own Your Own Home Day In Thrift Week

Whether of lumber, brick or stone, 'tis a sweeter home if you own your own. Make mother and the children happy by owing yours.

A home of your own is worth two of the landlord's. Start your home and get one—Trift Week.

A home is more than a house. It makes you part of the community. Obey that home owning impulse during Thrift Week.

One brick or one dollar won't make a home, but both start your foundation. Put a brick in a home account during Thrift Week.

You'll never own your own home or anything else unless you make a start—bank your home-owning deposit during Trift Week.

The Advantage of Home Owning.

It gives self-respect.

Makes one independent.

It stimulates one's initiative.

It is one very safe form of saving; wisely obtained it is a good investment.

It develops citizenship—the property owner becomes the tax payer; the taxpayer becomes the citizen who learns about the management of the community, of the state and of the country.

It makes one a progressive member of the community. The question as to the type of people who shall be allowed to live in the town; the degree to which they shall be law abiding; the type of schools that shall teach the children; the churches; the lodges; the business houses—all these questions are his to answer. These features belong to him. They are his servants—he has the right to say what type they shall be.

It makes for respect in the minds of the other members of the community.

It stimulates patriotism. As usual, the man who owns his own home loves his country.

It is one form of providing for old age, for himself, or for his wife and family after his death.

ANNUAL MEETING OF LOCAL YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

Reports Show the Results of a Good Financial Year---Much Desire For Entertainment Etc.---Retiring Directors Re-Elected to the Board.

The annual meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association held last evening, for supper, was well attended by members of the Board of Directors, businessmen and young men. The four retiring members of the Board were re-elected by acclamation. They are: G. A. Gillespie, T. Barrie, R. L. Dobbin and J. E. Smith.

The financial and secretary's report show the results of a very prosperous ear financially and every other way The Board of Directors expressed themselves as well pleased with the work that had been accomplished last year and hope for an even better year in 1920.

The Finance Report

The Committe on Finance have to present a most satisfactory report at the conclusion of the year 1919. After all liabilities for the year have been met we are pleased to say that a small balance remained to the credit of the Association in the bank In addition to this, enough coal to supply the needs of the plant until April 1st, is on hand and a few subscriptions of 1919 which were made payable in 1920 are still outstanding. These amount to approximately $150 00. The balance to the credit of the Association represents largely a surplus from entertainments conducted during the year. These amounts were designed to provide for a Memorial to be erected in the near future, plans for which are now being made. This Memorial will be in honour of those members of the Association who fell during the great war. In addition to the regular work of the Association improvements and repairs were made to the extent of $2400. The cost of these have been fully met in the combined campaign held in September this year. The amount received from subscriptions this year for current revenue is less than any year for at least seven or eight years, the revenue from other sources having been materially increased. The Association is entirely free from any debt whatever which is an enviable position considering loss of revenue during the period of the last five years, owing to the fact that a large percentage of senior members were overseas. The problem of the future seems to be that of providing adequate provision for the enlarging work and the addition of an up-to-date and modern swimming pool the present one being much too small and impossible to keep in a sanitary condition. Suggestive plans have been presented before the Board of Directors and it is the hope of the Finance Committee that it will be possible to proceed in the very near future with the addition which is so sorely needed.

Respectfully submitted,
T. BARRIE.
Chairman Finance Committee.

Report of Secretary

The reports of the various departments have been covered in detail by the Chairman of heads of these departments so that there is not a great deal left to be said regarding the work, without repetition. The staff are grateful to the Board of Directors and all those who have served in a volutary capacity and their assistance during the past year at which the reports that have been presented tonight would be impossible. We are sometimes in danger of forgetting the importance of the service that the members of the Association may render and rely too much on the staff to plan, promote and carry out the entire programme. If there is any point in which we have been weak during the last year it perhaps is in this, no doubt the staff is responsible for not having placed enough responsibility or not having given enough opportunity to the members of the Association to help carry the burden of the work. The staff appeal to the members of the Association in general for support in carrying on the still larger programme during 1920 and if the splendid force within the ranks of the members can be lined up for different service this coming year should be one of the best in the history of the Association. The improvements to the building have made the task of supervision a much easier one, and great improvement in discipline has been the result. We were fortunate in securing the services of our Physical Director, Mr. D. A. Loomis, who has done such splendid work during the last seven months. Mr. Fred McNeely, in charge of the Boys' Department since September, has proved a loyal and an energetic member of the staff. Mr. Bert Hamilton in charge of the billiard and bowling department, has proved a wonderful help in caring for this department in a most efficient way. The harmony and co-operation among the members of the staff has left nothing to be desired. The services of Mr. and Mrs. James should not be overlooked in this time and the members who attend the gymnasium classes and afterwards partake of pie, coffee and ice cream, etc, will appreciate Mrs. James' efforts in serving the members in this way. The dormitory men are grateful for the many kindnesses shown by the janitor and Mrs. James. We must never forget the main object of our work and it is the earnest wish of the staff that this objective may be emphasized more strongly during the coming year as never before, that is giving the young men and boys an opportunity of deciding the supreme question of their lives in the right way, that is giving their life in Christian cervice.

Beginning of Great Industry.

Plymouth was the first permanent white settlement in New England and dates its founding from the landing of the Pilgrims, December 21, 1620. The iron works on the banks of the Saugus river, established in 1643, were the first iron works in America. A small iron pot cast there in the first forge in America is now the property of the city of Lynn and is in a glass case in the Lynn public library.

Home of Mocha Coffee.

All the genuine Mocha coffee and the skins known to the trade as mocha come from the Yemen plateau, in Arabia. From Sana, the center and capital of this rich and fertile district, to Aden on the coast is about 200 miles, and to Hedeida about 150 miles. Everything is transported on the backs of camels, though a railroad thirty miles long running from Aden to Lahey, has been opened.

ST. JOHN'S WOMAN GAINED 16 POUNDS

HAD HACKING COUGH AND COULD SLEEP VERY LITTLE UNTIL TANLAC RESTORED HER.

"It's a fact, I have gained sixteen pounds since I began taking Tanlac and I feel better and stronger than I have in years," was the statement made by Mrs. M. Wiseman, of 36 James St., St. John's, New Foundland. In a conversation with the Tanlac representative a few days ago."

"Ever since I was a child I have been in bad health," she continued, "but my condition has never been what you might call serious until the past year when I began going down hill rapidly. What I ate gave me trouble and I would have a tightness across my chest that was something awful and I had a hacking cough that worried me a great deal. I had severe pains through my back and often terrible headaches would come on me and it seemed I could get nothing that would relieve them. Last fall I had a severe attack of the 'flu' and when I got up I was in a worse condition than ever and nothing I took gave me any strength or nourishment. I was so extremely nervous that I was never able to get more than one or two hours sleep any night, and I lost weight and strength rapidly and became so weak and run down that I could scarcely get about.

"My son who had been wounded in France and had come back home in a wretched, nervous condition had taken Tanlac and it had restored him to such fine health that I decided to try it myself and now, I can say that it has done the same thing for me. Why it is a complete surprise to me the way Tanlac has overcome my troubles and put me in such a well and happy condition after all these years. I haven't had a headache since I started taking Tanlac and the pains through my back have entirely disappeared. The cough is ever so much better and I am not the least bit nervous or fretful and I can sleep sound all night long. I am eating anything I want and I am so hungry all the time I can hardly get enough, and I am getting stronger and stronger all the time, and as I said just now, I have gained sixteen pounds. I just simply feel fine all the time and I am overjoyed at the remarkable good Tanlac has done me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

ANIMALS ARE CURIOUS

MONKEYS ARE FAMOUS FOR THIS TRAIT.

Many Domestic Creatures Also Display Considerable Curiosity Regarding Things That They Do Not Understand, While Crows and Parrots Are the Worst Offenders Among Birds.

If anybody should ask you which animal you consider has the most curiosity, your first impulse would be to say the monkey, and, of course, it really is; but there are many wild and domestic animals having exceptional development of their curiosity bumps.

For instance, there is the racoon, which has a "nose for news" that would do credit to any sleuth. Nothing escapes its searching eyes, nose or hand-like feet which it takes delight in poking into everything. Being by nature a night roving animal, the raccoon has a highly developed sense of smell that enables it to ferret out anything you may happen to have in your pockets, and though it may have no real use for the article it speedily utilizes it as a toy. The raccoon is very fond of eggs, and to see the quizzical look on its face when a china egg is substituted for the real thing is quite amusing. However, it is a persistent brute and will toy with the fake egg for an indefinite time to satisfy its curiosity.

Squirrels also have much curiosity. This is easily shown by the readiness of those in the park to investigate anything you may hold in your hand. Many of them will ransack your pockets and even search down the coat collar to satisfy their curious nature, while some are even venturesome enough to examine the contents of sacks thrown into the refuse can, probably in the hope that a good peanut has been left in it.

It is the curiosity of the goat that leads it to do many of its stunts, such as eating newspapers and other equally ridiculous things. Some zoologists claim that this animal has more curiosity than any, except possibly the monkey or poodle, and for that reason it is very difficult to drive goats in a herd. They persist in breaking ranks, and if not noticed will calmly walk into any house along the road, roam through all the rooms, even going up to the second or third story to examine the different things that excite their curiosity.

Artists who have sketched out in the open have had great opportunity to observe the curiosity of cows. After he gets his easel and canvas set the cows continue grazing as before, but gradually draw nearer and nearer the strange objects they want to investigate. Probably the artist becomes much interested in his work and does not notice that the cows have soon formed a circle around him, stretching out their necks in the effort to solve the mystery. They may be driven away, but from time to time they return and repeat the same manoeuvre. Comic artists have taken this fact and treated it in various humorous ways, yet it is nevertheless quite true, as many landscape painters can testify. Other live stock is subject to the same element of curiosity, though horses usually vent theirs in running wildly about the field. Occasionally they will approach the painter, and then, with a quick whirl, they are off for another run, kicking their heels high in the air.

The curiosity of the dog is pronounced if observed for a few minutes. It is quick to notice a strange dog or person and the value of the watchdog comes from the fact that it wants to investigate every noise. It is very interesting to watch a dog when it meets a beetle. At first he seems to be a little afraid of the tiny creature, but finally he can't resist any longer, so he plucks up enough courage to touch it with his paw. Then realizing that it has not hurt him he smells it and rolls it over and over with his nose. Then after he has satisfied his curiosity he walks away and leaves the beetle to go its way if he has not put it out of commission with the strenuousness of the investigation.

Little boys of the Orient often capture lizards by catering to their curiosity. When one of them spies a lizard that has scurried into a crevice he makes a slipknot of colored straw and holds it before the hole. After a time he is rewarded by seeing the tiny creature coming out to examine the curious thing before its den and later it actually puts its head into the noose, which is quickly drawn together by the watchful boy.

Fish and frogs are equally curious to examine the many bright lures that the fishermen know will attract their attention. In frog hunting all that is necessary is a rig composed of several hooks grouped together and covered with a small bit of red flannel. When the frog sees this bit of bright red it leaps for it and often hooks itself at the first attempt. Trout, muscalunge and other game fish will often leap clear of the water to grab an especially brilliant lure.

It may be said that every kind of bird is brimming over with curiosity as hunters of every land have trapped them by inducing them to approach and investigate unfamiliar objects. Crows and parrots possess this curiosity in extreme degree, and if anything is held near their cages they are quick to come over and examine it from every angle.

Pimento Is Dried Fruit.

Pimento, sometimes called allspice of Jamaica pepper, is the dried fruit of a small West Indian tree. The fruit is green when gathered, and turns brown when dried. The name allspice was given to it because it was supposed to resemble in flavor a mixture of cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves.

Snow and Fireflies.

The oriental is always and ever picturesque. The student of the East does not "burn the midnight oil." He works by snow and fireflies. There is an ancient legend about a Chinese student who was too poor to buy oil. So in the summer months he studied all night by the light of fireflies caught and imprisoned in a paper lantern, and in the winter by the reflection of the snow.—Gertrude Emerson in World Outlook.

Willing to Help the Needy.

A famous woman teacher, eighty years old, was sitting on the veranda of a college dormitory in her wheel chair. A student had just brought her some ice water in her silver mug and the teacher had finished drinking it when some tourists came up, saw her sitting there holding out her cup, and they dropped a half dollar in it. Imagine their feelings when they discovered who the "beggar" was!

The Industrious Bee.

The bee has two distinct stomachs. In the first it stores away the honey from the flowers until such time as it is ready to yield it up, while the other stomach is used simply and solely for digestion purposes. When the bee is ready to deposit the honey it contracts the muscles of the stomach and the honey is ejected through the mouth.

KEEP URIC ACID OUT OF JOINTS

TELLS RHEUMATISM SUFFERERS TO EAT LESS MEAT AND TAKE SALTS.

Rheumatism is easier to avoid than to cure, states a well-known authority. We are advised to dress warmly; keep the feet dry; avoid exposure; eat less meat, but drink plenty of good water.

Rheumatism is a direct result of eating too much meat and other rich foods that produce uric acid which is absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate the uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which helps overcome uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

LOST ENTIRE FORTUNE.

Fate of Man Who Gave Wings to Huns.

H. G. Fokker, inventor of the formidable Fokker plane used by Germany in the war, has arrived in Amsterdam, a fugitive from Germany. The German Government placed a tax of 14,251,000 marks on his property, which he refused to pay, and when threatened he fled over the border. When the Germans heard of this they confiscated all his property, worth millions of dollars.

Thus, the man who was responsible for whatever success in the air was achieved by the German machines, and who made millions out of Germany during the conflict, has now lost practically everything.

Fokker says he is now through with Germany, and as Holland is too small for him, he plans to visit the United States very soon, as in this country he sees vast possibilities for airplane manufacture and development.

In the course of a recent interview with him at his home in Amsterdam he told for the first time the story of his experience in warring Germany.

"I am a Hollander, you know," be explained. "I was making airplanes before the war broke out, and when the Germans asked me to make some for them I could only agree to do so. It was purely a financial matter. I find that all the British flying men, being good sportsmen, seem to realise this, and don't hold any drudge against me for manufacturing planes for the Germans; but the Frenchmen—they will never forgive me, I fear. They don't like my name; my machines brought down too many of their aviators."

Referring to his present troubles with Germany, Fokker said:

"When I was useful to the Teutons nothing was too good for me, and I made lots and lots of money for a time; but with the end of the war I could not make any more airplanes in Germany under the peace treaty arrangements. So when the Germans thought they were through with me they put an enormous tax on my factories, and when I refused to be bled in this way they simply confiscated my holdings. Easy for the Germans, but hard on me."

When Fokker was asked why his machines were better, at least in the early part of the war, than those of the allies, he said:

"Well, it seems to me that the allies permitted the Teutons to do all the pioneering in air fighting. They let Germany set the pace in the line for a time; but Germany was whipped in the air in the summer of 1918. That was one big reason why the Teuton army had to quit. I had built 3,600 airplanes for the Germans to use in the spring drive. I think the Germans lost the war in the air.

"When the war broke out the war office gave me a carte blanche to spend money. I invented the system of shooting through the propeller, and that gave the Germans a tremendous advantage over the allies until the allies began to shoot through the propeller also; then I found a way of shooting out through the floor of the airplane car, and the surprise was deadly to the allies until they followed suit. I increased speeds from time to time, and every change in that direction gave the Germans temporary superiority. With my fast [illegible] machine Immelmann was able to work out his new system of close fighting. He discovered the principle that the deadliest and surest airplane fighting is at close range with a faster machine than your opponent. It took the allies a long time to solve Immelmann's system, but they got it at last and became as good as Immelmann himself at it.

Something new was coming up in German airplane development all the time the conflict lasted, and if the war had gone on for several more years we would have put the artillery out of commission. We would have made big guns as old fashioned as spears. It was all the fault of the army red tape in Berlin that it was not begun sooner.

"Writ Sarkastic."

In answer to a question as to whether it is safe to allow a baby and dog to sleep together the health department of the Brooklyn Eagle says: "A child of that age is capable of harboring all sorts of microbes, and she might infect the dog with something, so it isn't very safe for the dog. A dog should have a separate bed with a change of sheets every night."

Jazzerizing the Buzzer.

A newly designed triple tone electric bell yields a clear ring from one push button, a buzz from the second and a combined ring and buzz from the third. The buttons may be placed on three different doors of a house, or in office or shop the signals may be used for calling three different persons.—Popular Science Monthly.

He Knew Papa.

Bernice was just recovering from an attack of the flu and the first day she was able to sit up she said: "Mamma, I'm going to ask daddy to buy a tricycle." Her brother, who was playing in the room, spoke up: "Well, you'd better strike him for it right away, for if you wait till you gets well you mightn't get it."

Dolls Long Popular.

There is ample evidence that the use of dolls as an assistance to the operations of the young mind dates from the most remote times. Among the native tribes of Africa it was the custom of married women to carry a doll with them until they had a child, when the doll was discarded.

Can Absorb Much Poison.

Dogs and horses can take 10 times as much morphine in comparison to their body weight as man can. The pigeon can take 500 times as much, while a frog is unhurt by a dose a thousand times greater, weight for weight, than one which will kill a human being.

A FRENCH DETECTIVE.

M. de Neuville, a French physician, who has specialized in the medico-legal aspects of his profession, has gathered some true stories of detective work by physicians that equal the mythical achievements of Sherlock Holmes.

Some time ago one of the "legal doctors" of the police force received notification to accompany gendarmes to the scene of a death—that of a woman innkeeper.

He went all over the room, and used his microscope at various places, and on several objects that appeared to interest him particularly. At last he inquired the name of the last vessel that had come in. It proved to be the Donna Maria, from Sicily. He delivered his opinion without a moment's delay.

"A left-handed man," he said, "wearing a slight moustache, murdered this woman. He is probably a Sicilian, who arrived on the Donna Maria. He is over 5 feet, 6 inches in height. He was acquainted with his victim, having been a guest previously at her inn. He knew that she often got drunk.

"He broke in, killed her because he feared that she would awaken while he was robbing the place, and made good his escape.

"He has in his pocket now the stump of the candle he used to light him in committing the crime. Make a swift search for a person answering this description."

While one of the Havre detectives hastened to take up the trail, the doctor gave his reasons for deducing all these details:

"In entering, the murderer cut himself at the door, and a blood-stained splinter of the wood made it clear that he is left-handed. To one side of the spot where the blood dripped on the floor you can see some candle grease. That is where his candle dripped. It is obvious that while he held in his left hand the weapon he used, he carried the candle in the right. When I put the microscope on the candle drippings I could recognize them as coming from a Sicilian candle, having studied very closely the Bertillon collection of candles assembled from all parts of the world.

"In the candle grease there appeared two small, reddish hairs very different in texture from those which grow in the beard. The assassin must have stood there holding the candle after he committed the murder biting or twisting his moustache while he debated his crime and the next procedure."

It was not long before the detective brought in a Sicilian named Foforazzo, who had been one of the Donna Maria's passengers. The doctor, offered him something.

He reached out his left hand, which was cut, to take it. When they searched him the candle was found in his pocket, and when they questioned him he broke down and confessed the murder.

New Idea in Transportation.

A "locotractor" has been developed for use in Africa. The weight of the car and cargo is supported on metal rails, but the vehicles are driven by rubber-shod wheels running on prepared strips of road metal on each side of the tracks. This arrangement is said to be very effective.

French Peasants Good Pay.

The French peasant, steady going, thrifty and frugal, and far more inclined to do without than to buy beyond his means, almost without exception pays his debts reliably and promptly. High collection costs form no part of a dealer's worries in France.

A SIMPLE METHOD TO REMEDY RHEUMATISM

AGE DOES NOT INTERFERE IF TREATMENT IS PROPERLY FOLLOWED

Many persons contend that there is no sure remedy for Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Neuritis, or their kindred diseases, but don't be biased: draw your own conclusions from the proof submitted.

Over two years ago, William Nesbitt, of 113 John St., Toronto, Ontario, was attacked by Rheumatism. Mr. Nesbitt was 53 years of age at the time and he feared the worst. After trying many remedies and prescriptions without obtaining relief he took a friend's advice and used Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules. Result—to-day Mr. Nesbitt says, "He hasn't lost a day's work since nor fears Rheumatism any more."

Mr. Nesbitt gives the entire credit for his recovery to T.R.C.'S. Profit by his experience. Try them.

HERE'S THE GOLYBOSH!

African Cat Is So Vicious That It Eats Itself.

Capt. Sylvester Ruddles, formerly of the Formosa Fencibles, and who now describes himself as a dealer in ivory nuts, arrived the other day from Africa, accompanied by his native servant, Dingbad, bringing what he avers to be the only specimen of the striped yellow golybosh of the Umdingo forests on the upper Congo in captivity, at least, a New York despatch says they did

The animal is said by its owner to be the biggest and fiercest specimen of the wildcat tribe in Africa.

The captain appeared reluctant to talk about his pet, because, he said, to those who had not explored the great forests of the Umdingo his description of the real yellow-striped golybosh might look somewhat exaggerated.

"This cat is so wild," said Capt. Ruddles, "that the parents eat the offspring and oftentimes the offspring eat up their parents. The golybosh hates everything on earth so much that the animal will frequently whirl round at frightful velocity trying to eat itself up and sometimes succeeds. That is why the golybosh is so rare. In fact, it is almost extinct through these causes I have mentioned.

"Rararuzza, the name of the one I have brought with me, which means in the Umdingo language 'Yellow fiend of the black forests,' was given me by King Umlabo for saving the life of his only daughter, Uloba, from a rogue elephant who was chasing her round the sacred baobab trees one day when she was out collecting some grasshoppers to make a salad for King Umlabo's tiffin.

"The grasshoppers in the Umdingo, I might mention, are much larger than any other insects of their kind that I have ever seen in tropical countries. The natives dry them in the sun and throw salt on them and they are not at all bad.

"It was a pure fluke," the captain continued, "that I managed to hit the wild pachyderm in the right eye with my express rifle, because he was tearing up the baobabs with his powerful trunk and knocking down everything else that came in his way.

"Four big lions had just been taking their afternoon prowl around the outskirts of the village, and I was lying doggo, as we call it, on my couch quaffing a cup of tea. I had not lost any lions and did not wish to take the trouble in the hot sun to interfere with their promenade until I heard the princess screaming at the top of her voice, in the Umdingo tongue, for help. Apparently the lions had faded to the forest when they saw the rogue elephant coming with blood in his eye.

The dear, fat old King Umlabo was so grateful that he offered to give me his daughter Uloba and make me the heir-apparent to the throne of Umdingo.

"I declined his kind offer with profuse thanks," Capt. Rubbles said, "on the plea that I had to go home and see my aged mother, as I was her only son, and her sight was growing dim. After many attempts to induce me to change my mind the king presented me with his pet wildcat Rararuzza, which he kept in a huge cage outside the royal huts under the shade of the giant palms."

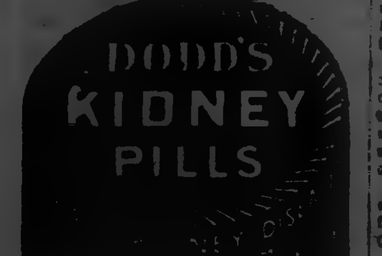
Everything that Capt. Ruddles tells is very interesting and you may believe him or not, as you choose; but, perhaps you prefer the stories of Baron Munchausen.

First Mirror Was Water.

Brushes were probably invented much later than the comb, but the mirror, the one toilet article without which woman could not exist, must date from a very early period. Perhaps a clear pool allowed curious woman a first view of her face, though we must say that she is not the only vain creature to exist, for a certain gentleman named Narcissus gazed at his reflection in the still water, and gazing fell so in love with his beauty that he pined away and died.

Sea-Island Cotton.

Practically all of the sea-island cotton is produced in the states of Georgia, Florida and South Carolina, the finest coming from the chain of islands off the Carolina coast. It is well named sea-island cotton, as when grown away from the coast the fiber rapidly degenerates into upland cotton unless seed grown in the islands is obtained for planting successive crops.



Paris Forts to be Destroyed

AFTER all, "Big Bertha" is going to "get" the fortifications of Paris, even if in an altogether different way from that calculated by von Hindenburg when he invited his imperial master to that famous "dinner at Paris by April 1," a dinner which never came off. To be more explicit: The lessons of the super-cannon in the late war have induced the French Government to raze the famous fortresses which for more than half a century guarded the "city of light." Very logically, the French have come to the conclusion that it is mere waste of perfectly good real estate to maintain around a city walls which would be ground to dust in a few hours by modern artillery. The event elicits the following comment from Robert Dell, formerly Paris correspondent of the Manchester Guardian:

"If Alphonse Karr could know that the Senate has unanimously passed the bill authorizing the demolition of the Paris fortifications, which has now become law, he would rejoice exceedingly. Seventy-eight years ago, when the fortifications that are now to disappear were made, he soundly rated the Parisians for allowing their city to be thus encompassed. 'They have destroyed the Bastile,' he said, 'in which they could hardly be put except successively and a few at a time; to-day an immense Bastile is being constructed all around Paris, at their expense, in which they will all be put, with their houses, their children, their wives, etc., and they are delighted.' The Bastile of 1841 is doomed after a much shorter life than that of its predecessor, and the Parisians seem just as much pleased as their ancestors were when it was created, but I am on the side of the Parisians of 1841. In my opinion they were right and Alphonse Karr was wrong.

"All of us have a conservative side, and I confess to being as intensively conservative where historical or sentimental associations are concerned as I am revolutionary in more important matters. The French in the majority are just the opposite; conservative in politics and economics, and even in their business methods and other concerns of practical life, but ruthlessly iconclast and utterly indifferent to historical associations. Witness their mania for changing the names of streets, sometimes for political or religious reasons, but sometimes for no reason at all except that of a desire to commemorate some local worthy who would no doubt otherwise soon be forgotten. When one sees at a street corner in some French provincial town the inscription 'Rue Emile-Zola, ancienne Rue Notre-Dame' one understands without approving, but it is impossible to restrain one's indignation when some beautiful mediaeval street name with no religious or political significance disappears in favor of that of an obscure general or a mediocre politician.

"French municipal councils seem to be bent on obliterating the history of their town. I appreciate the desire of the Paris Municipal Council to do honor to the King of the Belgians, but could not some better method have been found than that of changing an historic name like 'Cours-la-Reine' into 'Avenue Albert-Premier'? Manon Lescaut went to the fair in the Cours-la-Reine.

"To me any change of this sort is misguided. One no more desires change in a town that one loves than in a woman that one loves—the very faults of either are adorable. I hate town improvements. I shall never cease to deplore the old houses and gardens that were done away to make room for the Boulevard Raspail—that monument of the modern architect's bad taste, than which Berlin at its worst is not more ugly. And I shall mourn the Paris fortifications for the rest of my life. No doubt modern warfare has made them useless for military purposes. M. Paul Strauss, who reported to the Senate the bill that doomed them, may be right in saying that they will make room for open spaces, cheap dwellings, garden cities and homes for large families, and thus diminish tuberculosis and infantile mortality. I should have thought this rather a large program for the area concerned. It is also true, I admit, that the 'fortifs' have been during long years the resort of undesirable persons whom it was unpleasant to meet at night. But why should one ever visit the fortifications at night? Rash people that embarked on such an adventure had only themselves to blame.

"It is not merely for the sake of the fortifications themselves that I deplore their disappeance. True, they have a charm of their own and they give a character to Paris which it will lose when they are gone. But that is not the worst. With the fortifications Paris itself will go, not perhaps at once, but inevitably sooner or later. Like London, it will one day cease to be a town and become a monstrous excrescence on the face of the earth."

Odd Uses of Sawdust.

Sawdust, which most of us regard as waste, has many uses besides the manufacture of paper, for which a century-old invention is to be applied.

Oxalic acid is made from it; it is used for packing as well as smoking fish. Carbonised, it makes a better filter than ordinary charcoal.

Box wood sawdust is used for cleaning jewelry, and rosewood sawdust is compressed into artificial ebony. Furriers use it for dressing skins, while even small fragments of some woods, such as pencil cedar, are made to yield perfumes.

A peculiarity of saw dust is that it sinks in water, although the wood from which it is cut floats.—London Chronicle.

R. McDonald will open a sawmill at Embro.

Brantford is to have a branch of the St. Louis Blue-Bird Electrical Co., employing 1,500 hands.

Liverpool England's Gateway

LIVERPOOL'S history goes back not 900 years, and is held by its venerable neighbor, Chester, to be a mere parvenu, upstart and mushroom. Curiously enough, the name is pronounced as it is spelt. It is said to be derived from two words, "Liver," a bird, and "pool," a pool. The pool is an extension of the Mersey, and may be seen on application. The evidence as regards "liver" is less conclusive. Liver was a bird whose former existence is firmly believed in by every loyal citizen, though they admit it is now as extinct as the Great Auk. Others believe it is as extinct as the phoenix. The word "liver" is pronounced with the "i" long, to rhyme with "fiver," which the hotel proprietors believe to be the smallest unit of money yet printed or coined. The greatest of the city's office buildings is named in honor of this bird, and a pictorial representation of it is to be seen on every hand.

Liverpool is also proud to call itself the "Gateway to the Western World," unaware of the fact that there are nearly as many towns similarly describing themselves as there are Pullman porters called George. Originally founded as a castle by a Norman baron, it has been only in the past century and a half that its possibilities as a seaport have been recognized and developed. Until trade with North America and Africa became important Liverpool was unimportant. The real foundations of its growth and prosperity were the slave traffic, and the most respectable fortunes and families of the city owe their beginning to dealings, now discredited, with our black brethren. Only a short time ago a warehouse where slaves were once housed and sold collapsed. For many years slavery was the politics of Liverpool, just as cotton manufacture was the politics of Manchester. Elections were fought and won on the issue as long as it remained an issue, and it was only when England went bone dry on black ivory that Liverpool began to elect representatives who had denounced this commerce as flesh and blood.

Here is a specimen of the sort of literature that used to decide elections in Liverpool, dated 1700:

Be true to the men who stood true to his trust,
Remember our sad situation, we must;
When our African business was near at an end,
Remember, my lads, it was Gascoyne was our friend.
If our slave trade had gone, there's an end to our lives,
Beggars all we must be, our children and wives;
No ships from our ports their proud sail e'er would spread,
And our streets grown with grass, where the cows might be fed.

If this appeal did not decide the issue it could only have been because the poet used the word "slave." It was taboo and the business was invariably called the "African trade." In the second half of the eighteenth century Liverpool, as a slave-trading port, had surpassed its nearest rival, Bristol, and had become the chief centre of the infamous business in Europe.

Few marine enterprises at any time can have been more profitable than the slavery traffic from Liverpool. The ships left this port laden with glass beads, firewater and less deadly firearms. These were exchanged at African ports for cargoes of negroes. The human cargo was in turn handed over to West Indian planters in exchange for sugar, rum, tobacco, cotton and other native products. Thus loaded the ships returned to Liverpool, never in the course of the many thousands of miles voyaging being without a highly lucrative cargo. In those days the traffic was defended on different grounds from those held by the slave owners in the United States. It was urged as a solemn Christian duty to rescue the blacks from barbarism, and find them a haven of grace in the clutches of some rum-soaked overseer. One doesn't need to come to Liverpool to learn that the British Government bought out the West Indian and other British owners. So far as Liverpool is concerned the business got its death blow when the judges decided in 1772 that when a slave stepped on English soil he became a free man. —J. V. McAree, in the Mail and Empire.

ZBYSKBO READY TO MEET THE BEST

BIG POLAND GRAPPLER CLAIMS RIGHT TO TITLE OF CHMAMPION

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Who is the world's heavyweight wrestling champion?

Don't crowd or push, gents: there's room for all.

First there's Earl Caddock, the Anita, Iowa farmer boy with a strong claim to the title—merely a claim y'understand. Then there's Joe Stecher of Dodge, Nebraska, who asserts he's the real champion and that Caddock doesn't know what he's talking about. Next in line is Ed "Stranger" Lewis of headlock fame. Lewis is firmly convinced that he should be considered in the championship dispute. Comes now Wladek Zbyszko with a roar to be heard. Then their is Marin Plestina, who insists that nobody will wrestle him. Trailing in rear of the long procession is John Pesek, Ad Santel, Jack Taylor and a score of lesser lights, all claimants of the championship.

But—

There is a bulky person coming to our shores about the middle of February— one Stanislaus Zbyszko—who asserts that Messrs. Caddock, Stecher, Lewis, Plestina et al are the Prof. Portas of the wrestling world —all of them claimants, but none of them entitled to the championship

When Zbyszko returned to his native Poland four years ago, he left a string of bewildered wrestlers behind him in this country, all of them glad that he had departed. He had defeated the whole string of them, including virtually all of the present day stars of the mat. He waded through the entire list, the late Frank Gotch being the only man in the country to upset him.

Gotch, then the undisputed world's champion, met Zbyszko in the memorable match at the Coliseum in Chicago. Zbyszko advanced to the centre of the ring with a friendly hand extended to Gotch, who, instead of grasping it as was the custom, dove for the Polish giant's legs and pinned him before he had realized what had happened. Gotch considered himself lucky to get away with the trick. Efforts to get him to meet Zbyszko in a return match were unavailing. He refused absolutely to go to the mat with him again, although he was offered $30,000 for his share.

Zbyszko has acknowledged to be the master wrestler of the world. He is scientific to the highest degree, powerful, tricky and a marvel in physical development. Caddock, Lewis, Stecher et al may consider themselves as champions, but in their hearts they are willing to concede the Pole's superiority.

Zbyszko promises to settle the championship dispute—rather begin the task of settling it—within two weeks after his arrival in New York. He notified his manager, Jack Herman, to arrange matches at once with Caddock, Stecher, Lewis, Plestina, Pesek and the rest of them. He is anxious to meet them all with no exceptions as regards weight, color or affiliation

Since the termination of the war, Zbyszko has engaged in charitable contests to raise funds for the destitute of Poland and disabled soldiers, and is happy with his success. He writes that he is in superb condition and after two weeks of training following his arrival will be ready to rip into the crop of championship claimant with a view to establishing his undisputed right to the world's title.

Were Hearty Eaters.

Many great musical composers had exceptionally large appetites. When Handel dined alone at a restaurant he usually took the precaution of ordering a meal for three. Haydn, yet more voracious, was known to consume a meal that would have satisfied five ordinary appetites.

Chinese Typewriter.

One of the most remarkable typewriters in the world was the machine especially designed and built for Li Hung Chang, the Chinese statesman. It had 1,800 keys. No dies were available, so the engraving of the type had to be done by hand.

Cultivating Sugar Cane.

The methods of cultivating sugar cane in Trinidad are beginning to undergo radical changes through the introduction of American plows and cultivators, hay rakes, mowing machines, and crushers and pulverizers of feed for mules and cattle.

Cattle Eat "Rubber Cakes."

Experiments at Singapore have shown that a feeding cake for cattle and other stock can be produced from the residue of Para rubber seed, after the extraction of an oil comparing favorably with linseed oil.

Learned Her Lesson.

A friend of ours was a collector for a lodge. His little daughter was in the habit of accepting pennies from the members. Her mother chastised her and told her she must not accept pennies any more. So the next day, when one of the members offered her a penny, she said: "I can't take pennies; I can only take nickels and dimes."—Exchange.

The Sowing.

Every harvest looks back to a sowing, every fruit to a seed. Each golden-wheated October pre-supposes a grain-sowing May; logic, commonplace and inevitable, in conditions material. But humanity is not so inclined to recognize the fact, or to appreciate the meaning of the fact in conditions intellectual, moral, human.—Charles F. Thwing.

Next Morning the Loaves Had Two.

A baker of raisin bread whose product got shyer and shyer of raisins one day received this sarcastic letter: "Herewith I hasten to return a raisin which I found in a loaf bought on your premises this morning. Trusting that you have not been inconvenienced in any way by its temporary loss, I remain, etc."

The Whale as an Eater.

The whale rarely, if ever, swallows anything larger than a herring. Although the head is of enormous size, from one-quarter to one-third length of the body, and the mouth fifteen to twenty feet long and six to eight feet wide, the opening of the gullet is not larger than a man's fist.

The Egyptian Barber.

The ordinary village barber of Egypt bears a certain resemblance, in so far as his profession goes, to the barber-surgeon of ancient times in England. He is authorized by law after having passed an examination, to perform vaccination, application of leeches, cupping, simple dressings, but is forbidden to order or prescribe medicines.

Not Always Unlucky.

Friday has not been unlucky in history, if it is so considered by many. It was on Friday, August 3, 1492, that Columbus set sail on his voyage of discovery, and Friday, October 12, that he first sighted land: Friday, November 22, 1493, that he reached Hispanola on his second voyage; Friday, June 13, 1494, that he reached the continent of America. It was on Friday, July 17, 1776, that the motion was made that the United colonies are and ought to be free and independent. Many more occurrences could be cited.

T. H. G. DENNE RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT OF LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY COMPANY

All of Last Year's Directors Were Again Chosen—Reports of President Denne and Superintendent James.

At the annual meeting of the Little Lake Cemetery Co. all of last year's directors were re-elected as follows:—T. H. G. Denne, B. Shortly, E. H. D. Hall, W. H. Moore, E. A. Peck, A. Stevenson, B. F. Ackerman, W. G. Morrow, H. Rush.

F. Q. Quartermaine and F. J. A. Hall were re-appointed auditors.

At a subsequent meeting of the newly elected directors, F. H. G. Deane was re-elected president, and Arthur Stevenson, vice-president.

President's Report.

The report of President Denne was as follows:

To the Shareholders of the Little Lake Cemetery Company:

Your directors have to report as follows:

The permanent improvements made during the year are set out in the superintendent's report submitted herewith and have been in the opinion of the directors necessary, and have been done in a satisfactory manner by the superintendent and his assistants.

The receipts for the sale of lots during the year 1919 were $4,278.00 and $25.00 was expended in the repurchase of lots.

The ordinary receipts for the year 1919 (other than the sale of lots) were $8,537.59 and the payments $9,091.43, leaving a balance of $553.84, which was paid out of the money received from the sale of lots.

The amount paid for wages during the year 1919 exceed the wages paid in 1918 by $506.49, whereas the additional amount received from the care of lots, digging graves, greenhouse sales and vault fees in 1919 exceed the amount received in 1918 by $1,248.95. The amount received for interest was $131.57 more in 1919 than in 1918. The increase in wages was occasioned by reason of the necessity of raising rates of wages of all the employees in the cemetery in order to retain them.

In addition to the ordinary receipts there has been received trust account the sum of $700.00 for the perpetual care of lots belonging to the following estate: Mr. Robert Innis, $500; Mr. F. C. Taylor, $200.

At the beginning of the year 1919 we had a bank balance of $2,242.37, on December 31st, 1919, our bank balance was $1,567.39, showing a difference of $674.98.

Our investments this year were as follows:

Province of Quebec bonds	$1,730.78
Dominion of Canada war bonds	8,000.00
Toronto Harbor Commissioners	4,400.96
Total	$14,131.74

These bonds were paid for as follows:

Sale of Dominion war bonds (short term)	$6,953.42
City of Peterborough debentures redeemed	2,000.00
Cash from sale of lots	4,278.00
Bequests from lots owners	700.00
Total	$13,931.42

So you will see that we have used all the money received by us this year from general receipts and interest and in addition the difference between our bank balances, amounting to $674.98 less $200.32 invested in trust funds, or in other words, we have expended all of our revenue besides $474.66 for the upkeep and maintenance of our cemetery.

This past year we increased our general charges on account of the increased cost of both labor and supplies and even now our tariff is not sufficiently high to enable us to invest the entire receipts from the sale of lots and bequests to provide for the future maintenance of the cemetery in years to come when we will have no lots to sell.

During the year Mr. E. A. Peck asked to be relieved of the duties of secretary-treasurer and it was with a great deal of regret that the board accepted his resignation as he had filled that position with entire satisfaction for more than thirty years.

Miss Curtis, who has been your book-keeper and assistant secretary for three years, also resigned her position at the end of the year.

These two vacancies have been filled by appointing Mr Felix Brownscombe secretary-treasurer and Miss Jennie Watt book-keeper and assistant secretary.

I am pleased to be able to report that there is a steady increase in the number of persons who are investing in the trust funds of the company for the perpetual care of their lots and I would like to impress on all lot owners in the cemetery the advantages of entering into an agreement with the company during their life time whereby for all time to come no matter whether they are alive or dead, their lots will be cared for as they would wish.

Yours truly,
T. H. G. DENNE, President.

Superintendent James' Report.

To the President, Directors and Shareholders of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, Peterborough, Ontario:

Gentlemen,—Another year's work has been done in your cemetery and although no new work has been taken up considerable renovating of the grounds and premises has been done.

Painting—The new section of the greenhouse has been painted, both inside and out as it was too late last year to do it. I am glad to say that the new section is giving good satisfaction both for growing and heating. The other section has been painted outside.

Roads—We have done considerable work to the roads, having put 85 loads of cinders and stones on them. The six hundred gallons of oil which we tried last spring has made a great improvement to that portion of the road. Six hundred gallons of oil will cover 1,000 running yards 10 feet wide. I hope, gentlemen, that you will be able to let me have about 2,000 gallons this coming spring which would cover all the main roads. As we have all motor funerals now, we need a bylaw regarding the speed limit in the cemetery grounds.

Grading—We have this year graded new ground on section 0, two ranges, containing 86 five grave lots. On the single grave section we have one new block, making room for 150 single graves.

Vault—The walls of the vault have been white-washed and the doors have been painted. I hope, gentlemen, that you will have something done to the lift, as it does not work at all satisfactorily.

Water System—I would like to call your attention to the water system in the north portion of the cemetery. The pipes left from the old-mill system are rusted out and full of pin holes. I have plugged them in scores of places and they are continually breaking out. This will require your attention in the very near future as it is impossible to repair them.

Foundations for Monuments—During the year there has been 40 foundations put in and monuments erected. Three were taken down and new foundations put in and re-erected. There were three lots curbed with six inch walls level with the ground.

Interments—During the year there has been 204 interments and 7 removals.

I wish to thank the chairman and directors for their kindness during my sickness and also for granting me leave to visit my mother and friends in England.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

WM. JAMES,
Superintendent.

Insects Give Up Shellac.

Shellac is the joint product of insects and plants and comes from India. The lac insects are about 1-25 of an inch long, a bright red in color. They suck the juices of plants, digest them and exude them in the form of resin, which soon encases the whole insect. When the young insects have swarmed out, the resin is scraped from the branches, ground, washed, mixed with colophony and orpiment, cooked slowly and drawn out into the thin sheets we know as shellac.

The Government has so governed my business that I don't know who owns it. I am inspected, suspected, examined and re-examined, informed, required and commanded, so I don't know who I am, where I am, and why I am here. All I know is I am supposed to be an inexhaustible supply of money for every known need of the human race, and because I will not sell all I have and go out and beg, borrow or steal money to give away, I have been cussed, discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, held up, hung up, robbed and nearly ruined; and the only reason I am clinging to life is to see what in hell is coming next.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW

English Labor Leader Got Seat in Parliament Because Weather Was Fine

To say that the glorious weather which prevailed in the county of Durham, in England, on a certain July day, some sixteen years ago, in any way seriously affected the career of Arthur Henderson, the well-known Labor leader, would, of course, be absurd. Nevertheless, the fact remains that the day in question, the day set apart for the parliamentary by-election for the Barnard Castle Division, was a glorious day. The fact remains also that, because it was a glorious day, in the midst of the haymaking season, the agricultural population of the division decided that whilst by-elections were well in their way, and a journey to the polls well in its place, on a fine day in July, haymaking was more important. Now the agricultural population was Unionist almost to a man, and so it came about that when the poll was declared, Arthur Henderson, the Labor candidate, was at the head of it by forty-seven votes over his Unionist opponent, the Liberal candidate being third on the list.

The incident is interesting enough, but after all, perhaps, not very important. The man who had worked his way up from a molder's bench in the Stephenson works at Newcastle to the position of one of the most able trades union leaders of his day, who had served in turn as member of the Newcastle City Council and the Darlington Borough Council, and was, at the time of his election, Mayor of Darlington, was bound to move on to wider spheres. Parliament, sooner or later, seems to have been his inevitable place.

ARTHUR HENDERSON.

It is not that Arthur Henderson, who has been returned once again to Westminster, was ever the kind of man to take the House by storm. The dour Scotsman, very dour indeed, had other aims in view. The House to him has ever been a great workshop. Let who would do the fine speaking, Arthur Henderson was there preeminently to get things done. And so, after a few months, during which the new member for the Barnard Castle Division said little, but worked very hard, the House gradually came to realise that it had in its midst a curiously dogged driving force. It was not asked to consider any new and sweeping measures, although, to be sure, the proposal for the payment of members was first launched upon a House that could hardly believe its ears by the new Labor member; but, for the most part, Arthur Henderson devoted himself very earnestly and very persistently to achievement along accepted lines. Factory legislation, small holdings, old-age pensions, local option, housing, and so forth, all claimed his attention; whilst all the time he was steadily strengthening his position in trades union and Labor circles generally. In 1908 he was elected chairman of the Parliamentary Labor Party, and from that time to the present day, either as chairman or as secretary, he has always been in the front rank of his party.

So much for Arthur Henderson in the days before the war. The estimate of his record in war time cannot yet, perhaps, be justly made. His splendid, loyal achievements during the early years of the struggle; his sane and sober counsel to Labor on many occasions of difficulty during 1916, when he held the position of Paymaster-General and Labor adviser to the Government; and his earnest, devoted efforts and manly, straight speaking in support of war-time prohibition in Great Britain, to mention no other services, must go a long way toward balancing the misjudgments and misconceptions which characterized his support of such schemes as the Stockholm conference. His most recent official public work was, of course, in 1917, when he went to Russia, then in the midst of her first revolution, as a member of the British Government Mission. But the full story of that mission, like that of many another of the crowded incidents of the last five years, has yet to be written.

THE ANGLO-JAP. ALLIANCE.

Tokio Wonders If It Will Be Renewed.

Whether the Anglo-Japanese alliance, which expires this year, will be renewed is a subject of considerable speculation in Tokio diplomatic circles. It is pointed out among the Japanese that the world conditions have so changed since the alliance was inaugurated that both parties, particularly Great Britain, may no longer see the necessity of such an agreement. The victory over Germany, for instance, makes it possible for Great Britain to maintain a far larger naval force in the waters of the Pacific, without further dependence on Japan.

Viscount Kato, who was Japanese Ambassador to London when the alliance originated, recommends the continuance of the alliance. In the Jiji Shimpo he says:

"In my opinion there seems to be a similarity in the object of the Anglo-Japanese alliance and the League of Nations, but dissimilarity in form and the methods of attaining the object.

"The form of the existing alliance, as well as its substance, are incompatable with those of the covenant of the League of Nations.

"But there can be no doubt that the alliance has for some twenty years had a great influence, both direct and indirect, on the relations between the two nations and it is not advisable that the alliance, which has this great history should be abolished as a mere relic of the past. It is practicable to continue the alliance if both contracting powers desire it. Even if it becomes merely an agreement, or a mutual declaration, it would be better than nothing.

"I believe it is of vital necessity, and opportune, that our government should lay great stress on this question, and at once exchange views with the British Government. Not only I, but the whole nation, desires to know what the Government intends to do.

"For myself I should desire the continuance of the alliance, if Great Britain is of the same opinion."

NEARLY UPSET CONFERENCE.

Phosphoric Isle of Nauru in Pacific is Worth Millions.

In an article contributed to the London Daily Mail, Thomas L. McMahon, F.R.C.S., gives what may be assumed to be an authentic account of what he calls "the little spot of earth that nearly upset the Peace Conference," a tiny island in the loneliest part of the Central Pacific.

"A mere pinch of this magic tropical product put into the most impoverished soil has an amazing effect upon plant life. In Australia, where some 200,000 tons is used annually, it doubled the wheat crop.

"In Japan farming cannot now do without the aid of this fertilizer; Japanese farmers are keen buyers of the product. Indeed, every nation that farms extensively is placing orders for phosphate-rock.

"Nauru is only 12 miles in circumference, 5,000 acres in extent. It is 33 miles from the south of the Equator, 2,300 miles from New Zealand, 2,000 miles from Australia, 3,000 from Japan, and 4,700 miles from America. It is the Treasure Island Australia claims, New Zealand wants, and Japan demanded as part of the Marshalls, but to which Britain has established the most right.

"Before the war Nauru was German territory and attached to the German group of islands, the Marshalls. Under German administration the natives were cruelly neglected and their number dwindled to a mere 2,000. To-day under energetic and humane British administration the natives are one of the healthiest and most progressive races in the whole South Pacific. They have been weaned from their idle ways and encouraged to improve their villages, make and mend roads, and give up the insanitary practice of burying their dead in their houses or at the front or back doors.

Hundreds of natives now work in the phosphate fields, are paid very high wages, and have the most comfortable living conditions.

"The native cocoanut plantations, neglected in the German time, are now cleared, improved, and profitable. The natives are renowned for their pleasant manners—one reason why the original name of the island was 'pleasant'."

The Sex of an Egg.

According to the Paris Academy of Science the sex of eggs laid by purebred fowls may be determined by weight and size. A test is to hold the egg in the left hand in the sun or close to an electric or gas light. Shade the end of the egg with the right hand, and look for the air space or "setting" (a dark, watery spot larger than a ten-cent piece); if this is found on the top it is a male, but if lower down the side it is a female egg.

IF YOU HAVE A COLD

Do All You Care to Prevent Spread of Infection

If you are sneezing, keep away from everybody else. Like the lepers of old, you should cry "Unclean" when anyone approaches you. How do you know what you have got?

The child with the cold in school probably has got a "common cold." The chances are he has the measles. A child may have one of the contagious diseases for nearly a week, with no suspicion that he has anything but an ordinary cold. When the rash appears, quarantine is days too late. It is by means of the cough and sneeze that the infection is carried. Whooping cough is another that begins this way.

The danger with measles is not measles, though that is bad enough, and likely to cause serious eye troubles if the utmost care is not taken. [illegible] great danger is pneumonia. Remember the ravages of that disease, and treat the common cold with respectful attention.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT.

Editor Review: It has been my humble wish to do what I could to aid the churches in their mighty effort to throw off materialism so prominently set forth at present in many ways. As a contribution to this determined attempt to rescue us from the new temptation, I ask you to publish the following for one week as an advertisement: "These five separate communions are of one mind as to their belief in God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth, and in Jesus Christ His Son our Lord. They now declare to their respective constituencies and also unitedly to the Canadian people that the Only Effective Method of Making Good Citizens is by urging men to a more faithful practice of Christianity by inculcating personal faith in Jesus Christ. They insist that there is no other dependable way of correcting evil tendencies in individual and national life. Signed by the United National Campaign representing the simultaneous but independent Forward Movement of the Anglican, Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian Communions of Canada."

Seeing Rome From the Air.

American tourists may hereafter visit Roman ruins—the Coliseum, Forum, Pantheon, Caracalla baths and the basilica of Constantine, St. Peter's and other Rome gems, not in antiquated horsedrawn carriages, but in airships. The Italian navy has established a commercial dirigible service for visiting Rome and its environs from the air. The venture has met with complete success, for daily the aircraft are filled to capacity.

The correspondent of the Associated Press viewed Rome from the Italian navy's dirigible M-1. On board were diplomatic representatives of all the allied countries to the number of 34, the capacity of the craft. The United States representative was Colonel Buckey, military attache there.

Those in the party of long residence stated that looking at Rome from the dirigible brought out features of it which went unperceived to the observer on the ground.

Get Necessary Knowledge.

Most of life's great mistakes are due to insufficient knowledge. In the early days of the great war battles raged on the eastern front. There are the great lakes and marshes. Victory as a rule came to the man who knew the ground best. One of the great generals made it his program to lure his opponents into the lake region and then deliver swift blows in the time of his foes' bewilderment. The difference between grades of mental power is not so great, but it's the training and the knowledge and application that makes the great differences between men. When a man's ready to do his own rough work he isn't likely to have things "put across on him." The tenderfoot has always been a joke among his fellows. He is common bait. Let him show a little aggressiveness and the regulars will respect him more. Blunders he will make, but he will redeem them and himself by his attempts.

Twin Brides.

The strangest wedding ceremony I ever witnessed was a double wedding of twin sisters. It was not only out of the ordinary but a little uncanny to see the father walking up the aisle of the church with two brides, one on each arm, both dressed exactly alike in white satin trailing robes. They were so much alike that in the excitement of the moment the future husbands could not tell them apart and claimed the wrong brides at the foot of the altar where they stood with the father. The two young women allowed their future husbands to be fooled until the preacher asked the fatal question, and then the mistake was made known, much to the embarrassment of the men.—Chicago Tribune.

NEW LIFE FOR HOLY LAND

With Abundant Supply of Water, the Desert Promises Again to Blossom Like the Rose.

"The desert shall rejoice and blossom like the rose," old Isaiah prophesied.

The reclamation of Palestine by the British has at last opened the Holy land to the enterprise of the West, remarks the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Captain Carson of the American Red Cross commission, which followed General Allenby, tells us that the first problem of improvement encountered was that of water supply. That part of Palestine south of Beersheba has been piped with water from the Nile by British engineers with American equipment—the realization, it is said, of a dream thousands of years old. Several million gallons a day are pumped from the canal near Kantara across the Suez canal into Palestine. At Kantara rapid sand filters are used.

The pipes are laid at least eighteen inches deep in the soil or sand of the desert in order to protect them and the water from heat. North of Beersheba there is plenty of water under the surface, though very little, owing to the geologic formation and meteorologic conditions of Palestine, remains easily available. On the western slopes, however, the valleys form excellent reservoir sites for collecting the winter rains, though they would often have to be treated to prevent loss by percolation.

The problem of the water supply of Jerusalem has been attacked by such noted men as Hezekiah—who constructed a tunnel which is today an almost unexplainable engineering feat—Solomon, Pontius Pilate and Herod. In the spring of 1918 the British, using much of the Roman work, installed a six-inch line from the springs of Wady-el-Arab, about sixteen miles south of Jerusalem, through which more than 200,000 gallons a day are now flowing into the city.

It is said that Jerusalem could be furnished with more than 20,000,000 gallons a day of pure water. Almost every house in the city has its rainwater cistern, and these, with proper inspection by the newly organized health department, are being filled with safe water.

It is to be expected that the disappearance of the picturesque water venders of Jerusalem will be accompanied by the passing of the terrible waterborne diseases prevalent under Turkish rule.

MONEY-SAVING BARGAINS THAT SPARKLE WITH VAI

THE DOLLAR REIGNS SUPREME!

It Comes Into Its Own To-morrow From 8.30 a.m. to 5.30 p.m.

If you were the merchant, what would you do on Dollar Day? You would take your fall and winter stocks and mark them down for this event, because new spring stocks are arriving at this season of the year and the other merchandise is marked at clearance prices. Of course, there is some merchandise that is not subject to the change of season, but buying in large quantities has enabled us to make substantial reductions that can be had only on Dollar Day.

The Bargain Annex will be open the entire day, and we have prepared a list of values that cannot be equalled anywhere. There are only a few mentioned in this advertisement, but you will find a variety at prices that are to your liking. Remember, there is double elevator service to the Annex. No. 1, the old elevator, runs direct to the Annex, not stopping at any intermediate floors. No. 2, the new elevator, stops at all floors and the basement.

: : AT THE GRAND : :

"The Plunderer," a story of life in the Western mining camps, and featuring William Farnum, was the principal picture at the Grand last night. This is a splendid picture, well portrayed by a strong cast, and is one which holds the attention of the audience to the end. The story is of a young man who has fallen heir to a gold mine which has stood idle for a couple of years but which has in former days proved a good paying one. Upon the arrival of the new owner the man who has been acting as caretaker and who has been systematically robbing the mine tries in every way to discourage him from working it. The newcomer falls in love with the caretaker's daughter and in the final chapter everything ends in a most satisfactory manner, the caretaker promising to make restitution to the man whom he has defrauded.

A most amusing Sunshine comedy, the Pictorial Weekly and a Mutt and Jeff comedy completes a programme which should be seen to be appreciated. It will be repeated for the last time tonight.

"FAIR AND WARMER" AT THE GRAND WED. NIGHT

THE COMEDY THAT SUPPLIED FUN FOR NEW YOIK FOR A WHOLE YEAR

Two quaint innocents in a towering rage at their respective marriage partners, who plan terrible revenge and wake to find themselves the victims, make the fun of "Fair and Warmer." Avery Hopwood's farce of temperature and temperament, which Spaeth and Company will present at the Grand Wednesday evening, after a year of continuous, unabated success in New York has made it the most popular attraction of the current season.

"Fair and Warmer" made such a prompt success and such a big one that it took the money-making record from "Within the Law," which till then, had held it along Broadway. Spaeth and Company's return to the Eltinge Theatre with "Fair and Warmer," after they had christened the theatre and themselves with "Within the Law" four years before, resulted in a degree of success not often approached twice in one generation.

Mr. Hopwood struck twelve with "Fair and Warmer," making such a classic for farce as the earlier play had for melodrama. Spaeth and Company will present it here with an excellent cast of farceurs.

QUARANTINE OF STATE IS NOT PRACTICABLE

DR. McCULLOUGH SAYS SUCH ACTION AGAINST MICHIGAN IS IMPOSSIBLE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 20.—Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, this morning, in answer to the question whether, in view of the outbreak of influenza in Michigan, quarantine would be established by the Province of Ontario, said that such action could not be taken under the Health Act when influenza was concerned. He said it would be practically impossible to close the Michigan frontier, as the whole life of the southwestern section of the Province would be interrupted. He could not say whether the smallpox quarantine by Quebec and the United States against Ontario was still justified. Smallpox in Ontario showed no signs of abating, he said.

Problem of British Coal Has Caused Much Worry To Sir Auckland Geddes

SIR AUCKLAND GEDDES, who will shortly become a citizen of Canada, is not having a very happy time of it these days in Great Britain as President of the Board of Trade. It can be only from a sense of patriotism that Sir Auckland Geddes is remaining at Westminster instead of taking up the principalship at McGill University. There is no more trying problem than that of the state control of the coal trade, and all that it means in its embarrassing relations with the mine owners, the miners, the trade and the public. It will be recalled that some months ago the decision was taken to advance the price of coal for home consumption in England 6s. a ton. Sir Auckland was sharply criticized for the action, and although he quoted various official estimates and calculations to show that this was necessary for the balancing of national accounts, he left the miners unconvinced. His position was unfortunate, inasmuch as the step taken had to be based on hypothetical calculations of output, and since then the output has greatly improved. Further the finance also depended upon the prices obtainable for export coal. These prices have since mounted, and the quantity exportable has increased. Therefore, the hope was encouraged that the additional charge for domestic coal would be reduced, but Sir Auckland when he gave this encouragement, cautioned the House of Commons not to expect that the total amount of 6s. would be taken off. Judge of the sensation that occurred when a few days ago he announced that there was to be a reduction—not of 6s. but of 10s. — from the state regulated price for domestic coal. He explained that this benefit would not apply to coal used for industrial purposes, and that the big change in favor of domestic coal was being made to relieve the high cost of living. Otherwise obviously the improved situation would have been used for an equitable lowering of the prices of coal all round. In the result he was once more severely taken to task, although most people were privately of opinion that the policy was not his own but was dictated by the Cabinet, probably on the initiative of Mr. Lloyd George. In the end, however, he successfully repulsed a move by the Labor party for an enquiry by a select committee into the whole operation of the coal department, having promised that an independent firm of accountants should on definite terms of reference ascertain the accuracy of his latest statement. In the meanwhile there continue to be difficulties with the miners, and there is great resentment by mine owners at the adoption by the Government of the recommendation by Mr. Justice Sankey's committee that mine owners' profits should be limited to 1s. 2d. per ton. This proposal will have to be submitted to Parliament in a form of a bill, and its progress, especially in the House of Lords, is likely to be troublesome. Another matter which is causing Sir Auckland Geddes uneasiness is the opposition to the Anti-dumping Bill. The anticipation was that the provision would be limited to stopping the importation of goods from foreign countries when the goods were to be sold below those at which they are being sold in foreign countries. Its operation is to be limited to a number of key industries, but the machinery for determining various matters is to rest with the Board of Trade, and there is a great objection in some quarters to what is unpleasantly called bureaucratic control. Altogether, the life of the President of the Board of Trade is not a happy one, and even the quickness and smartness with which Sir Auckland produces his arguments, and his statistics are used against him by the critics. These unkind people rudely describe him as a pedagogue with a penchant for arithmetic!

Tommy's Woes.

Tommy was making determined but unsuccessful endeavors to light his pipe and at about the ninth attempt an enemy shell came across, flinging him flat on the ground and ploughing up the earth in the immediate vicinity. After he had recovered somewhat, he made one more endeavor, remarking aggrievedly: "What with these French matches and this 'ere bloomin' Belgian tobacco, my life very soon won't be worth living."

A Lost People Are Found

BEHIND many a laconic cable despatch of to-day which sounds dry and unpronounceable lies a background of vivid romance and human interest. How many people noticed these lines from an Associated Press despatch from Constantinople?

"The Lesoghians, as these mountaineers are called, have already surrounded Petrovsk, in northern Daghestan, thereby cutting the railway from the Baku oil field to Rostof-on-the-Don, which passes through Petrovsk."

Thus remote Daghestan, "an island in the sea of history," suddenly emerges into world limelight in connection with Gen. Denikine's struggle for Russian supremacy. George Kennan supplies the geographic setting and local color for this piece of news, as follows:

"In the southeastern corner of European Russia, between the Black Sea and the Caspian, there rises abruptly from the dead level of the tartar steppes a huge, broken wall of snowy, alpine mountains, which has been known to the world for more than 2,000 years as the great range of the Caucasus.

"It is in some respects one of the most remarkable mountain passes in existence. Its peaks outrank those of Switzerland, both in height and in rugged grandeur of outline; its glaciers, ice-falls and avalanches are all upon the most gigantic scale; diversity of its climates is only paralleled by the diversity of the races that inhabit it, and its history, beginning with the Argonautic expedition, is more remarkable and eventful than that of any other range on the globe.

"No other region that I have ever seen presents, in an equally limited area, such diversities of climate, scenery, and vegetation. On the northern side of the range lie the treeless wandering grounds of the Nogai Tartars—illimitable steppes, where for hundreds of miles the weary eye sees in summer only a parched waste of dry steppe grass, and in winter an ocean of snow, dotted here and there with the herds and the black tents of nomadic Mongols.

"But cross the great range from north to south, and the whole face of nature is changed. From a boundless steppe you come suddenly into a series of shallow, fertile valleys, blossoming with flowers, green with vine-tangled forests, sunny and warm as the south of France.

"Sheltered by a rampart of mountains from cold northern winds, vegetation here assumes an almost tropical luxuriance. Prunes, figs, olives, oranges and pomegranates grow, almost without cultivation, in the open air; the magnificent forests of elm, oak, maple, Colchian poplar and walnut are festooned with blossoming vines, and in autumn the sunny hillside of Georgia, Kakhetia and Mingrelia are fairly purple with vineyards of ripening grapes.

"Climate here is only a question of altitude. Out of these semi-tropical valleys you may climb in a few hours to the highest limit of vegetable life and eat your supper, if you feel so disposed, on the slow-moving ice of a glacier.

"The Caucasian range may be regarded for all ethnological purposes as a great mountainous island in the sea of human history, and on that island now live together the surviving Robinson Crusoes of a score of ship-wrecked states and nationalities—the fugitive mutineers of a hundred tribal Bounties.

"In Daghestan there are four or five thousand Jews, who, although they have lost their language and their national character, still cling to their religion; and among the high peaks of Toosetia, in the same province, is settled a community of Christians, said to be the descendants of a band of medieval Crusaders. But these are exceptions; nine-tenths of the mountaineers are Mohammedans of the fiercest, most intolerant type.

"The languages and dialects spoken by the different tribes of this heterogeneous population are more than thirty in number, and two-thirds of them are to be found in the Province of Daghestan, at the eastern end of the range, where the ethnological diversity of the population is most marked.

"Languages spoken by only 12 or 15 settlements are comparatively common and on the headwaters of the Andiski Koisu, in southwestern Dagestan, there is an isolated village of 50 or 60 houses—the aoul or Innookh—which has a language of its own, not spoken or understood by any other party of the whole Caucasian population.

"Of course, the life, customs and social organizations of a people who originated in the way that I have described, and who lived for perhaps 2,000 years in almost complete isolation from all the rest of the world, presented when they first became known many strange and archaic features. In the secluded valleys and canyons of the eastern Caucasus it was possible to study a state of society that existed in England before the Norman conquest, and see in full operation customs and legal processes that had been obsolete everywhere else in Europe for at least a billenium.

"Many of the aouls of central and southern Daghestan bear a striking resemblance to the pueblos and cliff-dwellings of New Mexico. The stone-walled houses are built together in a compact mass on the steep slope of a high terrace, and the flat roofs rise in tiers or steps, one above another, just as they do in the settlements of the Pueblo Indians. The roof of one house forms a small square front yard for the occupants of the house next above it, and ladders serve as means of inter-communication between the roofs of the ascending tiers."

The Seats of the Mighty.

A certain captain went calling upon the village belle. The old man kept a very vicious housedog, and upon the occasion of the officer's call the dog was untied. When the fearsome canine had finished with the captain the seat of the latter's trousers was missing. His brother officers, joshing him about his predicament, asked if the girl was worth risking his anatomy in that fashion. The captain replied: "Maybe not, but I have always been willing to give up my seat to any lady!"—Judge.

Benefits of Walks.

Through a daily walk in the open air, the hair may be made to grow, it is said, and this as a result of improved circulation. The skin may be improved, both in color and texture, if it is, in conjunction with this exercise, properly cleaned. The figure may be greatly improved. These blessings, with the calming of troubled nerves already mentioned, ought to make any woman, young or old, an advocate of this form of exercise.

"Carpet-Bagger"

It is said that the term "carpet-bagger" was first applied to political adventurers in America. It was designed to describe a needy political adventurer who wanders over the country pandering to the prejudices of the ignorant in order to try to get into office. He was so called because he was regarded as having only enough property to fill a carpet bag.

North American Moose.

The best moose hunting in eastern North America is found in the Canadian province of New Brunswick. The best in the United States is in Maine. Moose are believed to be holding their own if not increasing. Ernest Thompson Seton, the naturalist, estimates that there are about a million moose in North America.

Honor Not All Gutenberg's.

Printing is said to have been introduced to the world Aug. 14, 1437. John Gutenberg stands at the head of the early typographers, supported by the genius of Schoeffer and the generous patronage of Faust. Gutenberg used only blocks, and to Schoeffer is due the movable type cast from matrices. Caxton, who introduced the art into England, began life as a trader, but learned printing at Cologne. The first printed book on record is "The Psalter," which John Faust and Schoeffer published at Metz in 1437.

To Start a Clock.

The stopping of a clock may be due to clogged wheels. Thoroughly saturate a piece of white cotton with kerosene oil and place it inside the clock case. Probably at the end of a week the cotton will be black with dust that has been loosened by the fumes of the oil and the clock will run as well as ever.

LINDSAY MIDGETS DEFEAT THE LOCAL JUNIORS BY 7 GOALS TO 4

Big Bill Garnet for the Visitors Was the Star of the Night Locals Faded in Last Minutes of Game.

The lead of four goals the local Juniors had piled up in their first two games with the Lindsay Midgets was cut down to the narrow margin of one last night, when hte youngsters from Scugogville defeated the Peterborough squad by 7 to 4.

Big Bill Garrett was the star of the night. He worked hard, tore off some spectacular rushes and had something to do with every goal his team were successful in getting.

The local forward line was somewhat of a disappointment after the splendid form they showed on their first appearance here. They backchecked nicely, but in doing so roamed away from their positions and left their check open for the pass.

Collins, at centre, was perhaps the pick of the forwards, but even he had a great deal of trouble with the Lindsay defence. In fact, they seldom tried to break through the defence but contented themselves with shooting from the outside and most of the shots were either wild or weak.

Sheehan and Lawson worked well on the defence and Burgoyne in goal was good. Lawson worked ceaselessly but failed to penetrate the defence of the opposition. Sheehan was a marked man throughout but nevertheless tore off some spectacular rushes, the one that ended in a goal being the feature play of the evening.

Capt. Foley plugged with nice style, but received a couple of hard bumps that seemed to take a lot of the pep otu of him. Jackson on the other wing, checked hard and often, but was not effective while he had the puck in his possession. Thirnbeck made his debut in O. H. A. ranks as a substitute and his long poke check did a great deal of damage. He received a very nasty cut in the face a few minutes after getting on the ice, but after having it dressed gamely continued. Johnson, the other local substitute, was not used a great deal, but tried hard while he was on.

Although the Lindsay team was mostly Garnet, Bell and Stoddart on the forward line did a lot of useful work. Chambers and the two substitutes worked hard and ably assisted their more experienced partners. Green, the other defence man blocked well but did not leave the defence a great deal, leaving most of the rushing for the apparently tireless Garnet, who, at times moved up to the centre position. McCloey in goal, played nicely, but the shots coming his way did not see mto have much force behind them.

The Game

Lindsay started off with a rush and Burgoine was called on early to save. He was equal to the occasion and the puck was carried to the other end. Several shots were fired at McCloey from yell out that would not have puzzled a public school goal guardian.

Finally Garnet grabbed one in front of the local net and wasted no time in making the first counter. Soon after Foley evened it up with a pretty shot from left wing. Then Garnet came down again and made it 2 to 1, when his shot hit one of the Peterborough players and bounced into the net.

The game began to lag. Lawson was penalized for tripping. Jhouston was substituted on the wing and was immediatelyb banished for tripping. Garnet was residing ni the penalty box when the period ended.

Second the Best

The second period saw the best hockey of the night. Every player was giving his best and excitement ran high all the way.

After a few minutes of hard batling, Bell accepted a pass from Barnet and made the score 3 to 1. Soon after, Jackson added one for the locals out of a bunch in front of the Lindsay net.

Chamberg was nealized and was shortly followed by Thirnbeck. Then Bell accepted a pass from Garnet and for the second time that period bulged the net behind Burgoine.

Foley fell heavily and hurt his hip being replaced by Thirnbeck. Collins scored one for Peterborough, making the score at the end of the period 4 to 3 in favor of Lindsay.

Tied the Score

The final period looked to be Peterborough's from the outset. Thirnbeck was penalized for upsetting Garnet but even with one man short the locals kept the play in the Lindsay territory. Finally, Sheehan broke away and after the most spectacular play of the evening tied the score.

Then the locals seemed to weaken while Garnet was everywhere. He carried the puck kdown and shot but Burgaine stopped it, bouncing the puck to the front and side. Bell was apparently roaming about by himself for he seemed to be the only man in that direction and immediately put his team in the lead once more.

Soon after, Garnet made it 6 to 4, after a nice piece of three-man combination. Not to be stopped the Lindsay crew kept pressing and after some strenuous play Stoddard found the nets for the final goal of the game.

The Line-up.

LORD FRENC CONVERT TO IRISH AUTOMONY

BELIEVES FULLEST MEASURE OF HOME RULE ONLY SOLUTION OF PROBLEM

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 20. — Viscount French, lord lieutenant of Ireland, has become a convert to home rule, it is asserted in a despatch to the Pall Mall Gazette. Lord French, the correspondent declares, has become convinced that the only method of dealing with Ireland is a concession of the fullest measure of autonomy consistent with Imperial supremacy.

No Difficulty There.

Wife—I'd rather starve than cook.
Hub—I'd rather starve than have you.

INTERMEDIATES LOSE THIRD GAME TO LINDSAY IN THAT TOWN LAST NIGHT

Home Team go Wild in Second Period and Score Five Goals That Gave Them a Lead That Could Not be Overcome.

While the Juniors were going down to defeat here last night to the Lindsay Midgets a like treatment was being handed out to the Intermediates in Scugogville. The final score up there was 8 to 4 for the home crowd after a hard fought, interesting battles.

The Petes used a changed line-up, sending Halpin at centre, R. Rose taking his place on the defence. This worked well for the first period when the Petes scored 2 to their opponent's 1. Something snapped in the second period, however, and the play was all Lindsay, they putting five past Murray, while their opponents failed to fool O'Loughlin.

The last period was fast and furious, the play growing rough at times. The scores for the period stood 1-1 until Chuck Carew, by a spectacular piece of stick handling, made the game safe for the home team.

L. Rose was the best for Peterborough, but his companions failed to support him in the second period. Murray as usual played sensationally.

This means that after Cannington is disposed of the locals must defeat Lindsay here to tie up the group. Make no mistake the next time these teams clash it will be a royal.

Line-up.—

Referee—LeSeau.

PROVINCIAL HIGHWAY IS PROPOSED FROM PORT HOPE TO KAWARTHA LAKES

Peterborough Automobile Association Will Endeavor to Have Some of the 1,600 Miles of Road Improvement for This Locality—Would Have Effect Upon Townships.

A deputation of members from the local Automobile Association, consisting of Aldermen Gordon and Copping, County Warden McIntosh, Claude Rogers, Acting President Charles Banks and Secretary H. O. Fisk, attended the annual dinner and meeting of the Ontario Motor League, held at the King Edward Hotel, Monday evening.

The main feature of the evening was the enunciation of the road policy by Hon. F. C. Biggs, Minister of Public Highways. He assured the one thousand or more delegates representing over eighty clubs from all parts of the Province, that instead of 420 miles, as outlined by the old Government, that the present administration have under consideration 1600 miles of road for improvement. It might be said in passing that Hon. Mr. Biggs comes from Wentworth County, the first to go into the good road system, and that Mr. Biggs himself has had a good deal to do with the road improvement in that county, therefore, he speaks as a practical man. One important feature he pointed out was that road maintenance should commence as soon as the construction was completed, and that all roads improved should be patrolled by section men and the least little depression should be fixed at once, and not allowed to develop into expensive mud holes and ruts.

He also assured the meeting that in addition to the main artery from Windsor to the Quebec boundary that many other highways connecting up Muskoka and all the various cities to this main highway would be undertaken. It would appear to the writer that now is the time for the Peterborough Automobile Association to boost for a provincial highway leading from the main highway at Port Hope to the Kawartha Lake system through Peterborough, which is the natural gateway to our beautiful lakes, which are so little known outside of ourselves.

Ottawa, has succeeded in getting a road to Prescott, which they propose calling the Prince of Wales Highway. There is also a beautiful road from Montreal to Rouses Point, N.Y., called the King Edward Highway, this is the outlet from Montreal to the New England States. Why can we not have a King George highway from the main Provincial highway at Port Hope through Peterborough to Lakefield and Young's Point, branching through Burleigh and Kawartha Park on the West, and Clear Lake and McCracken's Landing on the east.

As the road program for several years to come is being formulated by the department at the present time, a strong deputation should be formed in this vicinity to wait on the Government and try and obtain our share, for we will not get it any other way.

SENT POLICE 45 MILES

And Ray Clark Gets Three Months Giving False Information

Port Arthur, Jan. 21.— Ray Clark was sentenced to three months in jail for giving false information to the police, causing Provincial Inspector Symons to make a 45-mile trip in search of a body which Clark told him was lying near a lumber camp. It developed that Clark told the story to "get even" with the boss who discharged him. On the trip Inspector Symons froze his face and one foot.

COUNCIL'S NEW PARKS AND RAILWAYS COM. GET DOWN TO BUSINESS IN EARNEST

Appoint Valuators of Properties For New Park—Will Insist on Street Railway Extensions.

The City Council's Railway and Parks Committee decided last night, to engage two valuators to value the properties across the bridge, authorized by the ratepayers for park purposes.

The options secured on these properties after conference between last year's Parks Committee and owners of the properties, are as follows:

Rapid Toole premises ...	$6,250.00
Bettes property	7,500.00
Ellis' Mattress Factory ..	8,000.00
Riverside Parkk	11,000.00
Total	$32,750.00

The Option of the Rapid Tood property expires on February first, and that on Ellis' premises, February 20. Hence time is short in which the city must determine whether to pay the option or not.

Ald. Crowe declared that two or three years ago, he could have purchased the Rapid Tool property for $2,500. But Ald. Crowe appreciated the fact that money today has not its value of five or six years ago This might mean that the options in hand are reasonable, he said.

The Russell-Townsend Company are renting the Rapid Tool premises at $35 a month.

Ald. Copping and the Mayor thought $4,500 might be high for this property

Ald Copping: "Why not offer $6000 for the Rapid Tool property, $7,000 to Bettes, and $10,000 for the Ball Park?"

In discussion it transpired that Lundy's first price for the Rapid Tool was $7,500 and Bette's price $10,000.

Mayor McIntyre urged that the proper business like course to pursue would be to get the properties in question valuated. "So far as I am concerned," he said, "I do not know their worth."

A motion authorising chairman Ald Gainey and the Mayor to engage two competent men to valuate these properties. Carried. This was the resolution of Aldermen Crowe and Copping.

The valuators will be asked to report to committee, this week, and owners of the properties will be invited to be present when report is submitted.

Union Station Shelved.

The project of last year's council for a Union Station was given six month's hoist on suggestion of Ald. Gordon. The G. T. R. have notified Council that they have no need for such a station; their facilities for handling business being sufficient for years to come.

The C. P. R. Company have sent the project to their chief engineer to report.

Street Railway Extensions

The matter of further street railway extensions, as embodied in Mayor McIntyre's inaugural address, came up for discussion.

Committee, on Ald. Gordon's advice decided to lay quiet for a month or five weeks, until Sir Adam Beck returns, when earnest activities by Hydro-Electric in the Toronto to Whitby radial railway scheme may be looked for. All the municipalities along this proposed radial route, have endorsed this project, and its extension from Whitby to Peterborough and on to Kinmount, is under serious consideration by the Hydro-Electric Railway Commission.

Ald. Frank White urged that this year's Council see to it that South Peterborough, at present practically isolated from street railway connection, is looked after this year by Hydro-Electric. The Commission, he saw, in the past, have been full of promises for adequate extensions, but little has been accomplished. Rialway extension to the DeLaval, at least, should be pushed along.

Who Were Present

There were present Chairman Ald. Gainey, Mayor McIntyre, Ald. Whitehouse, Copping and Crowe.

PREMIER DRURY TO RUN IN HALTON CO.

JOHN F. FORD RESIGNS TO MAKE WAY FOR LEADER

Toronto, Jan. 22. — Hon. E. C. Drury, Prime Minister of Ontario, will be nominated to run in Halton County for the seat vacated by John F. Ford, sitting member. This decision was reached by a meeting of Mr. Ford's supporters in Halton County, held on Tuesday, While the meeting was unanimous in accepting Mr. Ford's offer, it was also appreciative of the spirit which prompted him in resigning his splendidly won seat.

"Writs for by-elections in the ridings of Halton and East Kent will be issued immediately, the members elected for these constituencies having resigned in order that members of the Cabinet may obtain seats in the Legislature. Nominations will be held on the 9th day of February and elections one week following. It is the intention of the Premier to offer himself as a candidate in Halton, and the Minister of Agriculture will be a candidate in East Kent. In the course of a few days a third riding will be opened by the resignation of a member-elect to enable the Attorney-General to enter the Legislature. Mr. Raney's election will take place shortly after the two abovementioned. These are all the elections incidental to the formation of the Government which took office on November 14 last, six of the Ministers having already been elected by acclamation.

"In completing its organisation in a democratic way the Government has sought to avoid undue delay as well as undue haste. First of all, the choice of Mr. Drury as leader was submitted to the Provincial convention of the U. F. O. on December 17, when it received formal ratification and approval. This gathering was followed immediately by a conference of the supporters of the Government which endorsed the personnel of the Cabinet, and appointed a committee to arrange seats for the three Ministers who had not already been elected to the Legislature. Some twelve constituencies were placed at the disposal of this committee by members elected. In each case the committee gave careful thought to the matter, having in view the various considerations that had to be weighed, and the committee also consulted the people who were immediately concerned, before coming to a conclusion. The committee has now successfully accomplished its work. With the two elections announced herewith, and the one which will follow, the Government will be in a position to complete the preparation for the work of the session already well advanced, and to convene the Legislature for the dispatch of business."

Halton has been a Conservative stronghold for years. All attempts to win it for the Liberals have failed. At the last Provincial election Mr. Ford was returned by a majority of over 1000. The election of Premier Drury by acclamation seems assumed.

RACING RESUMED IN CANADA NEXT SPRING

HALF-MILE TRACKS TO BE ELIMINATED AND SPORT OTHERWISE RESTRICTED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 21.—In its news columns this morning the Morning Journal states that racing will be resumed in Canada in the spring, according to excellent authority, and Dr. Rutherford, in a forthcoming report, will recommend the elimination of half-mile tracks. Tracks will be confined to one in each city, the Journal believes, while eighty-two days' racing will be run over the Canadian circuit.

Denies the Report.

When shown the despatch in the Ottawa Journal this morning to the effect that racing would be resumed in Canada this spring, and containing a forecast of his forthcoming report on racing in Canada, Commissioner J. G. Rutherford stated that the whole thing was absolutely without foundation.

MR. ROLAND DENNE RE-ELECTED PRES. OF PETERBOROUGH'S INDUSTRIAL BOARD

Annual Meeting He'd This Afternoon in the Board of Trade Rooms Largely Attended by Enthusiastic Members President Reviews Last Year's Successes.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Industrial Board held in the Board of Trade rooms this afternoon was well attended by the members. They were all full of enthusiasm and are determined to make the Peterborough exhibition better this year than ever before in its history.

President's Address.

President Roland Denne in his opening address remarked that a few of the members are talking of resigning, and he asked that they do not leave the ship at this time and urged for more members of the Board, especially from the city. Mr. Denne reviewed expansion in the way of buildings on the grounds. Mr. Graham, who was a judge of the light horses last year, said he thought he was coming to a country fair. He was greatly surprised at the exhibit, and requested not to be invited to judge next year, as he contemplated making an exhibit himself." This would mean, Mr. Denne went on to say, that addition accommodations must be forthcoming.

ROLAND DENNE,
re-elected president of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition at the annual meeting this afternoon.

Peterborough citizens and merchants, the president said, have been good to the exhibition, but considerable progress has yet to be made. "We should not forget that our assets are $17,000, represented by permanent improvements and buildings made to the ground.

Substantial Surplus.

The receipts for the year, including a Government grant of $790 and municipal grants of $3175, amounted to 24,422.17. The expenditures reached 23,871.04, leaving a balance on hand of $551.13.

It was decided, on motion of Messrs. Webber and Ritney, not to engage departmental judges, the secretary having experienced the best satisfaction by picking his own judges.

It was conceded that the vegetable exhibits were crowded last year, and Mr. Denne said it would be a good idea were the retail merchants to build a building for themselves, and the present main building be devoted to vegetable exhibits. "We have," he continued, "enough lumber in the main building and barns to build a good poultry building getting away from exhibiting the birds in tents.

No Spring [illegible] Show.

The meeting concluded not to hold either a spring show or seed fair this year.

Mr. Roland Deene was re-elected president by acclamation and the members acclaimed their appreciation of his past services by hearty applause when he accepted the position, although he claimed it was someone else's turn to fill the chair.

Some Complaints

Mr. Thos. Browne offered that the daylight fireworks last year were a fizzle, and the soldiers' saddle exhibit a failure. He also suggested that delivery rigs should get badges or numbers in order to gain access to the Exhibition grounds, and that an information office is needed. Improved telephone arrangements at the grounds are likewise a crying need. Then Mr. Browne contended that passes should be of a distinctive color for each day.

Field Crop Contest.

The following were named a committee to arrange for a wheat and white oats competition next year:—Messrs. Webber, North Monaghan; Gillespie, of Otonabee; Roseborough, of Smith; R. B. Rogers, of Douro and Grandy, of Cavan. Prizes will range down from $20 for not less than five acres of exhibit.

Can't Lose Him.

Mr. Reg. Turner communicated his intention of retiring from the board of directors, but the meeting declined accepting the resignation of so valuable a member of the organization.

Mr. V. Eastwood's resolution that Mr. Turner's letter of resignation be merely received and that he be notified that the directorate cannot af-

FIVE HUNDRED LIVES ARE STILL IN DANGER

PASSENGERS CANNOT BE TRANSFERRED FROM THE DISABLED TRANSPORT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Jan. 21.—The transport Powhatan, disabled about seven hundred miles from this port, reported by wireless today that an attempted transfer of passengers had to be abandoned on account of the heavy seas. The disabled steamer is being towed to Halifax by the freighter Western Comet. The message said that weather conditions were rapidly growing worse.

Another Despatch.

Late this morning the Powhatan, which for the past three days has been in a helpless condition off the Nova Scotian coast, was still plunging aout in a heavy sea with no prospects of securing a tow or of being relieved of her passengers. During the night the steamer Western Comet managed to tow her forty-eight miles in the Halifax direction, but was compelled to abandon the effort.

Subsequently, the storm, which yesterday prevented the Dominion Government steamer Lady Laurier from landing supplies at the lightship off Halifax harbor, redoubled in fury, and with all means of direct communication with the Powhatan cut off, the rescue ships found themselves obliged to give her a wide berth.

CONSERVATIVE PARTY WILL SELECT LEADER

CONVENTION FOR THAT PURPOSE TO BE CALLED AT EARLY DATE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 21.—Plans for holding a convention to choose a leader for the Provincial Conservative party early in the summer are progressing favorably, according to the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, acting leader of the Conservative party in Ontario today. He declared that there was no alliance between the parties now in opposition with the present Farmers' Government regarding a leader.

Mr. Ferguson regards the wave of U. F. O. popularity as starting to decline. The proposition that the Government will bring its bills into the House through private members to avoid defeat, he said, was contrary to procedure. They could be defeated on the reply to the speech from the throne or on the budget.

"You don't think that the Legislature can be run like a large county council?"

"No; I think they are beginning to find that out themselves."

CHANGE OF JURISDICTION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 21.—The administration of pensions of ex-members of the Imperial forces resident in Canada has been transferred to the jurisdiction of the Board of Pension Commissioners for Canada by order-in-Council passed Jan. 19.

DRURY, DOHERTY AND BIGGS WILL SPEAK IN PETERBORO FEB. 2ND

Premier, Minister of Agriculture and Minister of Public Works Will be Guests of Local Branch of U. F. O. at Banquet in Victoria Hall.

Premier Drury, F. C. Biggs, Minister of Public Works, and Manning W. Doherty will be in the city one week from Monday, February 2nd, and will address the farmers of the district and others at the annual banquet of the local branch of the U.F.O., to be held in Victoria Hall. This event should prove a red letter day in the history of Peterborough. Messrs. Biggs and Doherty will reach the city at noon on the day in question and will in the afternoon address a gathering of the recently amalgamated dairymen. Premier Drury will arrive later in time to speak at the banquet in the evening

So large is the crowd expected that Victoria Hall was selected as the most spacious place available. It was felt that the Empress Hotel would be unable to take care of the throng that is sure to be anxious to hear the issues of the day discussed by three of the members of the new Cabinet. Mr. R. B. Roger, president of the local Farmers' Club, will preside at the banquet. It is seldom that Peterborough has the honor of a visit from a Provincial Premier and two of his Cabinet associates all in one day. Full particulars of the proposed visit will be announced from time to time.

RAILROAD STRIKE NOW PREVAILS IN ITALY

MARTIAL LAW HAS BEEN PROCLAIMED TO PRESERVE PEACE IN CITIES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 21.—Martial law has been proclaimed in the principal cities of Italy as a result of a railroad strike, says a despatch to the Petit Parisien. The correspondent says that, while Southern Italy is not so badly affected, northern and central Italy are in the grip of a general railway strike. The government was able to run a few trains over the principal lines yesterday, heavily guarded by troops armed with machine guns.

The streets of the principal cities are now patrolled by cavalry, and are under the guns of artillery units. Theatres and places of business are ordered to close at 8 p.m. Relative calm prevailed yesterday. The only disorders were reported from Genoa, where shots were fired at a train.

LOST $50 GAMBLING IN PEW OF CATHEDRAL

BENT UPON DEVOTION JAMES FARLOW IS ENTICED INTO MONTE CARLO GAME

Montreal, Jan. 21.—While viewing the beauties of St. James' Cathedral, Dominion Square, James Farrow, of Brockville, Ont., was approached by another apparent visitor, and together they discussed the grandeur of the big cathedral and its resemblance to St. Peter's at Rome. By some means the stranger enticed Farrow into a little three-card monte game in a pew at the rear of the church and thus relieved him of $50. At this point the game was brought to a sudden halt by the stranger calling: "Run, here comes the warden."

Suiting the action to his words he was soon out of sight.

JAPANESE TROOPS TO LEAVE SIBERIA

AGREEMENT TO COOPERATE WITH UNITED STATES HAS BEEN CARRIED OUT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Tokio, Jan. 21.—Japan's object in agreeing to co-operate with the United States in supporting the Czecho-Slovak troops in Siberia has been attained and the withdrawal of Japanese troops from that country will follow, it was decided at a meeting of the advisory diplomatic council yesterday, according to newspapers here. It was asserted at the meeting, it is said, that Japan has no territorial ambitions in Siberia.

The troops now being sent there are merely to replace others. It was declared that fundamental policies will not be affected by this step. The council is reported to have endorsed the cabinet's decision not to interfere further in Siberian internal affairs, and to adhere strictly to the Government's declaration when it entered into the agreement with America in 1918.

SEND DEPUTATION FOR FEDERAL BUILDINGS

REPRESENTATIVES OF CITY COUNCIL WILL INTERVIEW MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS

Mayor McIntyre and Aldermen Gordon and Gainey left last night to interview the Minister of Public Works to endeavor to have work on the proposed new Federal building for this city begun next spring. The Council is still hopeful that this may be achieved. Anyway, there is nothing like trying.

CROWD PRAY AS MEN JUMP FROM FLAMES

FOUR DEAD AND MANY INJURED AT FIRE IN NEW YORK YESTERDAY

New York, Jan. 21.—Four men were burned to death, one died as a result of jumping to escape the flames and two were so badly injured they may die, in a fire that gutted a five-story building at 10 Maiden Lane, yesterday afternoon. Sixty others were rescued.

One of the men, badly injured, leaped from the third story while a crowd of thousands on the way home from the financial district stood in the streets below and prayed and cried warnings to the man not to jump.

The fire started from an explosion of chemicals on the second floor and spread up the stairs, blocking escape.

The two dead men and the three badly hurt were unidentified.

The flames spread so rapidly after the explosion that the street was filled with people before the firemen arrived.

Suddenly half a dozen men were seen standing in the windows facing Maiden Lane.

"Get a net!" one of them shouted from the fourth floor.

When it was seen that he had either to jump or be scorched by the leaping flames, the crowd below began praying, its chant being heard above the shouts of the firemen.

Then, while the awed men and women in the street held their breaths or cried warnings to the men above, he stepped out into space and came hurtling downward.

Still shouting encouragement to the men above the crowd watched the others jump. All were badly injured.

WORSE THAN PETERBOROUGH

Ottawa, Jan. 21.— The ballots in the Eastview mayoralty election were so mixed that County Judge Gunn refused to hold a recount, and it is likely a new election will have to be held.

CANADA'S CIVIL SERVICE.

IN REPLY TO the demands of postal employes and others for more pay, the Civil Service Commission issue a lengthy statement, which may be summarized as follows:

> Proper regard must be given for the rights of the taxpayers.
>
> The Government is not an eleemosynary institution holding out largess.
>
> Civil servants are better paid than similar workers in commercial life.
>
> Payment is made for classes of service with knowledge of what other governments pay.
>
> Regard is given to the character of service rendered, routine, supervisory, and technical.
>
> No difficulty obtains in recruiting the service in competition with commercial life.
>
> No such liberal scale has ever been recommended with the single exception of the McAdoo award, and this was so liberal and found so unworkable as to circumvent its application.
>
> They have met what amounts to an almost concerted attempt to load the country down with an impossible overhead cost.
>
> To please either individuals or groups is seemingly impossible.
>
> A chemist on routine work may not be a Pasteur, and big commercial concerns have chemists doing routine work at $1500 a year or less.
>
> Justice will be done, and no more than justice, in what is the largest business concern in Canada—its employes entitled to receive a fair day's pay in return for a fair day's work.
>
> Beginners could be secured at $42.50 a month, just as they are in private business life.

Th last point urged by the commission does not appear to be well taken. From the beginner in commercial life, very little, if anything, in the way of expert training is required. He is not called upon to pass an examination as to his fitness for the calling to which he aspires. He has everything to learn even after he has secured a place on the payroll. In this respect his case differs vastly from that of the civil service employe.

The real difficulty with letter carriers and other civil servants is the feeling that the classification is not on a just basis, that the salaries paid in some grades are out of all proportion to those allotted in others. A re-classification and readjustment would tend to lull the unrest and to satisfy the employes without increasing materially the agrregate overhead cost.

At all events, such a statement as that issued by the Civil Service Commission is not likely to quiet the dissatisfaction among the members of the Government's staff of workers. No single man could live on the minimum wage that the commission propose, while the scale suggested for others would simply mean starvation for the employe with a family.

A CONVERT TO HOME RULE.

VISCOUNT FRENCH, Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, it is reported, has become a convert to home rule, believing that the Irish race can be pacified only by granting them the fullest measure of autonomy consistent with Imperial connection. Lord French, as a military man by profession, is, or was, a representative of the spirit of coercion that has been regarded from the days of the cave period of existence as the one reliable implement in suppressing all economic evils. The eyes of the rulers of man are being opened. Lord French's apparently among them. He finds that the application of the old principles have failed and that there is nothing to be gained by persevering in former courses. He has been studying the Irish sitation for months from the angle of a warrior. The object lesson of actual experience seems to have changed the soldier into an iconoclast.

RAISING TEACHERS' SALARIES.

THE CIVILIZED WORLD over the question of teachers' salaries seems to be one of the live issues of the day. It is realized that if the best men and women are to be retained in the profession, their compensation must be increased. The Detroit News says that as matters stand today it is entirely a question for each community to decide whether it is to go in strong for education, to look upon it as a potent factor in human progress, or to take this thing lightly, carrying it as a sideline, like baseball, or the Little Theatre movement, or some such form of social diversion. And so in view of the demands, some loud and some modest, made upon him, it is not at all surprising if the citizen feels at times nonplused and hesitates to respond to any proposed increase in the city's expenses.

His hesitation to give a ready ear to appeals for salary increases in this or that department is not necessarily due to lethargy or ignorance; he may feel that a certain line of civic activity already draws a sufficiently heavy allowance from the budget as compared to some other department. It is merely a matter as to how he portions off his interest and support.

Although not touching directly on the matter of teachers' salary increases in Detroit, some information given out recently by Professor Glover, of the University of Michigan, may induce not a few citizens to shift their viewpoint on the educational budget. The report shows that, not including Detroit, of the 14,523 teachers in the State, 88 per cent are women, and more than half of the total number have taught less than five years. The unavoidable conclusion to which Mr. Glover comes is that the teaching profession is a thing to be used as a stepping-stone to something better, more worth while like selling insurance, perhaps, or real estate.

And further, it is true that as long as one-half of our teachers do so lightly regard their profession, education can never attain that high place which we claim for it as a factor in human progress. We may talk in fine eulogy of the teaching profession, we may hire college presidents at $18,000 a year, and deliver baccalaureate sermons on the value of higher education. But all this will be of no avail unless our works give some evidence of our faith.

If our educational ideals warrant it, we could draw into the teaching profession the best men and women in the country. Nor would it mean an excessive outlay to keep them there. But the truth is that we should have to set aside more money for this purpose than we are doing today. If the business world offers a young man, five years after his graduation, between $4000 and $5000 a year, and our schools offer him $2000, it ought to be a rather easy guess as to where this young man will go.

Now it may be that we do not want as teachers in our schools the best men and women devoted to their high calling. It may be that there are dozens of things worth much more to us than this dignifying of our schools and making them really what we say they are. In that event we are today pursuing the right policy. But if education is in truth to be a potent factor in human progress, if our teachers are to stand unafraid and unembarrassed in the presence of our best men and women, then we shall presently have to take thought of the problem of a readjustment of teachers' salaries

THE PURCHASE OF TRUCKS.

(Farmers' Sun.)

A GOOD DEAL of comment and considerable criticism has been caused by the action of Hon. F. C. Biggs in purchasing $100,000 worth of motor trucks from L. C. Parkins, proprietor of a garage in his own county.

The facts of the case are as follows: Mr. Biggs wished to purchase a number of motor trucks of the spreader variety for his road department. He called in his engineers, told them what he wanted and asked them for their recommendations. As a result of a very thorough examination they recommended that an order be placed for Sterling trucks as being the best suited to the requirements of the Government. These trucks had to be placed through Mr. Parkins, as he is the wholesale distributor for the Hamilton and Niagara district, where the trucks were to be used.

Perhaps it is unfortunate that these trucks are not made in Canada. It is, of course, true that they could have been made to order, but the cost would have been prohibitive, while the question of repairs would have been a very vital one. As each car can do the work of ten or twelve teams, there is no doubt but that the purchase of these trucks was a very advantageous one from the Government standpoint. Mr. Biggs, perhaps was hurried in making a decision through the knowledge that the price of the trucks was shortly to advance.

It may have been unwise on the part of Mr. Biggs to place the order without calling for tenders. There was no question of crookedness, or even patronage, connected with the transaction, but it undoubtedly would have been better had Mr. Biggs advertised for tenders instead of cutting red tape and taking a short cut to get what he wanted.

The old method of awarding contracts will shortly be done away with through the appointment of a Purchasing Commission which Premier Drury expects to create in the very near future. This commission will have charge of all purchases, and will make their selections only after having advertised for tenders, thereby giving the widest possible publicity to their proceedings.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson IV January 25.

PETER STANDS FOR TRUTH AND HONESTY

Golden Text

Lying Lips are an abomination to Jehovah; but they that deal truly are his delight. Proverbs 12:22.

Lesson Acts 5.1-11

1. Peter's Exposure and Denunciation of Ananias' Guilt, verses 1-4. But in contrast to Barnabas' true generosity, 4-36, 37, a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira, his wife, sold a possession, and kept back part of the price. "Ananias" means "Jehovah is gracious," and "Sapphira" means "Beautiful"; "their names very favorable and beautiful,' comments Bengel, "but their principles were bad." His wife also being privy to it—they had planned together the deceit of offering a part as though it were their all. And laid it at the apostles' feet. "So it happens that he rather honors the feet of the apostles than the eyes of Jesus." (Calvin.)

But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thy heart "The cause of the covert act is a heart filled with sin; for that is why Satan fills the heart." (Abbott.) To lie to the Holy Spirit. A lie may be acted as well as spoken. In a town in India a British agent decided to shade the native shops by planting some peepul trees, but when the shopkeepers learned of his intention they declared they would move. The peepul tree is considered sacred by the Hindus. "We cannot tell untruths or swear falsely under a peepul tree," they said, and naively added, "and how can we carry on business otherwise?" When Peter asked Ananias, "Why hath Satan filled thy heart to lie to the Holy Spirit?" and when he asked Sapphira "How is it that ye have agreed together to try the Spirit of the Lord?" he impressed the truth that God's presence overshadowed them always, and they had not sinned against men but against God.

While it remained., did it not remain their own? and after it was sold was it not in thy power How is it that thou hast conceived this thing in thy heart? These words of Peter showed that the selling of property was wholly voluntary, and that the sin of the couple was not in retaining a part of the purchase money, which they had a perfect right to do, but in pretending that the part they offered was the whole, in seeking to gain unmerited reputation for liberality. Thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God. See Ps. 51.4

II. The Fate of Ananias, verses 5, 6. At these words Ananias fell down and gave up the ghost. Here let us recall the sensible words of Dr. Faunce that our mission is not to justify the ways of God to men, but to rectify the ways of men to God. Ananias' body was taken out and buried at once.

III. Peter's exposure and denunciation of Papphira's guilt, verses 7-9. About the space of three hours after, his wife, not knowing what was done, came in to the assembly which was still in session. And Peter answered unto her; perhaps he answered an enquiry of hers not recorded, or her salutation, but the Hebraistic use of this verb, as we saw last week, does not require a preceding question. Tell me, he questioned, whether ye sold the land for so much, meaning so much and no more. And she said, Yea, for so much.

How is it that ye have agreed together to try the Spirit of the Lord? To put to the proof whether the Holy Spirit were present and could be deceived. Behold the feet of them that have buried thy husband are at the door, and they shall carry thee out. "Peter speaks as a prophet, not as a judge; he does not give sentence, he foretells." (Abbott.)

IV. The fate of Sapphira, verse 10. And she fell down immediately at his feet, and gave up the ghost. "In the market-place of the town of Devizes in England, there is a tablet which records that near to the spot on which records that near to the spot on which it is fixed, a woman dropped down dead, having just uttered the words, 'If I have the half-crown, may God Strike me dead!' and the coin was found firmly fixed in her hand. Now, there was nothing in the cases of Ananias and Sapphira which requires vindication more than there was in that. God's hand was in both alike, and that to the sincerely pious heart is enough." (William Taylor.)

V. The effect of the incident upon the church, verse 11. Great fear came upon the whole church. This is the first time that the word church is used to designate the Christian community.

"That procedure," rejoined Senator Sorghum, "would be extremely amateurish. No polished politician thinks of accepting public responsibility excepting with reluctance and as a great favor to his fellow man."

"Why are so many young people sent away from home to study music?"

Sir George Perley, Canadian High Commissioner in London, has been named as Canadien adviser to the British delegate on the Reparation Commission which was constituted under Articles 223 (and annexes 2 and 7 thereto) of the Treaty of Peace with Germany.

The Commission is composed of one delegate and one assistant delegate nominated by each of the following powers: Great Britain, the United States, France, Italy, Japan, Belgium, and the Serb, Croat and Slovene States. The Commission is to fix the amount of damages for which Germany must make reparation under the terms of the treaty. It has wide powers to consider claims, to consider the resources and capacity of Germany to pay, to determine and modify the form of payments, and generally to supervise the administration of the reparation sections of the treaty.

The British delegates will be advised by a committee which is to be located in London and on which each of the overseas self-governing dominions of the Empire will have a voice. It is to this committee that Sir George Perley has been named as representative of Canada.

WON $350,000 AT PLAYING POKER BUT HAD THE CARDS MARKED

But Cheating Gambler Was Soundly Threshed by the Host of the Evening.

Three hundred and fifty thousand dollars won at stud poker by means of marked cards—the fraud laid bare, and its perpetrator—a man of wealth — properly man-handled for it in the presence of a party of his main items in in Broadway's latest sensation.

Those inner circles of Broadway life which are made up of the richest and best known magnates in the theatrical, motion picture and music publishing businesses are concerned in this. The names of the principals don't matter a great deal in Toronto, though they are known in some circles here. no duobt. "Won" $40,000

Last summer, at Far Rockaway and Arverne, their ranks were augmented by Mr. Trimmer, He is a manufacturer of a certain article of women's wear on an immense scale and is generally known as a millionaire.

Mr. Trimmer's "uncanny luck," as the other players called it, was noticeable from the very start. In one particular game for instance, Trimmer, because the play was with a legitimate deck, lost $650 in a few hands.

"I think I'll change the deck," he said, and went to the buffet, returning with a pack of the fleur-de-lis design. It was his deal. The game reached a point where he had a single opponent. This man had two aces Trimmer had only two kings, but he shoved several thousand dollars' worth of chips into the pot, smiling confidently.

A Little Surprise

At this moment Mr. Screen rapped on the table and said:

"Boys, this is New Year's night; it's the beginning of a new deal all around for everybody. I've got a surprise I want to give you."

Mr. Screen walked around the table and faced Trimmer as the cheat arose.

"For what you did elsewhere, Trimmer, I can't take any action," said the film man. "But for bringing marked cards into my house and stealing from my guests I'm going to give you the beating of your life right heer and now. Stick up your fists!"

Host Slugs the Cheat.

Mr. Screen is a stalwart, big-handed citizen with wide shoulders, long arms and a kick in each mitt— and he gave Trimmer everything he had. After he had battered him with a few rights and lefts and knocked him into a corner, then picked him up and administered what the lesser lights of Broadway call the "bum's rush," Trimmer landing finally in the quiet darkness of the ornamental avenue.

The cards were found to be "readers," and the other players, says the New York World, wrote down their names attesting to the fact. Then they sent word to everyone who chanced to owe Trimmer money in poker games not to pay him.

So there the matter rests—save for the telling and retelling of the tale along Broadway.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT.

Editor Review: It has been my humble wish to do what I could to aid the churches in their mighty effort to throw off materialism so prominently set forth at present in many ways. As a contribution to this determined attempt to rescue us from the new temptation, I ask you to publish the following for one week as an advertisement: "These five separate communions are of one mind as to their belief in God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth, and in Jesus Christ His Son our Lord. They now declare to their respective constituencies and also unitedly to the Canadian people, that the Only Effective Method of Making Good Citizens is by urging men to a more faithful practice of Christianity by inculcating personal faith in Jesus Christ. They insist that there is no other dependable way of correcting evil tendencies in individual and national life. SAYS RETAILERS MUST ORGANIZE OR QUIT

Independent retailers were urged to combat high costs and the competition of chain stores through combination in groups, by John Mench, director of the Duffy-Powers Co., at a recent meeting of the Corn States Retail Association in Rochester, N. Y.

He advocated strenuous publicity campaigns on the part of such groups to fight the pernicious legislation and popular ill-will which false propaganda recently has developed against the retail merchant.

"It is apparent," he said, "that within the next few years there must be a revolution in the methods of retailing. In the last few years we have watched the specialty shop doing a successful business and developing much faster than the department store. A number of large stores in Chicago and New York have gone out of existence in the last few years, and there are very few department stores doing business today that were not in business ten years ago. On the other hand, thousands of specialty shops have sprung up during this time. This means that the big retailer, who handles a number of diversified lines, is not doing as well as the little fellow.

30 TIMES FORMER SALES WITHOUT PRICE CUTTING

Arthur Scheele, vice president and manager of the fancy groceries store of Tebbetts & Garland, known in Chicago as the "Stop and Shop," is one of those merchants who does not hold to the idea that cut prices are necessary to reap a harvest in volume sales. Scheele might even be accurately termed a "conscientious objector" to the popular belief that price-slashing as a stimulus to sale production is good merchandising. On the contrary, he proceeds on the theory that if the merchandise is meritorious, price cutting is not required to augment its selling activity. He has proved this by increasing business in the various departments from five to thirty times.

When Scheele came to Chicago about five years ago as assistant to the proprietor of the Tebbetts & Garland fancy groceries store his reputation as a "live wire" who could be depended upon to "deliver the goods" had already preceded him from the small town where he was an active factor in the management of his father's grocery store.

The situation then prevailing at the T. & G. shop did not coincide at all with young Scheele's ideas of progressive merchandising, and he immediately mobilized his forces to combat the lethargic conditions which he found.

One of the first things which challenged his resourcefulness was the fact that, judging from the number of glasses and jars of jelly and jam which occupied shelving space, there was very little demand on the part of the customers for these products—at least, so far as this store was concerned.

An investigation proved that, notwithstanding that the label identified them as the ouput of one of the well-known packers of the country, the goods were not of the high-grade excellence that a particular trade demands.

Now fruits personally selected by him are packed especially for the T. & G. shop, and in some cases he even hires the farmers to raise his fruit, melons and berries; directs the purchasing of the seeds or plants himself; selects the ground on which they are to be raised and outlines the process of cultivation.

Has it paid? Ask Scheele and he will reply that instead of buying these goods in two-dozen lots, as they previously did, they are now delivered in carload shipments. That's the answer.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old famous Sage Tea Recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

Life.

Life is beautiful, and it should be lived in beauty. It has, and must have its shadows, to be sure, but there is a beauty in the shadow as well as in the glint and glimmer of the sun. Sometimes there are sorrows that are good for us, because they clear our hearts of selfishness and teach us to sympathize with our fellow human beings. Grief has made many a heart gentle that was not so before.

Furs and Feathers.

From the dawn of human history furs and feathers have been used to satisfy our taste and need for clothing and adornment. Our most primitive ancestors were connoisseurs in the plumage of birds and the pelts of animals and admired them for their possibilities in furnishing himself and his family with raiment and adornment, and so do we.

Man vs. Shellfish.

If a human being possessed strength as great in proportion to his size as that of the shellfish the average man would be able to lift the enormous weight of 2,076,000 pounds by pulling in the same degree as a limpet. And if the man pulled in the same degree as the cockle he would sustain a weight of no less than 3,000,000 pounds.

Keep Out the Moisture.

A very effective agent for moisture-proofing wood has been found in an aluminum leaf coating. This coating practically insulates the wood against any change in atmospheric conditions, and is particularly valuable for use where accurate form and balance must be maintained, as would be necessary in an airplane propeller.

Deserving of Reward.

We are to be rewarded, not only for work done, but for burdens borne, and I am not sure but that the brightest rewards will be for those who have borne burdens without murmuring.—Andrew Bonar.

Capitalist Reflections.

The pronoun "I" and the interjection "O" are better written without using a capital. Let "U" be added and it signifies that the writer has no capital at all.—Boston Transcript.

Not Flattering.

"You must have said something dreadful to Mr. Bestseller." "I merely suggested that he hire the fellow who got up his advertisements to write his books for him."

High Tribute to Lloyd Harris

THE dinner to Mr. Lloyd Harris on the eve of his departure from London was reported in the London Daily Telegraph, as follows:—

Mr. Lloyd Harris, chairman of the Canadian Trade Mission, was the guest of the Canadian Association at Prince's Restaurant last night, when Lt.-Col. W. Grant Morden, M.P., presided, and amongst those present were: Earl of Reading, Viscount Furness, Lord Desborough, Lord Beaverbrook, Bishop of Birmingham, Hon. Arthur O. Crichton, Sir George Perley (High Commissioner for Canada), Sir John Aird, Sir Park Goff, M.P., Sir Herbert Ames, M.P. (financial director of the League of Nations), Sir Henry Dalziel, M.P., Sir C. Kinloch-Cooke, M.P., Lt.-Col. L. S. Amery, M.P. (Under Secretary for the Colonies), Lt.-Col. the Hon. Cuthbert James, Col. Sir George McLaren Brown, Sir Roderick Jones, Maj.-Gen. Sir Hubert Gough, Mr. Horatio Bottomley, M.P., Lt.-Col. Sir Campbell Stuart, Col. Sir J. Roper Parkington, Sir Reginald Macleod, Sir James Mo-Kechnie, Mr. Clem Edwards, M.P., Commander Sir A. Trevor Dawson, Sir John Cadman, Mr. R. D. Blumenfeld, Mr. Edmund Bristol, M.P., Mr. T. R. Hall Caine, Capt. Jas. O'Grady, M.P., Mr. J. A. Seddon, M.P., and Lt.-Col. Claude G. Bryan (hon. secretary).

The chairman in proposing "Our Guest" said Mr. Harris came to this country with great knowledge of the Canadian people and the whole scale of industrial life in that Dominion. He did not think there was to-day a living man with the same extensive knowledge of the industrial and trade position of Canada or one more capable of developing Canadian trade than their guest.

Lord Beaverbrook in supporting the toast said he had been associated with Mr. Lloyd Harris in almost every business that gentleman had undertaken in Canada. It was of the utmost importance that Canadians should be properly interpreted to the United States, and they must also interpret to the United States the whole spirit of the British Empire. If Canada succeeded in making a complete understanding between these two branches of the English-speaking race she would have accomplished a great task. In conclusion Lord Beaverbrook said he hoped it would be a long time before they lost the services of Sir George Perley as High Commissioner for Canada. Sir George had done a great work during the war.

Mr. Lloyd Harris, replying, said that when the armistice was signed the Canadian Government immediately took steps to investigate and take advantage of opportunities which might exist in Europe and other parts of the world to extend and develop the Canadian export trade, and thus enable Canada to maintain her position so far as possible with the extension of her export trade, which had so greatly increased during the war period. It was also designed to take advantage of the experience which they in Canada had gained during the war with the great development of their industries. For that reason the Canadian Mission was organized, and he was asked to proceed to London for the purpose of carrying out the objects mentioned. It had been a great experience, and he had been surprised at the opportunities offered throughout the world to establish new markets for Canadian exports. He had also made a new discovery—how great a heritage they possessed who were fortunate enough to be citizens of the British Empire. Instead of spending too much time in talking about Imperial Parliaments and Imperial conferences, we should set up an Imperial trade council, on which there would be representatives from all parts of the Empire. The members should be chosen for their ability to the service of the Empire for the purpose of making a survey of the requirements and all resources of all parts of the Empire, and suggest ways and means for best developing and bringing together of the supply and demand of such resources. It was not good enough to leave the administration of such an important function of government as trade and commerce to a bureaucracy which knew nothing about trade and commerce. They must do something to bring our great Empire closer together, and make it one consolidated unity. (Cheers.)

Lt.-Col. Amery, who proposed the toast of "Canada," after referring to the great services of the Dominion throughout the war, said that the Empire was a practical necessity to Canada. The Empire belong to Canada just as much as to England. (Cheers.) He hoped Canada would rise to the height of her responsibilities, and would show that sense of power and energy which her imperial outlook demanded.

Sir George Perley and Sir Herbert Ames responded.

"The Imperial Forces" was proposed by Lt.-Col. Sir George McLaren Brown, and Maj.-Gen. Sir Hubert Gough replied.

The concluding toast, that of "The Press," was proposed by Mr. Edmund Bristol, and acknowledged by Viscount Burnham and Mr. Horatio Bottomley.

HAS TALE OF WOE

Uncle Joe Fell Among—Well, Say Profiteers.

Charged $1.50 for One of the Absolute Necessaries of Life, He Has Renounced Yankees and All Their Works.

Anyone who has ever had the maddening experience of being stung, stripped, robbed or mulcted of a goodly sum can and will sympathize with Uncle Joe Howsley, a gentleman from the Lone Star state, who came East on a little summer trip and fell among thieves, as he views the matter. Uncle Joe is an expert on watermelons, knowing the fruit from stem to blow end like a book. He is also familiar with watermelon etiquette, so his experience proved shocking in more ways than one. A writer in a Pittsburgh paper tells the story as follows:

Uncle Joe owned a five-acre farm down in Shackleford county, Texas, until a few months ago. He then, through the will of a benign fate and the activities of an oil company, ceased being the owner of a farm and became an oilman with an income of several thousand perfectly good dollars a month. As a consequence, the wanderlust struck Uncle Joe and he accordingly hied himself northward to explore unfamiliar lands. Now he is going back to God's country, glad, suh, that the unfamiliarity lasted for the years it did.

Down in Uncle Joe's land the nectar known as the watermelon is a favorite form of diet, and Uncle Joe is one of the epicures who when in his part of the world partook of the treat daily. Down there a melon of a size that would tax a man's strength to tote, suh, could be purchased for a five-cent piece. Or, if a field was at hand wherein grew the food of the gods, the taking thereof without the knowledge of the field's owner was considered no breach of the law.

It is not strange, therefore, that on strolling about a city to view its sights, when "Uncle Joe's" eyes fell upon a restaurant in the window of which were displayed numerous inviting red and green melons, life took on an interest that it had not felt since his train had passed over the boundary of the Grand Old State.

"Uncle Joe" hastened inside and called for watermelon.

After what seemed much time, a slice, which "Uncle Joe" will testify was not more than two by six inches, was placed before him.

"I said 'watermelon'; not a bite, suh," he announced cuttingly, when his amazement at the magnitude of the thing before him had passed sufficiently to allow him to speak.

After much argument, he made the bewildered waiter understand that what he desired was a whole melon like any gentleman is served with down where they know how to serve it.

"Uncle Joe" consumed the two halves placed before him in blissful ignorance of the outrage that was about to be perpetrated upon him.

Then came the check!

Watermelon, $1.50, suh!

It wasn't necessary to send in a riot call, but for a time it looked as though it might be. As it was, "Uncle Joe" stamped from the den of thieves, vowing vengeance against all Yankees in general and one Yankee restaurant in particular.

Must Keep Climbing.

You can never let down the bars when you want to become great. The price is eternal vigilance. Even when success is assured you must keep on going. Men who become great by spurts usually sink into insignificance the same way. Besides making up your mind that you are going to succeed, you must see to it that you realize what's in your mind. Talking about what you expect to do will never bring it to pass. The up-hill is always before you. The only way to reach the top is to climb. If you can command the means that takes you there it will save your energy for other things. Usually the energy you develop through the climb will be useful in days to come. The climb may tire you, but it will also make you appreciate the view.—Grit.

Ancient Indian Burial Ground.

Beneath roots of two large trees two Indian skulls and other bones of the human body were found by workmen leveling mounds in the city park on the shores of Lake Bemidji, Minn.

The skulls and bones were badly decayed, but the teeth were in fairly good condition. Charcoal in large quantities was found in the vicinity of the bones, which indicates that the place was an Indian burial pyre, old residents say.

It is believed that beneath the mound may be found many more bodies, but the workmen merely removed the top earth and, with the exception of a few bones which were gathered by souvenir seekers, the skeletons were again buried.

No Doubt of That.

"Of course, you know that whisky is poison?"

"Yes," replied Uncle Bill Bottletop; "any kind you can buy now is mighty likely to be."

Relative Values.

"The summer boarders will soon be going home."

"I'm glad of it," said Farmer Corntossel. "I'm gettin' kind o' tired of givin' up all this precious food for mere money."

A letter received at Philadelphia from an American soldier on the Rhine says a dollar will buy 333 steins of beer in Germany.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is sign you have been eating too much meat.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralise acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.

ELDERS TAKE SECOND PLACE

Writer Asserts That Spanish Children Are the Worst Spoiled Youngsters on the Earth.

W. B. Trites, a writer, who recently returned from Spain, was talking in Philadelphia about Spanish children.

"Spanish children," said he, "are the worst spoiled, and Spanish parents the most indulgent, in the world. The dining and reception rooms of Spanish hotels swarm with screaming, frolicking, fighting children, but the Spanish guests smile indulgently. A child of six eats as much as it likes of everything on the table, and accompanies its parents everywhere. At three or four o'clock in the morning, the usual hour for Spanish entertainments to come to an end, innumerable tiny tots, exhausted, are bundled into waiting carriages by loving parents. If you ask them why they didn't leave the poor babies at home, they shrug their shoulders and answer, helplessly: 'They wanted to come.'

"I suppose the only reason one doesn't see Spanish babies seated at the cafes behind glasses of beer or whisky is because they prefer their sugary sirups."

Mr. Trites smiled.

"An English newspaper correspondent," he continued, "strolled through the reception room at the Madrid hotel at which I stayed, when a Spanish mother said to a friend beside her:

"'That Englishman doesn't like children.'

"'How do you know?' said her friend.

"'Because,' was the reply, 'my little Carlos went into his room yesterday, while he was out, to have a little fun with his typewriter. The child only played with the machine and sharpened the pencils on his desk with a razor that was there. And yet I notice that whenever the Englishman sees Carlos now he looks cross.'"

Wild Animals in Banff.

Although Banff, Alberta, is a hustling village during the summer and is thronged with tourists, wild deer from the mountains are to be seen daily on the streets and at night stately elk leap from the roads in the bushes to escape approaching automobiles. If a Banff cottager expects to eat his own "garden truck" he builds a deer-proof fence around his patch. The grounds of Brett hospital are open from the street and the other night a half-dozen mule deer made a raid upon the flower garden. Banff is the capital of Rocky Mountain park, and shooting game within the park limits is forbidden by law. The deer, being unmolested, have become very tame, and even a bear now and then pays a friendly visit to the village. Not long ago a bicyclist, speeding down one of the side streets at night, hit a dark object and turned a somersault or two before he hit the macadam. Sitting up, he looked around and discovered a bear hitting the trail for home as fast as four legs could carry him. Although tame and somewhat obtrusive, the deer, elk and bear do not relish too close an acquaintance with man, and have proved themselves to be not only picturesque but perfectly safe neighbors.

Was Out of Small Change.

Chen Chi Fat, wealthy Chinese importer and exporter of Panama and Hongkong, was short of small change when he proceeded to settle for the transportation of himself, wife and three children, who had been booked to leave San Francisco for the Orient on the liner China. He tendered a certified check for $300,000. When General Passenger Agent H. N. Thomas asked if that was the only sort of change he had, Chen exhibited another check. It was for an even $500,000.

Thomas never smiled as he asked if the patron wished gold in change. Chen said this would suit him, but when four men started to pull a big truck from the Bank of Canton, Chen decided that a certificate of deposit would be better. He has made a fortune in Panama hats and is going to Hongkong to establish a new agency.

AFTERBIRTH RETAINED

The Cause and Cure of a Not Uncommon Trouble.

Cows of All Ages Are Sometimes Affected — Remedies Suggested Where Veterinary Cannot Be Had—Grape Pruning For the Garden.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

RETENTION of the afterbirth, foetal membranes or placenta, commonly called "the cleanings," is not uncommon in cows. Its cause is not understood. While it is probably more frequently met with in cows in low condition and unsanitary surroundings, no care, food, attention or surroundings act as preventives. It is noticed in cows of all ages, all breeds, cows in all conditions and at all seasons. We cannot understand why it occurs, or why it cannot be prevented, but experience teaches us that such is the fact. Good care, comfortable surroundings, avoidance of cold and dampness, especially in cold weather and giving a warm mash for a day or two after calving tend to aid expulsion of the membranes, but even all precautions frequently fail. The administration of medicines is ineffective. In ordinary cases the membranes are expelled shortly or in a few hours after parturition, while in other cases they are retained for 24 hours or longer and then spontaneously expelled. In other cases spontaneous expulsion does not take place until after decomposition, when they are expelled in pus and small pieces.

The symptoms are usually evident by the protrusion through the vulva of a portion of the membranes, but in rare cases this symptom is not present, the membranes being wholly contained within the uterus. In such cases, provided the cow has been untied it is hard to know whether they are retained or have been eaten by the cow. Cows have the objectionable habit of eating the afterbirth. We cannot account for this taste, and when possible it should be prevented. In some cases the consumption of the membranes does not appear to affect the health or general condition of the animal; in others it causes trouble, and in some cases death from various conditions.

Treatment.—When the membranes have been retained for 24 hours or over in warm weather or for forty-eight hours in cold weather they should be carefully removed by hand. Where a veterinarian can readily be procured it is probably wise for the ordinary stock owner to employ him, but a stockman who understands the anatomy of the parts, and is not afraid of a dirty and sometimes tedious job can operate himself. The lining membrane of the womb is covered with many little lumps (called cotyledons) which are attached by constricted necks, with surfaces varying from one inch or less to three or four inches in diameter, to which the membranes are attached. The operator should have an antiseptic lotion as a 2 per cent. solution of one of the coal tar antisetics in warm water. A gallon of two of this should be injected into the womb. The operator then disinfects his hand and arm with the same, introduces the hand into the womb and carefully separates the membrane from each cotyledon, being careful to not tear off any of them. If a few are removed the consequences are not likely to be serious, but it is better to remove none. When the whole has been removed a little more of the antiseptic should be injected into the womb. It is good practice to give the cow 40 to 50 drops of carbolic acid in a part of cold water as a drench, or sprinkled on her food three times daily until all discharge ceases.—J. H. R., O. A. College, Guelph.

Grape Pruning For the Garden.

The average neglected grapevine is generally such a tangled mess that it is very difficult to describe how to prune it. The owner should determine what sort of a trellis he means to fasten his vine on. If there are a number of vines in a row the general practice is to grow it on two wires, these to be drawn tight on posts about 16 feet apart, first wire three feet and second wire five feet from the ground. If only one or two vines are in a place it can be grown on a trellis made of two narrow strips of board nailed to posts.

One thing never to be overlooked is all fruit is produced on last year's wood. Most neglected vines have too much old wood. Try to get one or two upright canes of two-year-old wood or older with four arms or younger canes equally distributed on the two wires. These arms should not be over six feet long, giving four arms of this length. This is sufficient bearing wood for any vine. Suppose the upright part is satisfactory and there are four arms on it, from these arms laterals or side shoots will grow, on which the fruit is produced. A vine should be pruned after it freezes before winter and before it thaws in the spring. Pruning in mild weather causes bleeding from the cuts. The laterals that bore fruit should be cut back, only leaving one bud to sprout the following season and the fruit will grow on that sprout. It is quite easy to occasionally renew one or more arms by training a young branch to take the older one's place. When that is done cut off the old branch. With a little practice pruning is easy, the common fault being to leave too much wood. If in doubt as to the above method of pruning, write for Illustrated Bulletin 237, "The Grape in Ontario."

Scarcity of Feeder Cattle.

With the growing scarcity of feeder cattle and the advance in value of farm lands, the baby-beef industry is of increasing importance and is receiving the attention of farmers in all live stock sections of the country.

ENRICHING THE SOIL

Some Hints Upon the Wise Use of Artificial Fertilizers.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE use of artificial fertilizers in this country is bound to increase. These materials are, however, expensive and those intending to make use of them should make an effort to inform themselves regarding the conditions under which they will give the best results. Too many people are using fertilisers without fully realizing that they carry plants' food and that the real object in applying them is to supply needed available food for the plant.

To intelligently make use of these materials there are three points to be considered. First the needs of the soil, second, the needs of the plant, and, third, the nature of the materials to be applied.

It should always be kept in mind that the soil carries immense amounts of plant food, but that only a small quantity of this is rendered available during the growing season. The acids formed by the decay of the organic matter in the soil is the chief natural agency operating to bring the big store of mineral matter into a form that may be taken up by the plant. The organic matter is also the source of nitrogen to the plant, and it increases the water holding capacity of the soil as well as improves its physical condition. Consequently every effort ought to be made to maintain or increase the amount of decaying organic matter. Otherwise the crop will be grown largely from the added fertilisers and not from the plant food of the soil. It is for this reason that it is sometimes stated that if you commence to use fertilisers you must continue their use.

However, no matter how much we try to render available the immense stores of food in the soil, we cannot bring it about fast enough to supply the needs, especially of heavy feeding crops, such as the mangels, turnips and garden crops. Hence the need of manures. Stable manure cannot always be got in sufficient quantities to fulfill requirements, nor does it always furnish the needed plant food in the right proportions to develop the plant properly. To supplement the manure is the place of fertilisers.

Stable manure is essentially a nitrogenous fertiliser. Hence if used in large quantities it will force big leaf and stem growth and retard maturity. Consequently, a plentiful supply of stable manure would help the growth of lettuce, spinach, mangel, etc.; but it would not be so satisfactory for tomatoes, sugar beets, or other crops that must be brought to maturity. What these plants need is some stable manure and some mineral fertiliser to force early maturity. On the other hand, plants like lettuce, spinach, etc., are grown for their leaf and stem and maturity is not a necessary point, hence a soluble form of nitrogenous fertilisers may even be added after heavy applications of manure with good results.

The manufacturer of mixed fertilisers seeks to prepare special mixtures that will be suitable for different crops, but the farmer or gardener should strive to inform himself regarding his soil and crop needs that he may be able to select the form of fertiliser that will bring about the growth desired, and he should study the fertiliser materials available that he may buy intelligently and economically.—R. Harcourt, O. A. College, Guelph.

General Farm Hints.

Put a plant or two of rhubarb in the cellar which should be kept at a temperature of 60 to 70 degrees in sand, which is kept moist and in the dark so that it will produce stems and no leaves. Do some reading on gardening work for this year, but more especially think over the failures of the last.

If the roads are in good shape, get your manure out and spread. A dressing of 8 to 10 loads per acre will keep the orchard in condition. If buying in the larger cities, order early as the car situation is serious enough to delay shipments.

Light pruning of apple orchards, taking out the small wood with the long-handled pruners, may be carried out during bright weather. Grape trimming may also be looked after when the weather is suitable.

Before feeding or selling any grain crops make good provision for your own seed supply.

Inspect and oil windmill before winter.

If weather is fine and warm may continue to spray peach trees and give first application to trees badly infested with San Jose scale.

On rough days during this and succeeding months it is well to go over all packages, barrels, boxes, etc., mending broken carriers, handling baskets.

Be sure pumps are in good condition.

It is not too early to consider the question of getting help for the big crop which will have to be raised in 1920.

How to Tell Sapphires.

A really good sapphire should appear blue by artificial light as well as daylight; some stones have a trace of black, and some red, the latter making them resemble amethyst, especially by lamplight, or gaslight.

Consider the Centipede.

DEATH RECALLS FAMOUS DUEL

Grandson of "Dan" O'Connell Used to Tell of "Liberator's" Meeting With D'Esterre.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, grandson of the "Liberator," died a few days ago at his residence, Darrynane abbey, Waterville, Ireland, in his eighty-fourth year. He was a magistrate and deputy lieutenant for County Kerry, and served the office of high sheriff in 1860.

A Dublin gentleman has an interesting picture of the late Mr. O'Connell holding the pistol which his grandfather used in a famous duel. The following description of the encounter is taken from his own description:

"In a speech at a Catholic meeting on January 24, 1815, the 'Liberator' referred to the Orange corporation of Dublin as a 'beggarly corporation.' D'Esterre, a member of the corporation and a well-known shot with pistols, demanded an explanation, which was refused.

"After consulting his friends, D'Esterre paraded the streets for two days with the avowed intention of horsewhipping O'Connell. The two, however, did not meet, and finally D'Esterre sent Sir Edward Stanley with a message demanding an explanation. O'Connell referred Sir Edward to Major MacNamarra, a Protestant gentleman of County Clare, who refused to give any explanation, whereupon Sir Edward Stanley delivered a challenge, which was accepted, and half-past three that afternoon, at Bishop's court, County Kildare, four or five miles from Naas, on the road to Dublin, was fixed for the meeting.

"They met accordingly and fired together, by signal. D'Esterre's bullet went wide. O'Connell aimed low, intending to hit D'Esterre in the leg, but actually did so in the groin. The bullet went through, penetrating the bladder, and came out at the back, inflicting a mortal wound. D'Esterre lived for two days only.

"The pistols used by the 'Liberator' were given him by an English officer, quartered in Dublin, to whom he had done a kindness, and who, when giving them, said, as a proof of their goodness, that they had already killed ten men. They are a pair of 'Rigby's Particulars,' and Mr. O'Connell often shot at a mark with them, and found them to be very good and accurate.

"D'Esterre's daughter married Lieutenant Roberts of the British royal navy, who commanded the Sirius, the first vessel to go from Cork to America (Boston) under her own steam, and subsequently the President, which was lost with all on board, on the way from New York to Liverpool."

Way of "Parlor Socialist."

When Philadelphia shall have completed its great underground and elevated railway system and also paid for the immense Delaware front improvements, the city debt per person will be around $100.

But in some German cities like Frankfort and Munich, where socialistic ideas ruled before the war, the municipal debts were over six times that amount, writes "Girard" in the Philadelphia Press.

The parlor socialist is a great chap for devising ways to take money out of other people's pockets, but a dead failure at suggesting a method of putting money in your pocket.

One who worked with and knew him well tells me a favorite remark of Maj. Luther Bent was this:

"My board of directors is a board that I direct."

Were the veteran major alive today and operating a big plant he would discover that some sort of a commission rooted in politics would really direct his directors as well as himself.

Foundation of True Beauty.

The truest beauty arises from a noble character. A soul which is radiant with love and truth lights even the homeliest face into beauty which is not transient, but which grows ever deeper and more abiding as the years pass on.

What "Cenotaph" Means.

The word is derived from the Greek words "kenos," meaning "empty" and "taphos," meaning "tomb." In other words, a cenotaph is a sepulchral monument erected in honor of a person whose body lies elsewhere.

TRUSTEES OF THE NICHOLLS' HOSPITAL HELD THEIR ANNUAL MEETING MONDAY

Larger Amount of Busines Done in 1919 Than in Any Year of History of Institution—R. Hall is Re-Elected Chairman.

The annual meeting of the trustees of the Nicholls Hospital was held on Monday, January 19th, 1920, in the Dominion Bank Chambers. There were present Richard Hall, Esq., in the chair, and Messrs. Robt. Fair, Dr. Malcolm McCulloch, G. Walter Green, B. F. Ackerman, E. A. Peck, William Madill, W. H. Hill and His Worship Mayor McIntyre.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read and confirmed, after which the secretary, Mr. John Crane, presented the statement of receipts and expenditures for the statutory year, ending Sept. 30th, last.

In reviewing the statement, Mr. Crane pointed out that, while the statement did not show an actual deficit, obligations had been undertaken for repairs, improvements and supplies, which would make the outlay in the new year unusually heavy, and he could not hope to keep within revenue, unless a much larger grant was received from the city.

After some discussion, the statement was referred to the city auditor.

Chairman's Report.

Chairman and Members, Nicholls Hospital Trust:

In reviewing the activities of the Nicholls Hospital for the past year I am glad to say that the usefulness and progress of this institution grows apace. During the year we treated 1455 patients, as against 1270 last year, showing that the hospital is being used more and more by those requiring medical attention—the number of patients treated was the largest in our history.

Since our last annual meeting, our superintendent, Miss Beamish, has returned from overseas and has resumed her work as superintendent. This Board may well value the efficient services of Miss Beamish, whose administration is evidently satisfactory.

I am glad to say that Miss Sanderson, who, during the absence of our superintendent filled the position with conspicious fidelity and faithfulness, still remains with us as "second in command" and to her the Board is indebted much for her zeal in carrying on so efficiently during the trying days of the war.

Our nursing staff is doing excellent service, and we cannot but be proud of the splendid type of nurses, graduating from Nicholls Hospital every year.

This Board has tried within its powers to meet the demands of those in its employ, by increased remunerations; but the higher costs for all commodities has been a matter of serious consideration, when every endeavor is made to provide the best dietary possible and generally make for the comfort of all in the institution.

We have been forced to undertake certain needed repairs, too long delayed. The hospital has been redecorated throughout, and presents a much improved and cheerful appearance. The Property Committee, under the chairmanship of Dr. Malcolm McCulloch, has done this work well and deserves great credit. Changes in the heating system, renewal of a large portion of the shingling and other repairs have cost considerable sums of money, but we believe the ratepayers will cheerfully respond and furnish the means to advance the work of this hospital.

It is but five years since the new wing was opened, and already there are demands on our accommodation, which point to extension before many years are past.

I wish to extend my thanks to the trustees for their faithful services during the year, and I feel sure I but view your sentiments when I extend to our medical staff, our nursing staff and employees of the hospital, our appreciation of their services.

VETERANS GIVE $100 TO ARMENIAN FUND

PREPARATIONS MADE FOR PROVINCIAL CONVENTION MARCH 17-20.

Last night the Great War Veterans' Association at their regular bi-monthly meeting unanimously decided to grant the sum of $100 to the Armenian Relief Fund. The object of this fund was made the subject of several speeches by members, and it was only regretted that the sum donated could not have been made larger. A subscription list has been opened in the rooms, and any member who wishes to do so may subscribe as much as he pleases.

The standing committees for the year were struck by the President Comrade R. H. Muir. The chairmen of the various committees are as follows:

House Committee— Comrade LeBarr.

Entertainment Committee — Comrade Primeau.

Constitution and Laws — Comrade Perks.

Relief—Comrade Clancy.

Visiting—Comrade Coleman.

Billeting—Comrade Batley.

Reception—Comrade Layfield.

Finance—Comrade McPherson.

Some of the members complained that the meetings were too long drawn out, and a resolution was introduced recommending that all the meetings be adjourned at 10 o'clock This was lost, however, on a vote and it was decided that all business before any meeting must be finished before adjournment.

Several committees were also appointed in connection with the provincial convention of the association which is to be held in this city on March 17 to 20. It is expected that between 500 and 600 delegates from all parts of Ontario will be present and the local branch is going to do all in its power to make their visit to Peterborough one which they will long remember.

Immediately after the close of the convention here the delegates will proceed to Montreal, where the Dominion convention opens March 22 It is expected that many items of importance to the returned men will be discussed at both of these conventions.

Caught an Eagle.

A very unusual catch was made on December 29 by Percy Fowler, who lives a mile from Huntsville, Ont. During the night his hen-house was molested and some hens taken. He suspected a fox, and set a trap. At noon Mr. Fowler went to investigate a furore among his flock and found a huge brown eagle in the trap. The bird was held by one claw only and was quickly captured. It is one of the first of the species caught in this section for many years. Mr. Fowler has in mind offering it to the Toronto Zoo.

WORLD'S LARGEST BIBLE.

It Will Shortly Pay Visit to This Country.

A bible weighing three-quarters of a ton—the largest in the world—carried in a specially constructed motor-car with an attractive pulpit and platform, will be the principal feature of a world-wide publicity campaign for the popularization of the Holy Scriptures that will start early in the New Year under the auspices of the Bible Crusade. After touring England, Scotland, and Wales the gigantic volume will cross the seas and continue its crusade in Canada, the United States, and other parts of the world.

The book will be remarkable in other respects than its size, for every one of the 12,000 texts from Genesis to Revelations will be hand-written and signed by individual Christians as a testimonial of their faith. The idea was originated by the founder of the BibleCrusade, Mr. William Henry Fry, a grandson of the great English Quaker philanthropist, Mrs. Elizabeth Fry, and is part of the plan to make the year 1920 "Bible Year" throughout Christendom.

The volume now rests on a blue velvet covered platform under a canopy of Union Jacks. Standing on end the book is more than five feet two inches high and nearly three feet six inches wide. When opened flat it measures seven feet ten inches across.

Twelve large goat skins were required for the binding, which is in rich red levant morocco leather of the finest quality. The front cover is surrounded by the arms of the counties of England and Scotland with gold.

A panel of royal blue morocco containing the royal arms in the centre of the front cover is inlaid with the heraldic colors. The book contains 175 sheets of stout paper boards. It is sewn with twine in the old-fashioned way round six stout hempen ropes (each rope containing 70 strands of hemp), much thicker than the ordinary clothes-line. Four of these ropes are laced into millboards half an inch thick, which form the foundation for the leather covering.

In order to hasten the handling of the book during the various processes of binding a staging was erected, from the cross-beam of which depended an iron chain and pulley block, without which it would have required six men to manipulate the volume. No fewer than 4,476 copies of the smallest Oxford bibles could be contained within the compass of this enormous book. About 2,000 of the texts are at present complete. Their writers vary from bishops and other church dignitaries to laymen and women.

A MODERN MIRACLE.

How Niagara Falls Would Impress Father Hennepin.

Father Hennepin was the first white man to gaze upon the grandeur of Niagara Falls.

Supposing he were to return to earth to-day and once more look upon the whirling, leaping, falling water going over the precipice and raging through the gorge — what would he say?

Recalling his sight of the falls—Let's take a liberty and wonder what he said? Wonder if he temporarily forgot that he was "of the cloth" and let go of an ejaculation sufficiently emphatic and sweeping to fittingly cover the subject?

Did he do or say what you might have done or said; or being what he was, did he cast his eyes reverently aloft and murmur thanks to the All Highest for the privilege of beholding this Mighty Masterpiece.

It wasn't so long ago — measured by the life of nations—that the brave French priest first stood where countless millions have since stood to see that roaring veil of water pour over the brink.

Let's give Father Hennepin the privilege of stepping to the brink of Niagara again—to-morrow, and point out to him the advances that those who came after him have been able to record.

Let's lead him to the Power House and show him how the rushing waters have been diverted by man until they now tumble through great pits cut through the river's rocky floor to the wheel pits a hundred feet below. Show him the gigantic penstocks on which these waters pour their resistless weight, call his attention to their revolutions and then transport him aloft again and show him the whirling dynamos spinning out hundreds and thousands of horsepowers of invisible electrical energy.

He wouldn't understand it and it would be almost beyond human eloquence to explain it, because electricity was unknown when he was on earth. The story would put him in a daze when he was brought to Toronto and shown the whizzing trolley cars and the thousands of flashing lights and was told that they whizzed and flashed through the power generated by those great wheels beneath the river's bed fifty miles away; he'd probably think that the liars of the sixteenth century were but feeble beginners when compared to those of the amazing age to which he had returned.

To-day Niagara is just as majestic as it was the day the first man—white or red—first gazed upon it and wondered why it was. It's beauty is not one whit decreased; it's awe inspiring grandeur has not been subtracted from.

Niagara to-day is more wonderful and more worthy of comment and admiration than when it was the lone glistening, roaring feature of an amazing stretch of virgin land, for man has joined hand with nature and has manifested to the men of other lands that generous nature placed few drones upon the earth and that even the mightiest of her works were at man's disposal if he were sufficiently skilled, patient, ingenious and powerful to put shackles on them and make them aid him in his allotted knowledge.

Father Hennipen, the reincarnate, would appreciate the fact that miracles had been in the making while he had been away. He would not hesitate to express to his astonishment and give praise to those who had worked these wonders.

Therein he differs from you, good friend, for the miracles that man has worked in bending electrical energy to his will and forcing it to become your powerful, obedient, and economical servant don't impress you as anything unusual. The world has been so good to you; so amazingly generous, and so amazingly progressive, that you calmly view, as simple happenings, what would have caused a frenzy of joy and bewilderment a short century ago. To-day miracles are merely the most commonplace of every day happenings.

Bluenoses.

Young people frequently ask why the citizens of Nova Scotia are called "Bluenoses." Latham's "Dictionary of Names, Nicknames, and Surnames" says that the nickname originated from the appearance caused by the prevailing easterly winds. According to Sam Slick it originated from the Bluenose potato, produced in great perfection in the Maritime Provinces, but it is more likely that the potato was named after the Bluenoses. The nickname is applied to New Brunswickers as well as to Nova Scotians, as it came into use before New Brunswick was separated from Nova Scotia and organized as a province.

First Woman to Get Hon. Degree.

At a meeting of the provincial committee of the National Council of Women, Dr. Augusta Stowe Gullen drew attention to the fact that Mrs. Willoughby Cummings was the first Canadian woman to receive an honorary degree. She was given, at Halifax, the D.C.L. The second woman to receive an honorary degree was the Countess of Aberdeen, the third Miss A. E. Marty, and the fourth Matron-in-chief Edyth Rayside.

Toronto's First Newspaper.

The Upper Canada Gazette, published at Newark (now Niagara-on-the-Lake), which was the original capital of Upper Canada, was the first paper issued in the province. Its publication at Newark was continued till 1799. In that year the seat of Government was transferred to York, and the Gazette followed it, becoming the first paper in that town, the name of which was changed in 1834 to Toronto.

HIS JINX AT WORK

Traveler Felt It When He Saw Those Whiskers.

But That Didn't Prevent Him "Falling" for Probably the Oldest "Sucker" Game in Existence, and Then Kicking.

"Nice day!" said the stout man as he lowered himself on the seat beside me in the day car with a parlor-car look.

"Nice," I remarked just to humor him, although I must say that I always try to avoid a man who wears whiskers. This man was wearing a No. 5 face fungus with ear flaps. I thought at first of asking him if he had to take out a license for his face trimmings. But, after all, I felt that he had a kind face—what I could see of it—behind the shrubbery, as it were.

"Are you a commercial traveler?" he asked, stroking his beard to starboard.

"No," I replied, "but I once had a fourth cousin who did seven years in jail for another offense. That was the only member of my family who strayed from the narrow path of virtue."

"Lucky for you!" he snapped out, pushing his plantation in my face. "It's a dog's life. Everywhere you go people talk about the peace."

"Ah!" I interposed, "there is a peace on, then? I thought I saw something about it in the press."

"Are you an American?" he rapped out, getting nasty.

"Yes," I said. "Are you? Or do you live in Hoboken, N. J." I felt I would like to have struck a match and started a bush fire around the wooded portion of his face.

"I see you have some cuts on your face," he remarked.

"Yes. My tonsorial artist illustrated me with some funny cuts."

"Ah!" he slipped in. "You should shave yourself and you would never have a face like that."

I should like to have told him that his was no oil painting. Especially did I hate his face mats. I detest a man who tries to look venerable by wearing face mats, when underneath he may have the chin of a criminal.

"Do you wear those germ traps on purpose?" I asked curiously.

"Them's camouflage," he said. "Just to show what people look like when they don't shave. I travel for Razro's safety razors, $2.50 each, and seeing you're a nice sort of a boob I can do you one for $2. Here is the last one I have."

I took it. If it had been a scythe I should have had a harvest with his beard.

Then I fell to thinking of his whiskers again. They were the most vile whiskers I had ever seen. They stood out at all angles from his face. I couldn't make up my mind whether I should like him better with or without them. But I was quite prepared to get a lawn mower and try.

"Seeing you are a good business man," he went on, "what about a nice pipe lighter? I have a really good line at 25 cents each. Sorry I haven't got one with me, but I can send it on. Never fails, and always lights a pipe or cigarette. In fact, it is one of the best pipe lighters ever invented. Just give me 25 cents and your address and I will send it along."

Of course I fell. I handed him the quarter and got out at the next station.

Some days later a package arrived at my villa. Here was the pipe lighter.

Breathlessly I opened the package, eager to see the contrivance. It was—Yes, a match. I gulped two mouthfuls of fresh air and threw my cigarette in the porridge.

And that is why, when I meet a man with a full set of face mats, I always say——(Oh no, you don't. Not here, at any rate.—Editor.)—Walter Stuart Marsden in Pennsylvania Grit.

Bolsheviks Got Diamonds.

Diamonds, rubies, radium and just ordinary gold have been discovered in the Kola peninsula, Russia, it was said by James Patrick Woods, a sailor, who arrived at New York recently on the Matrosina. He was booked by the transport officials as "a destitute seaman."

Woods says he went to Russia on a cargo vessel and was left there on account of illness. He went prospecting at a place called Kendaloska. In a creek, he says, he found "pecks and pecks of diamonds." He also found rubies, and sat down on a rock only to find the rock was pure gold. He also discovered coal veins and radium. "I had my pockets full of diamonds," he said, "but the bolsheviks took them away from me. I am going to organise a company and go back."

Munition Work Not Injurious.

Dr. Rhoda H. B. Adamson in an article recently published in a London periodical undertakes to prove that the work done by women during the war in the engineering trades has not injured their health. Her conclusions are drawn after a year and a half spent as medical supervisor of several thousand women working in munition factories. The applicants for work were given a thorough physical examination and assigned to work commensurable with their strength. Other examinations were made from time to time, which showed no bad results from the work the women were doing.

NEW B. C. GOVERNOR

LIEUT.-COL. HON. E. B. PRIOR ASSUMES OFFICE.

He Has Been a Business Man on a Large Scale and Formerly Took an Interest in Politics, When He Was Premier of Pacific Coast Province.

WITH such formality as was meet and proper for so auspicious an occasion, Lieut.-Col. the Hon. Edward Bawley Prior was on December 18 duly sworn in as Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of British Columbia, succeeding Sir Frank Barnard. The retiring governor held office during five troublous years, entertained many notables, and steps out of Government House a belted knight.

Whether Governor Prior will achieve this distinction time alone can reveal. Possibly Canadian democratic sentiment against titles will be too strong; perhaps the pendulum will have again swung in the opposite direction. One thing is certain: Governor Price will not worry if he never feels the light tap of royal sword—nor will he be deaf to a royal command, for he is a good citizen, and of English stock.

Like ex-Governor Dunsmuir, Governor Prior graduates to the gubernatorial chair of his adopted province from the coalfields of Nanaimo. There is, of course, this trifling difference: Dunsmuir owned the mines—Prior inspected them.

A Yorkshire tyke, born at Dallowgill, near Ripon, on May 31, 1853, Governor Prior is in his sixty-seventh year. He was educated at Leeds Grammar School in the days when the birch still had an important place in the curriculum. He became a mining engineer, and in 1873 came to Canada.

Settling in Nanaimo, Vancouver Island, he was for five years assistant manager of a coal mine, then became Government Inspector of Mines for the province — a rather strenuous job in those days, when legislation was only in the making, and often addled in the process. The inspectorship did not last more than a couple of years, and then, with Alfred Fellows for a partner, he entered the iron and hardware business. Three years later he was sole proprietor, having bought out his partner. To-day the wholesale and retail firm of E. B. Prior & Co., Ltd., is known throughout British Columbia and the Yukon, for it is one of the big concerns of the province.

British Columbia politics in the early eighties were somewhat peculiar. Parliament was little more than a glorified rural council, without party factions or party lines—sometimes without any very clear or definite policies. Mr. Prior, once fairly established in business, took a serious interest in public life, and at the general election of 1886 he was returned at the head of the poll as member for Victoria in the Legislative Assembly.

After two years in the Provincial Parliament, Mr. Prior yielded to public pressure and was elected by acclamation to the House of Commons. That he satisfied his constituents was plainly evident in 1891, and again in 1896, and for a third time in 1900, winning each election easily. For a time prior to the election of 1896 he held Cabinet rank as Controller of Inland Revenue.

Areas of Canada and Other Lands.

Canada is larger than continental United States, whether you include the water areas or not. Here are the figures in square miles:

	Canada.	U. S. and Alaska.
Land	3,603,910	3,564,774
Water	125,755	52,899
Total	3,729,665	3,617,673

So the land area of Canada exceeds that of the United States by 39,136 square miles, which is almost equal to the combined area of Denmark, Belgium, and Holland (15,582, 11,373, and 12,648—in all, 39,603). The combined land and water areas show a difference of 111,992 square miles). The figures are taken from official publications, those regarding Canada from the "Canada Year Book," and those regarding the United States from the "Statistical Abstract of the United States." (2) The area of Europe is 3,800,000 square miles, which exceeds the area of Canada by 71,000 square miles, or a little more than the area of North Dakota (70,183 square miles). (3) Europe is one-third the size of Africa, one-fourth the size of America and one-fifth the size of Asia.

"Hudson Seal."

The tremendous demand for the skin of the humble muskrat, "Hudson Seal," when it appears in milady's coat or muff, has won it a high rank in the indictment against the high cost of living. Eastern rats are now being sold in New York at $2.35 apiece, as compared with 55 to 60 cents in 1915, and that the Western Canadian variety brings $2.60, as against thirty cents in prewar days.

Halifax Wants Olympics.

The permanent Olympiad Committee has received a request that the Olympian games in 1924 be held at Halifax. The question will be decided at the games to be held at Antwerp next summer and several countries are expected to be strong contenders.

No Salesmanship Required.

"You no longer indulge in the perfervid style of oratory you used to affect."

"Naw," yawned the real estate man, "I simply tell 'em I've got a house for sale. They don't ask any more."

An air route from Mineola, N. Y., to Nome, Alaska, 4,871 miles, is planned by the U. S. Army Air Service, with a view to a flight at some future time.

Education Board Urges Government to Raise Maximum

Sault Ste. Marie, Jan. 21.— Advisory Industrial Committee of the High School Board last night passed a resolution asking the Ontario Government to increase the grant for the erection of Technical Schools to seventy-five per cent of $200,000 instead of seventy-five per-cent of $150,000, the maximum under present Act. The question arose through a request from City Council that the board pare down its estimate to $222,500 for erection of a technical school. The board decided it could not reduce this sum.

FULTON NO MATCH FOR JACK DEMPSEY

BIG PLASTERER SHOWED POOR FORM AGAINST THE VETERAN MORAN

The heavyweight class certainly is in a bad way, when the leading contender for the title cannot stop a wornout veteran like Frank Moran. Big Fred Fulton undoubtedly can beat any white heavyweight in the United States with the exception of Jack Dempsey, and yet he could not so much as score a single knockout over a veteran who should long since have retired.

As for Fulton's chances in a return match with Jack Dempsey, the bout with Moran proved that they would be just a slim as they were that day when Dempsey flattened the tall plasterer in eighteen seconds. Fulton has a great manager and coach in the veteran Tom O'Rourke, but even O'Roarke cannot change a man's nature or think for him while he is in the ring.

It was a very very lucky thing for Fulton that the force has departed from Moran's wallop and that he now blows up quicker than the rankest kind of novice. If Moran's wallop had been a real one instead of a mere threat, he would have polished off Fulton in jig time, for the Pittsburger had no very great trouble in landing his overhand rights as long as he had any steam left. And while Moran was fighting, Fulton was merely acting the part of buffer. Instead of using his long legs to step away from Moran's clumsy rushes, he stood still with a foolish grin on his face and blocked the rights with the side of his head. Fulton could neither counter nor defend himself. The only thing that saved him was that Moran's blows lacked their old-time knockout force.

Fulton did no damage whatever until Moran, becoming arm weary stood off painting for breath. Then Fulton started his long left going. It required no skill on his part to land, for Moran merely stood there and took the blows with only the feeble attempt to block them. It was just like punching the bag for Fulton, and why he did not score a knockdown is hard to explain.

On what grounds Fulton bases his alleged belief that he could beat Dempsey in a return match were not apparent in any move he made. If he could not ward off Moran's clumsy attacks how could be expect to steer clear of Dempsey's lightning thumps? And if Fulton could not so much as score a knockdown over the totally exhausted Moran, how could he expect to stop such a young and rugged man as the champion?

The bout really showed up Fulton worse than if he had been knocked out. In that case he might have claimed that it was a chance blow that did the trick. But after the first three rounds Fulton had things all his own way and he made a terrible hash of it.

HOW RUTH STARTED HITTING HOME RUNS

HIS FIRST HOME RUN READS LIKE A STORY OF FICTION

From down in Baltimore, where Babe Ruth got his start, comes now an added chapter to the home run king's baseball history. It is the story of the first home run the Babe hit after putting on the professional's uniform and the mighty hit was made at the training camp of the Baltimore Orioles in Fayetteville, S. C., where the fans, so the chronicler declares, still talk about it.

It was one of the first real ball games Babe had participated in. The Baltimore team had been training only a few days when Manager Jack Dunn named his regular and yanigan nines. Babe had shown so much class that he at least looked promising, and he temporarily was placed on the regular squad.

He twirled an inning, played first, and later was shifted to second base. On his first trip to the plate Ruth took a healthy lunge at the first one and it sailed far over the right fielder's head. Bill Morrissette was playing in the outfield. Bill chased the ball, hopping over a fence into a plowed field. The sphere dropped into a furrow and stuck. Babe circled the paths and was sitting on the bench before Morrissette returned the ball to the infield.

One of the natives declared it was the hardest hit ball ever seen in those parts. Jim Thorpe had thrilled them a year before with a long homer, but Babe's clout was even longer.

First Trip Reads Like Fiction.

Ruth's first trip to the training camp reads like fiction, writes the Baltimore correspondent. He looked like a million right off the reel and never played the part of a busher. He handled himself like a veteran from the very offset, and Manager Dunn realised he had picked up a star. Babe improved rapidly. His first real contest was against the Athletics at Wilmington, N. C., three weeks after he had donned his first professional uniform. He had never seen Frank Baker, Eddie Collins and the other stars who had sent the Giants down to defeat the previous season, but these stars were only ordinary individuals in Ruth's sight. He sent them down without much difficulty, winning an interesting battle by a score of 6-3.

Babe breezed them across like the wind and improved each inning. Manager Dunn had planned to work three pitchers, but Babe insisted that he go the limit. The manager agreed. From then on the big twirler was the Birds' pitching ace, and shone more brilliantly every day.

BOSTON IS NOT WORRIED OVER SALE OF BABE RUTH

FRAZEE'S STANDPOINT IS GENERALLY APPRECIATED BY THE PUBLIC

(By James O'Leary.)

Boston, Jan. 21.—The sale of Babe Ruth, the greatest home run hitter of all time, to the New York Yankees for $100,000 or more, was the big news in baseball recently. Neither party to the deal would give the exact amount of money involved but it certainly was a giant sum. The sale, which was not altogether unexpected by those who have been keeping tab on things, came as a shock to the general body of fans, and caused a storm of protest, which has not entirely subsided.

The protest would have been more violent and longer sustained if the home run king had not, previous to the sale, come out with his threat to repudiate his contract with the Boston club. This was disapproved by some of his most ardent admirers, and doubtless tended to reconcile them to his transfer to the New York club. It may also have carried them to give a more receptive ear to the explanation of President Frazee for the sale, which was not without many convincing points.

First was the claim, which is borne out by past experience, that a one-star team is rarely, if ever, a winning team so far as championship honors are concerned; that, despite Ruth's wonderful hitting, and his twenty-nine home runs, the Red Sox finished sixth in the race last season; that, in the very nature of things, the other players would not have the incentive or the encouragement to extend themselves when, whatever they might do in the line of unusual performances, they would be overlooked, as the spectators could see only one man on the field, and that the proof of this contention was shown by the end of last season's race.

Breaks Set Bad Example.

Aside from the one-star proposition, Frazee declared that Ruth had on occasions been insubordinate; that he had violated training rules and so aroused dissention among the other players, who believed that the rules of discipline should apply to Ruth as well as to themselves.

Ruth had been extensively advertising his intention to repudiate his contract with the Red Sox—which he himself had dictated a year ago and which has still two years to run at a salary of $10,000 a year—unless the amount were doubled. He had not, to be sure, put this up to Frazee personally, in writing or otherwise. On November 2 last Frazee said he received Ruth's copy of the contract through the mail. No demand, no explanation accompanied it. The envelope contained the contract, and nothing more.

When it began to look as if Ruth regarded himself as bigger than the Boston club, bigger than the game itself, Frazee made up his mind there would have to be a change, in order to avoid more serious trouble in the future.

GREAT GAME OF BASKET BALL AT Y. TONIGHT

IF CRESMANS WIN THEY ARE CITY CHAMIONS FOR 1919—1920 SEASON

The City League Basket Ball championship will be decided tonight if the Cressman team defeat the Belmonts. The Quaker Oats meet the Bankers in the second game.

There is much difference of opinion as to the outcome of tonight's contest among those who have watched both teams work out during the past week. If both aggregations play up to form, and there is every indication that they will, there is bound to be a great argument in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium for the championship. The Cressman team is undefeated and the only loss sustained by the Belmonts was in the early part of the schedule when the store team managed to win by the narrow margin of two points.

The line-up:

Belmonts—Forwards, English and Jobbit; centre, Stewart; defence, Darling and Heaslip.

Cressmans—Forwards, Flowers and Nicholls; centre, DeCraw; defence, Matthews, McCarthy and Raynor.

COLD FEET IN ADVERTISING

It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.

Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.

National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.

Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms? Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.

DEPARTMENT REPORTS FROM LOCAL Y.M.C.A.

SPLENDID WORK WAS ACCOMPLISHED AMONG THE BOYS LAST YEAR

Following is the report for the year 1919 of the Boys' Department and the Physical Department of the Young Men's Christian Association as presented at the annual meeting Monday night.

Boys' Department.

The Boys' Department has a membership of two hundred and thirty and the prospects are bright for a much increased number during the current year. We are to some extent handicapped by having only one main room but hope by a comprehensive out-door program to overcome this drawback.

Organized in conjunction with all gymnasium classes, Bible study groups meet once a week to study and discuss the problems of life as they come to each boy and young man. These classes are fairly well attended and tend to promote the right spirit among the coming men of the community. The thanks of the department are due Mr. William Hamilton and Mr. Elmer Brown for the services they render in this connection.

The out-door program consists mainly of a series of hikes to different parts of the country districts. On these hikes the boys cook a part of their dinners and enjoy themselves freely. On Thanksgiving Day last a bicycle trip to Lakefield was arranged for and attended by ten boys. A two week boys' camp is planned for early in July, at which the boys who do not ordinarily have the privilege of camping out will be able to do so for a nominal fee and under proper supervision.

By the purchase of a motion picture projector the Board of Directors have solved a large portion of the problem of entertainment. A combined Saturday afternoon hike, supper and movie show will be featured during the remainder of the season.

Group rivalry is being fostered in every way and has been the means of promoting keenest competition between the different classes.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

F. G. McNEELEY,
Boys' Work Secretary.

Physical Deartment.

In presenting the report of the Physical Department attention is directed to the splendid attendance recorded in the senior class. This class is in the main composed of returned soldiers and their support, as civilians, is an answer to any who may feel inclined to offer adverse criticism. Though the average of attendance in the Junior Department is somewhat lower than in previous years this may be explained by the fact that greater effort has been expended in the organization and promotion of senior activities. At the same time it is well to note that the junior school boys' class has a very enviable record of 28 real, live, red-blooded boys who are out to each gymnasium session.

The City League Basket Ball has been revived and great interest has been shown in all the games. A boxing class under the direction of Mr. Gilson, was commenced, but had to be discontinued due to the instructor's inability to carry on. A wrestling class has now been formed and meets under Mr. Cowan weekly. The hand ball court is used to a considerable extent though, as yet, the games have been all individual rather than per schedule.

The social side has not been neglected as the senior class club held a very enjoyable social evening during December, during which the members and their lady friends were invited to the building social time and after making use of the gymnasium, billiard tables and bowling alleys were served refreshments in the main lobby. A snow-shoe tramp is planned for the same class group tomorrow.

The following is the statistical report for the department for October, November and December:

	Enrolled.	No. Classes.	Total Attend.	Average.
Business Men	35	15	194	13
Senior	52	24	471	20
Senior School	10	10	16	6

Beginners	13	7	72	10
Boxing	14	4	40	10
Basket Ball	42	24	308	12
Hand Ball	..	..	48	2

All of which is respectfully submitted.

D. A. LOOMIS, Physical Director.

HIGH SCHOOL WORK FOR RURAL COMMUNITIES

ACT PASSED WITHOUT A DISSENTING VOTE IN SASKATCHEWAN

Regina, Jan. 21— An act passed without a dissenting vote in the Saskatchewan Assembly Monday, requires the Government to provide rural public schools to undertake high school work similar to that now being given schools in smaller town and villages.

The bill provides for the payment of a maximum interest rate of 8 per cent for these loans.

The Lodge during the war kept in good standing 54 of their members who had enlisted, paid all their dues and also paid out $1400.00 to the beneficiary of the four members who had laid down their lives in the great war. An Advance In Furs

DURING the past year we have maintained one price on every fur article produced, based on the cost of skins from the trapper, and the work entailed in manufacturing. We believed it was good business to let our patrons have the benefit of all Fur Stock on hand at the lowest prices possible in keeping with their cost to us.

¶Many Fur Houses increased prices in ratio to the ever-advancing values of the raw fur market, so that as much as $100 to $150 increase on a garment was in evidence in the one item of Hudson Seal Garments alone.

¶We wish to announce that on and after February 15th all our Fur articles in Coon, Muskrat, Mink, Hudson Seal, Persian Lamb and Alaska Seal will be advanced according to the higher values now maintaining in these Furs; and all customers wishing to get Fur garments will have to purchase before February 15th to reap the benefit of the lower prevailing prices of this past season.

¶We deemed it wise to let the public know of these coming advances, and still give them an opportunity to select from our present stock at present prices. However, in order to protect ourselves, we must limit this concession to a given time—February 15th—just about three weeks, after which prices will be advanced.

VETERANS PROPOSE NATIONAL MEMORIAL

G.W.V.A. PLAN FOR MAGNIFICENT HALL TO HONOR 60,000 FALLEN

Ottawa, Jan. 21.—The unqualified declaration of the ratepayers, as expressed in their vote at the recent municipal elections, not to endorse the erection of a public hall as a memorial to Ottawa's soldiers who fell in the Great War, has spurred the veterans on to action in their own behalf. Last night at the meeting of the Ottawa Command, G. W. V. A., Capt. W. P. Grant, who is chairman of the memorial hall committee, outlined a scheme for the building of a magnificent hall in Ottawa as a memorial to the 60,000 Canadians from all parts of the Dominion who gave up their lives.

The cost would be borne, as far as possible, by the 721 branches of the G.W.V.A., and it is hoped that the co-operation of other veterans' organizations would also be enlisted. Counting that over four hundred thousand men served, Capt. Grant said that $2 or $3 each would provide nearly a million dollars for the hall. The plan was forwarded to the Dominion executive now in session.

They Don't Hitch—To Be Fit and Yet Eat What You Like. Follow Your Meals With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. No Gas, Sourness, Nor Heaviness of Ingestion.

Business men and women are apt to fall for the peculiar theories advanced by food faddists. But it isn't what you eat but what you digest and assimilate that should command thought and attention. You may eat fried eggs, sausage, ham or bacon for breakfast, and feel tip-top at lunch time if you follow the meal with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. Or if your stomach is full of gas, sour, or has a gnawing sensation of heaviness instead of the keen sense of appetite, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets relieve these distresses and introduce you to the next meal or a day's work with a quiet, restful stomach.

Many physicians prescribe these tablets for indigestion, dyspepsia, and other digestive disorders, as they contain harmless properties that work with an alkaline effect just as the stomach does when in perfect health. They are particularly adapted for business men and women, who are often called upon to discuss important business matters at a luncheon or dinner.

Get a 50-cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store, eat all you want of what you like with no gassy stomach, no sour, belching, bilious distress, no coated tongue nor heavy, drowsy feeling after eating.

A. J. BOLWELL RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT OF LOCAL TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

One Ballot Decided Result, Mr. Bolwell Winning in a Field of Three—Mr. Stevens Re-Elected Secretary.

At the meeting of the Trades and Labor Council last night the following officers were elected for the coming year:

President—A. J. Bolwell (re-elected).

Vice-President—T. Lane.

Secretary—William Stevens (re-elected).

Treasurer—T. Darrah.

Sergeant-at-Arms — Harold M. Mathews.

Auditors—Delegates Sharpe, Rudkins, Frost and Mathews.

Hall Trustees—H. Frost, J. J. Hartley, S. M. Frederick, A. J. Bolwell (ex-officio), Alex. Morrison and John Cairns.

William Stevens has been secretary of the Trades Council since 1913, and has always rendered efficient service. At the election last night, Harold M. Mathews, who was nominated for the position, gave Mr. Stevens a close run, being only five votes behind him. Treasurer Quinn refused to accept a renomination, which would have meant his re-election, and the veteran, J. J. Hartley, also declined to stand for the presidency.

Will Interview the Mayor.

One of the delegates from the Laborers' Union, a returned soldier, reported that for three weeks he was quarantined at his home, his young son being sick with smallpox. For the most of that time he and his family were cut off from all communication with the outside world and were actually suffering for the necessities of life. His family physician came to see the patient one day, and nothing more was heard from him for four days. Sanitary Inspector Stapleton, who called, secured some supplies for the quarantined family from their grocer. But for the kindness of a neighbor woman, the delegate declared it impossible to say what would have happened. He was able and willing to pay for everything he required and did not ask for charity.

A committee consisting of Delegates Runnett, Frost and the delegate interested will interview Mayor McIntyre and ask him to see to it that families quarantined are not allowed to suffer.

It was announced that a bill providing for the election of police commissioners was to be presented at the next meeting of the Legislature and that the prospects for its adoption were bright.

DELEGATION RETURNS FROM OTTAWA OPTIMISTIC AS TO FEDERAL BUILDING

Mayor McIntyre Presents Strong Argument to Minister of Public Works in City's Favor—Decision Deferred Until Appointment of Permanent Minister.

Mayor McIntyre and Ald. Gordon and Gainey attended before the Hon. Dr. Reid, acting Minister of Public Works, at the House of Commons yesterday to obtain the Minister's assurance that the post office and customs house would be built on the lot the Government purchased a few years ago at the corner of George and Sherbrooke streets.

Hon. Dr. Reid said that he was at present only acting Minister, and that a Minister of Public Works would be appointed, he expected, today or tomorrow, and that his matter would, strictly speaking, come before the new official. He suggested that when the estimates are struck, about February 26, this matter be brought to the attention of the Minister so that he could deal with the matter.

Mayor McIntyre feels that there is a strong probability that the matter will be dealt with at this session, and a new post office and customs house will be built, and the old buildings used, one for a bank, which is said to be willing to purchase it, and the other may be sold by the Government for the purpose of an office building or an apartment house.

Mayor McIntyre made a strong argument in the city's favor and expects that the matter will be dealt with without delay. He intends to follow the application up without delay, and if there is any possibility, have the matter dealt with this year.

WILL NOT BORROW TO LOAN OTHER NATIONS

CHANCELLOR OF EXCHEQUER OUTLINED FINANCIAL POLICY OF BRITISH GOVT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Birmingham, Jan. 22. — It is not Great Britain's policy to borrow vast sums in America for the purpose of loaning them to other nations in Europe, Austen Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, declared in a speech on the lessons of the war here today. "So long as I am responsible, that will not be a policy which the Government will think of adopting," he said.

Mr. Chamberlain expressed the belief that Great Britain had reached the maximum of national debt, and said he believed the nation would turn the corner during the coming year. The Chancellor declared that no expedient, however ingenious could relieve the nation of the necessity for many years of careful economy in national and personal expenditure or from a continued effort to create wealth.

WAR GRATUITIES FOR IMPERIAL HEROES

ALL APPLICATIONS FOR RELIEF MUST BE SUBMITTED BY JULY 1st.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 22.—It is stated by the Militia Department that application for war service gratuity by ex-members of the Imperial forces who come within the provisions of the order-in-Council passed December 1, 1919, following the report of the special committee of the House of Commons, are coming in very slowly. Only 5,098 applications have been received, whereas it is estimated that there must be approximately forty thousand men entitled to the gratuity. It is pointed out that under the regulation all ex-members of his majesty's forces who were bona fide domiciled in Canada at the outbreak of the war, who returned to Canada after their discharge and who were resident in Canada at the time of the application, are entitled to a war service gratuity in varying amounts, according to the amount of gratuity already paid or to be paid to them by the Imperial authorities. Applications must be submitted before July 1, 1920.

In Chicago the epidemic is believed to have passed its peak. Two thousand new cases represents a decrease from yesterday, but the death rate for the twenty-four hours reached sixty-one, the largest yet. The disease is declared to be of a mild character.

Six thousand cases reported in Havana, Cuba.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Amerongen, Jan. 22. — While the diplomats of the great Powers are occupying themselves with a demand for his surrender for trial, former Emperor William of Germany, so far as those outside Bentinck Castle can learn, remains unperturbed. Today water from the swollen Rhine is overflowing part of the Bentinck estate, but the castle itself is not flooded. The floods came at an opportune time to relieve any mental strain the one-time emperor may have had as a result of extradition proceedings. He is working hard daily with laborers strengthening the dikes, and there is no sign apparent whatever that he intends either to return to Germany or to surrender voluntarily to the Allies.

DEFINITE ACTION DECIDED UPON TO SECURE EXPERIMENTAL FARM FOR DISTRICT.

At a meeting last evening of the joint committee representing the Farmers' Club and Bord of Trade, plans were laid to urge upon the Minister of Agriculture and the Ontario Government the location of a Demonstration and Experimental farm near Peterborough.

The committee may be further enlarged so as to represent all of the interested bodies and to include the township Reeves.

A committee was appointed to formulate a letter to the Honourable Mr. Doherty, Minister of Agriculture, asking him to be good enough to defer any decision with regard to the location of the Demonstration Farms for Eastern Ontario until after his visit with Premier Drury, when the committee, supplemented by the Reeves of the various townships of Peterborough County, will lay before him fully the reasons why Peterborough should be preferred.

NO ROCK YET FOR PIER ON EAST SIDE OF RIVER

HOLE IS NOW 36 FEET BELOW THE LEVEL OF THE ROADWAY.

Peterborough's new and magnificent Hunter street bridge now presents a wierd and useless appearance. Everything around it is covered with snow and ice and the large frame-work of the arches on the east side of the river stands out in bleak coldness.

The hole where it is intended to build the pier immediately east of the river is the only portion of the work that shows any sign of activity. The sides are covered with sheets of ice and a steam pump is kept constantly at work removing the water to give the few men at the bottom a chance to work.

This hole is now 36 feet below the level of the roadway and still no firm rock foundation is found. Several times during the excavation the diggers thought they had found a bottom upon which to place the foundation of the pier. Each time it proved to be nothing but a layer of soft rock and the lowering process is still in progress, although those in charge are hopeful of reaching the rock very shortly.

PETERBORO EXHIBITION THIS YEAR, TO EXTEND OVER FOUR DAYS

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday Thursday in First Week Following Toronto Fair, New Grand Stand to be Erected.

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition directorate and members, yesterday afternoon, it was decided to hold a four days' fair next fall—on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, in the week following the close of the Toronto Exhibition. Monday will be a day of preparation and for taking entries, with special attractions at night. This was the motion of Tom Brown and G. O. Cameron, and was carried by a big majority of the meeting.

One or two members did not want to conflict with Lindsay's four days, but it was generally conceded that the meeting's duty was to consider Peterborough's interests alone, and that Lindsay could look after itself.

Mr. Webber Turner declared that it should cost but little more for four day's special attractions than for three, and that the additional day decided on might materially swell the exhibition's total receipts and add a substantial balance. "Anyway," he said, "nothing ventured, nothing gained."

Most of the speakers concluded that the money of late being spent on the exhibition demanded a longer period for exhibits and special attractions to assure larger revenues.

$9,800 Spent Last Year.

General discussion revealed the fact that $9,800 had been spent in permanent improvements at the grounds last year, and the need this year of grandstand accommodation for 5,000 people was emphasized.

The secretary was instructed to communicate with the Hamilton and the Dominion Bridge Company and invite the presence of their representatives to go into with the exhibition's executive, the question of building a new grandstand.

Mere Improvements

President Roland Denne said he would like to see a cattle barn erected. This could also be used as a skating rink for south city in the winter, and for spring and winter shows. It seemed a pity, he added, that so much money should be invested just for a three of four day annual exhibition.

Meet the Ministers

On motion of T. Brown and Dickson Hall, Messrs. H. G. Webber, R. Grandy, C. E. Moore, J. Gillespie, A. Roberts, S. Millburn, A. B. Mann, C. S. Graham and the president were named a committee to meet a week from Monday February 2nd., Premier Drury, the ministers of agriculture, and of public works, Hon. M. W. Doherty and Hon. F. C. Biggs, respectively, when on their visit to this community.

To Strike Committees

The directors will meet in the Board of Trade Chambers, Saturday, February 7th., at two o'clock, to strike the Standing Committees.

Condolence

On motion of Messrs. Graham and Grandy a letter of condolence with Messrs. R. Shaw and George Ball in their late bereavement, will be forwarded.

Attend Convention

Messrs. John Gillespie and J. T. O'Connell were delegated to represent Peterborough Industrial Exhibition at the Fairs Convention in Toronto on February 3rd and 4th, their expenses to be paid by the board. This was the motion of Thomas Hooper and David Jordan.

Two Auditors

On motion of J. J. Hartley and W. J. Cox, W. R. Morris and Ed M. Elliott were appointed auditors.

Honorary Directors

The honorary directors for this year are J. H. Burnham, M. P., E. A. Peck, ex-M. L. A., T. Tooms, M. L. A., E. McDonald, M. L. A. J. A Sexsmith, M P., George Macdonald, W. Cormack Mayor McIntyre, County Warden, E. M. Elliott, William Collins, R. R. Hall, S. F. Redmond, Rev. Greatrix, Rev. Father Phelan, A. W. Cressman, G. W. Morrow, R. A. Morrow.

Popular President

Roland Denne was the unanimous choice for re-election for a third term as chief executive, but he himself protested on the ground that a man in agricultural or stock pursuits should now take the chair if the U. F. O. are to get more benefit than heretofore out of Peterborough's exhibition. Mr. Denne's protest however, was completely drowned in a vociferous insistance of the meeting and he gracefully bowed to the will of the organization.

Yesterday's meeting was thoroughly representative, more so in fact than any other gathering of a like nature in this city.

AVERAGE PAY OF OUTSIDE CARPENTERS IN ONTARIO IS SEVENTY CENTS AN HOUR

While Inside Mechanics, Not Organized Get Less Than 30 Cents—Take in Their Children Who Work for Six and Eight Cents.

H. Marsh, organizer for the carpenters of Ontario, who has been in Peterborough for some days in the interests of the Labor movement, attended the meeting of the Trades Council last night and at the close of the session addressed the delegates at the request of President Bolwell.

Mr. Marsh believes in organization and says that during the winter months special effort should be made to secure new members for the various unions.

As an argument in favor of organization, Mr. Marsh said that the outside workers among the carpenters who had their unions, were now receiving all over Ontario an average wage of 70 cents an hour. The inside workers, the real mechanics, who are not organized, are getting on an average less than 30 cents an hour.

No family can live on such wages, Mr. Marsh said. It was necessary for the father in such cases to take his young boys and girls to work with him in the factories. There are girls taking lumber from machines who receive eight cents an hour and young boys who are working for six cents. The object of Labor unions, Mr. Marsh said, is to see to it that the wages of the father are sufficient to support the family so that the children can be left at school. Conditions, he said, are better and prospects brighter as over three thousand wood-workers in Ontario joined the union in 1919.

Mr. Marsh does not believe that Canadian goods should be exported to such an extent as to cause a scarcity at home. He also believes that if production is carried on to the limit set by the manufacturers, there will eventually be an oversupply and the wage earners, out of work, will lack money to purchase the necessaries of life so that the world will be worse off then than it is at present.

Mr. Marsh does not believe in the cost-plus or percentage system. Operating under it the man who does a fair day's work soon finds himself out of a job as the policy of the contractor is to prolong the work as long as possible, as delay means more profit for himself.

The speaker believes in Government price setting. "If," he asked, "the Government can set the price of newsprint as a sop to the papers, why not do the same with regard to shoes, boots, clothing and the like."

At the conclusion of his address Mr. Marsh was tendered a hearty vote of thanks.

PLOTTING AGAINST PREMIER DRURY.

FOUR LABOR MEMBERS of the Legislature, meeting in secret conclave in Toronto, may not look like a very formidable gathering, but under present conditions four men have it within their power to wreck the Drury Government, provided that Government does not answer their every beck and call. The majority of the new Government is so small that the desertion of even four of its supporters would be sufficient to overthrow it.

Representative MacBride seems to be the ring leader in this plotting of mischief. He has been a sorehead, a dog in the manger, ever since a coalition of U. F. O. and Labor was first proposed. If he persists in his present avowed policy, Labor will lose caste in all parts of the Province and the party will forfeit anything in the way of public confidence which it may have secured.

The U. F. O. member for Halton has resigned his seat to make way for Premier Drury. It is now announced that the latter will not have a walkover, but that the Liberals will nominate a home man and rely upon Conservative support to elect him.

Vain and foolish hope! Previous to the last election the Liberals turned down the offer of a coalition with the Conservatives to defeat the Farmer candidate, but insisted upon making it a three-cornered fight, with the result that both old parties were badly beaten. The U. F. O. candidate was over one thousand votes ahead of the Conservative nominee, and led the Liberal by nearly twice that number. That should show the sentiment of the majority of the electors of Halton and should demonstrate the hopelessness of opposing Premier Drury, especially when the one chance of success is banked upon the idea of a union of the two old parties. If such a plan is hatched in the five towns of Halton, the rural voters will be driven into greater activity than ever.

TOO DRASTIC TO SUCCEED.

THE PROHIBITION amendment that became operative in the United States on January 17 is a drastic measure, being "bone dry" in theory at least. It provides not only against traffic in liquor with an alcoholic content of more than one-half of one per cent., but also that no beverage with that alcoholic content shall be made or kept for private use. A large proportion of the home-made wines and almost all cider kept for domestic use will thus come under the ban, and heavy penalties are provided for those who have the banned beverages in their possession.

Another ultra-restrictive provision is the one which makes it illegal for a physician to prescribe for any patient more than a pint of liquor per month. There are cases which call for the consumption of more than that much in a week or less. The provision is a wanton encroachment upon the right of the sick and infirm to effective medical treatment.

But this and other provisions of the law, as the Hamilton Herald says, will be cheerfully and generally violated or evaded. Perhaps it is as well that the law is as rigid and severe as it is: the sooner will the American people grow disgusted with it, chafe under the galling restraint and regain their liberty.

SETTING PRICES.

MR. MARSH, organizer for the Carpenters' Union, who has been in Peterborough for some days, in a brief address at a meeting of the Trades Council last night referred to the question of Government price setting. The price of newsprint, he said, was $64 a ton some time ago. Owing to the demand for it, there was a probability that the most of it would go to the United States. Then the Government stepped in and set a maximum price of $80 a ton upon the white paper used by the newspapers of the country. "If," he asked, "the Government can set the price of paper, why not that of shoes, bread and clothing?" The implication was that the newspapers were specially favored in return for their good-will and support.

One word to Mr. Marsh. If the price of shoes, bread and clothing was increased in the same proportion as that of newsprint, and sanctioned by Government order, the move could hardly be regarded as one affording any relief. This is a variety of paternalism that the papers would gladly see employed in a more beneficent form. If there is any advantage, it is the manufacturers, not the papers, that reap the benefit.

FREEDOM OF OPINION.

THE SUSPENSION of five Socialist members of the New York Assembly has brough out a protest from Judge Charles E. Hughes, a former candidate for the United States Presidency. Criticizing the action, he says that in it the very principles of the American Government are ignored. He holds that it is the prerogative of a legislative body to consider charges made against an individual, but, as he interpreted the action in the case of the five Socialists, it was not directed against the individual, but was an attempt to indict a political party. He asked if the Socialists as a party were to be denied seats in legislative halls. "If that be true," writes Mr. Hughes, "then the very spirit and principles upon which our government is based are being attacked."

Judge Hughes raises a very interesting question, and it cannot be denied that he has good grounds when he speaks of the principles of democratic government being assailed. In supporting his views it is not a brief for the Socialists that is intended but a defence of the broader principles which argue that where free institutions are presumed to prevail there should be allowed that freedom of opinion which goes with these. Were it otherwise, then we should be reduced to a system of bureaucracy where our lines of thought will be forced to follow the groove of thought laid down by authority. Such a policy would be the height of tyranny and entirely opposed to the principles as we have learnt to know them of a liberty-giving government and a liberty-loving people. That way without a doubt revolution lies.

So long as an individual does not aim at pulling down the whole structure of the State and spreading anarchy broadcast, his individual views may be regarded as a negligible quantity in the power it has to influence others. In taking too great stock of what he says there will be placing too great importance upon his opinions. There should be the confidence that we as a people are on the whole sane, and that, being as we are, not likely to be influenced by the vaporings of the few. To put it broadly, any action of this description implies a want of confidence in the people as a whole, and, again, spells bureaucracy. To refuse the expression of the franchise, by denying seats in an assembly to those elected by the franchise the State allows, is in itself a contradiction of democratic principles.

It will be a bad day for the perpetuation of our free institutions if we are to be dictated to as to wherewithal we shall clothe our minds. Constituted authority should be as generous to the people, in the bestowal of its confidence, in the degree it owes its authority to the confidence placed in it. The other way shows a timidity which robs authority of respect and regard.

READINESS NOT MILITARISM.

(St. Thomas Times-Journal.)

HAD GREAT BRITAIN been as prepared for war on land as she was for war on sea, the great war would not have happened as and when it did. Germany was convinced that France could be crushed long before Britain could improvise an army effective in the field—nothing saved Europe and the world from the German sword expect the heroic resistance of Belgium and France, aided by the small but highly trained professional British army. Germany is for the time being helpless, but he is sanguine indeed who believes that the German menace has been permanently eliminated by a radical change in the German heart. The whole future of the League of Nations depends on its power to enforce the provisions of its covenant. If it does not possess sufficient physical as well as moral force, it is worthless as a factor in international difficulties. Possession of physical force is essential to maintain peace, but it does not mean militarism nor the militaristic spirit any more than the precautions against civil crime mean designs against law-abiding citizens.

Military training for self-defence does not mean militarism, but is a deterrent to militarism. If it did, then Switzerland would be among the most militaristic of nations, for in none is the principle of compulsory training and service more completely enforced. Militarism is a condition of the mind and was created in the German people deliberately and of set purpose by leaders who themselves believed that right made might and that the sword was the measure of justice between nation and nation. The German army was deified alongside the German kaiser; it was his weapon to obtain for the German people what they had been taught to believe was their heritage as the chosen people of God. Nations that prepared for defence, but were not dominated by that insanity, were not militaristic, nor did they hold that the ability to protect their own and their country's freedom gave them the right or the title to tyrannize over other nations. Still and for years to come the nations that want peace must be in a position to ensure that peace shall not be broken with impunity.

Sir Adam Beck, of London, Ont., has been dangerously ill in London, Eng., but recent cablegrams announce improvements. He went to London only a few weeks ago in order to spend the holiday season with Lady Beck, who has been in England for some time, but shortly after his arrival in London was taken ill with pneumonia.

Sir Adam's name will always be associated with hydro-electric development in Ontario. He advocated the development from the first, and became chairman of the commission that administers this great public utility. That administration has produced excellent results.

Born in the town of Baden, Waterloo County, Ont., and educated in Galt in the same county, the greater part of the life of Sir Adam has been spent in London, Ont., where he was engaged in manufacturing. From 1902 until the dissolution of the late Legislature of Ontario he represented London, but was defeated at the elections of October last.

In the two late Conservative Governments he held a place in the Cabinet, but without portfolio, the duties of his post as head of the Hydro-electric Commission occupying the greater part of his time.

EDITOR'S MAIL

THE EXPERIMENTAL FARM.

Editor Review: While the aggressive farmer will freely admit that every farmer must know his own farm and to some extent do his own experimenting, the suggestion that each county should have an experimental farm is a good one and one that should have the support of every citizen, but the suggestion that a joint committee of the U. F. O. and the Board of Trade control it may not appeal to some as the best means of control. As such an enterprise would be a public institution belonging to the county, receiving the support of public money, the County Council co-operating with the City Council would be a far better plan, as both of these bodies are representative of the people. Doubtless these bodies would be willing to receive suggestions from the U. F. O., the Board of Trade or the Trades and Labor Council, or any other organizations, that would be to the best interests of such an enterprise. The get-together spirit is fast gaining ground and class predominance is becoming more unpopular each day.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,

W. H. M. evidently misunderstands the situation. The joint committee to which he refers is to secure the farm, not to control it after it is established.—Ed. Review.

Odd Abyssinian Troops Had Feud With Egyptians During Stay at Port Said

TO judge by letters received lately from Port Said, it would seem that certain old comrades who still lag undemobilized upon the scene are finding life utterly intolerable in that fragrant town, writes a correspondent of the London Times. If such be the case it is clear that the place has lost its last interesting feature, says the correspondent.

"I allude to the mysterious horde of jet-black aboriginae known to the British soldier as the Jumping Jacks, or the Indiarubber Gentlemen (though 'gentlemen' is not exactly the word used), and to the civil population by various pithy cognomens which, perhaps fortunately, have no satisfactory equivalent in English. To dally no further with their identity, they are the Abyssinian levies raised by Italy for some purpose which has not yet been stated.

"They dawned upon the town one hot, sticky morning about a year ago, camped alongside the white Italian troops in one of the little inclosed sand deserts of the Rue Eugenie. They appeared as a very dressy crowd, wearing a particularly tall scarlet tarbush, with chin strap; a white calico garment resembling a curtailed smock, secured around their slim waists with a broad sash of vivid hues suggestive of corsets; white calico bags and puttees. A few wore sandals; most went barefoot.

"The N. C. O.'s carried scimitars and sported little crinkly goatee beards. Port Said was charmed with them at first, for they had money and seemed simple folk; and for their part they were greatly taken with Port Said and its miniature skyscrapers, its 'bars,' its cozy, pungent Arab town, its busy streets, and, presumably, the contrast it afforded with their native villages in the torrid plateaux to the southeast.

"But this incipient entente cordiale was doomed to perish untimely. The visitors showed that they cherished some unpleasant customs, such as the indulgence at night, more especially at the full of the moon, in interminable concerts of tom-tom, flute, and vocal atrocities which could have been heard half-way down the canal.

"But the estranging circumstance was that those who still had money discovered a tendency to be a little exacting with it. So their popularity soon waned, and the small fry of the town, masters of armor-piercing epithet, began to pursue them with discourteous gestures and derisory outcries. But they knew not what an Abyssinian warrior will do when his blood is up. The gallant blacks turned upon the small boys and rent them.

"The feud was begun, for the Egyptian's tender point is his small boy, no matter how full his quiver of them. Early one evening exasperated fathers hounded the blacks to their camp with every detail of ignominy. Arriving more or less in safety, they held a soiree musicale of great length and animation, in the course of which they were harangued by their leading d'Annunzio's into a state of war-like frenzy.

"Hastily arming themselves with staves, scimitars, and any other weapon that was handy, they eluded or brushed aside their Italian guards and sailed forth into the town, capering and yelling like stage Irishmen, to spoil some Egyptians. Outside a cafe they all but killed an Italian officer who strove to restrain them; but during the skirmish they had the misfortune to come into conflict with some Australians, and being unused to the Dominion style of fighting, they suffered a reverse. Nevertheless, two women, two boys, an aged Arab and several windows were damaged by their staves before they could be hustled back to their camp.

"This kind of thing went on for three successive nights, a truce being tacitly arranged by day, apparently in order that they might still make their little purchases of the Egyptian peddlers who haunted the vicinity of their camp. Then open hostilities ceased by common consent, though when the blacks fared abroad they sought the security of numbers.

"One glorious moonlit night the rare peace of the Rue Eugenie was shattered first by the dull thumping of the tom-tom and shortly afterward by a hullaballoo that brought every policeman, civil and military, panting to the camp. The Mahometans of the detachment, wearying of the quiet life, had fallen upon their Christian brothers in arms, and every bivvy in the camp lay prone. A bemused Australian had figured prominently but vaguely in the fray, though in what capacity he had broken into the camp—whether as friend of one party or the other, as peacemaker or as agent-provocateur — he never explained.

"And so they have — they must have — gone, taking with them, it is to be feared, the threefold mystery which enwrapped them. No one has ever seen them on any front; none knew what high hopes or intentions had brought them thither; their ultimate destination was hidden from all. It would be in the highest degree unjust to suggest that they did not do their bit in the great war. At the worst, for nearly a year, they helped to amuse and enliven a whole town."

TRADES UNIONISM A CRIME.

But That Happened to Be a Century Ago.

Only a hundred years ago it was a crime to belong to a trade union, says Tit-Bits.

It was not until the year 1824 that this system was put an end to. Even then it remained a penal offence to "molest or in any way obstruct another person for the purpose of inducing such person to belong to any club or association or to contribute to any common fund."

It was not until 1871 that the first Trade Union Act was passed, and that unions were able to register as friendly societies.

At once sixty-six unions registered themselves; their property was legally vested in trustees, and in their names a union could sue or be sued, while it could proceed summarily against any persons who embezzled or misappropriated its funds.

Since that date never a year has passed without the adding of new trade unions to the constantly-growing list. The largest number registered in any one year was in 1889, when there were sixty-five; the smallest in 1884, when only twelve were registered. To-day the number of trade unions exceeds seven hundred.

There are unions with memberships running into hundreds of thousands, and with branches extending all over the kingdom; there are little unions that are hardly ever heard of, with but a score or so of members. Some years ago the Cabinet Makers' Federation of London had actually but a dozen members, while the Paper Stainers' Union, a very ancient one, had only fifty.

Other small unions are those of the barometer and thermometer tube blowers, and of the tin canister and preserved provision case makers.

There is probably no trade or industry which does not boast a union of some sort. For instance, keepers of London coffee stalls, those useful institutions where the night worker can always find refreshment, have their own association. So, too, have the dock watchmen, about whom Mr. W. W. Jacobs writes so delightfully.

There is even a union of "street sellers and peddlers," and a "Street Trades' Brotherhood." The oldest trade union in existence is said to be that of the United Society of Brush Makers.

Lancashire has more unions than any other county in the kingdom, and second in point of numbers comes the county of London.

In Muscat Harbor.

Muscat, or Masqat as it is more correctly spelled, is situated at the extreme southeast end of the Gulf of Oman. It possesses a fine natural harbor, protected from all winds except those from the northwest. The town stands huddled in the war corner of the harbor, with two old forts standing guard over it on either side. All over the rocks surrounding the harbor are the names of the ships which have anchored there for the last 100 years, painted in large white letters by the crew, and visible from every side without the aid of glasses. This curious custom has been followed by every naval ship which has visited Masqat for nearly a century and the history of the British navy in the Persian Gulf is "writ large on those torrid rocks. There are few places in the world hotter than this coast of Oman and the waters of Masqat, in which the visitor can bathe without risk of sharks, is at times unpleasantly warm.

The sultans of Masqat have for long had intimate relations with the British Government, and though their power, which once extended not only over the whole of Oman, but as far as Zanzibar, is now considerably curtailed, they are rightly regarded as the most important of the independent rulers of the territories surrounding the gulf. The present sultan has the most polished and courtly manners, and receives European visitors with a welcome unmatched even among Orientals. His palace is richly and tastefully furnished, and to be led by him up the winding staircase to the reception hall, while he repeats at intervals the formula of welcome, "Bismillah, Bismillah," and to sit on a Persian rug and taste the delicacies he provides, surrounded by a vast concourse of attendants all gorgeously dressed and armed with gold-hilted swords and daggers is an experience not lightly to be forgotten.—Christian Science Monitor.

Lace Making In China

CHINESE women seemed to have had very good taste for fancy work even in very early times. Before they knew what laces were they began to make them, though not so fine and beautiful as those of to-day. The kind that they made was the embroidery lace. Narrow strips of satins or silk from one-fourth of an inch to three or four inches wide, were first woven, then different designs of flowers, fruits or insects were embroidered with various colored silk threads or gold-plated or silver-plated threads. The finished laces were very much like the silk embroidery laces of to-day, which come from England and France, only that they were not very brilliant in color owing to the lack of different shades of color at that time.

As every other thing progressed so did the art of lace-making. Finer and fancier ones appeared, the best known of which were the Mei-zz and [illegible] laces named after their designs. The best were not found in the market places but in the homes of individuals. It is said that a girl after her tenth birthday should start on her work of making lace and other embroideries in order to get ready for her wedding garments; such activities were stopped at the coming in of foreign laces. To-day they are kept as curios.

Later as glass beads were introduced into the country, the making of bead-lace began. The beads were either round or oval-shaped. They were strung into different geometric designs. The round beads were made into very fine designs much like the bead-lace of to-day. As the time demanded the designs and forms of laces varied, until the foreign silk laces came into fashion and put a stop to all other kinds. Imitations of those silk-laces were attempted, but owing to the lack of proper machinery and varieties of patterns they could not compete in popularity with the imported ones. For quite a time the home-made laces were out of fashion.

About twenty-five years ago in the city of Chefoo in Shantung a girls' school was established by a foreign missionary. It was in this little school that the art of hand-made lace was first taught to the Chinese by foreigners, which has now become an important industry in China. The lace thus made is the so-called "Chefoo" lace. It is found that the greatest amount now is not made in Chefoo, but in a district called Chi Hsia Hsien, thirty-five miles from Chefoo. Here the torchon silk laces were first made, but it did not prove a success for its consumption was rather small in that city.

A British missionary in 1895 established the first institution for lace-making. From this time on the lace industry became important. In addition to the silk lace which was made of entirely Chinese silk, the thread lace was also introduced in 1904. The thread, both cotton and linen, and the patterns come exclusively from England and France. Besides the above mentioned ones there are the cluny, the filet, the crochet, the point venice, and the Swatow laces. The finest of the laces comes from Ching Chou in the Tsinan district in Shantung. Chi Hsia is still a great centre, yielding fully fifty per cent. of the laces of the places. Shanghai and Swatow are now gradually coming into competition.

The cluny and torchon laces are made by fastening the designs on a cushion especially made for the purpose, and using the same method as the making of bobbin lace by hand. These two kinds have found a great market in Australia and America. The filet lace is made by using a net which is spread over a frame. The pattern is embroidered with a neede. The thread used comes mostly from England, yarn forty is most used for the purpose. Filet lace has been introduced only about seven years ago, but it is welcomed greatly. The net for the rough kind of the lace is largely made in Kiangpeh, a district east of the Whangpoo river, though some of the schools are still making it, yet their quantity is comparatively small. Crochet appeared two years earlier than the filet. It is made with a hook. The best thread for this kind of lace is the Fil d'Irdande Brillande, a French thread, which is generally called by the local manufacturer, "Shiny thread," owing to its bright silvery lustre. Point venice is another kind made — by using a needle in much the same way as the filet lace, only that Fil d'Irlande Brillande should be used instead of the ordinary thread. The so-called Swatow lace is manufactured in Swatow.

As yet no factories can be found for lace-making anywhere in China though the lace industry is rapidly progressing. It has been found that the practice of supplying thread to the workers and paying them for their labor is being introduced by some small exporting firms, but it has not proved a success owing to the difficulty of importing foreign threads. The usual way now employed is for brokers to furnish the nets and the patterns to the manufacturer to have the lace made at a certain amount and then to sell the finished lace to the exporters. Usually on embroidering a piece of fine net, size about four feet long and a foot and a half wide, the worker receives a dollar and the thread. As to the selling price it varies greatly according to the quality of the lace.

The quality of the lace depends upon its cleanliness, fineness, evenness of pattern, firmness and its workmanship, and also the kinds of thread with which it is made. The new and fancier patterns greatly promote the popularity of the lace since the grade of its quality requires real skill to judge while its appearance nobody can fail to observe.

THE FORUM IDEA.

Winnipeg Leads Canada With Four Open Talking Places.

More and more the "Forum" is becoming a national institution in Canada. Forums are springing up all over the Dominion, and the cities particularly are taking to the idea with considerable keenness.

"Safety valves" is the phrase that some philosophers and politicians use to describe the Forums. "A voice for democracy" is the phrase that advocates of the Forum idea prefer to use. Those who use the "safety valve" phrase hold to the theory that it is wiser to have some public meeting place at which any man or woman may arise and give expression to almost any thought or idea that is within reasonable limits, than to have would-be "revolutionaries" meeting in secret and persuading themselves that they are the persecuted progenitors of a really democratic civilization.

Revolutionary sentiments are from time to time expressed publicly in Hyde Park, London. Little notice seems to be taken of them by the authorities. The hot talk is evidently regarded as a letting off of so much steam. There are Britishers, however, who will tell you that the Hyde Park type of liberty is carried too far. Sir Arthur Currie, in a recent speech, protested that England was foolish to be allowing so much seditious talk.

But, of course, the idea of the Forum is not to be a breeding place of sedition. It was in ancient Rome that the Forum was originated. It was a public meeting place. It was the scene of great gatherings and demonstrations. It was at the Forum that Marc Antony by his oratory swayed the Roman populace to take revenge on the slayers of Julius Caesar. And to-day the Forum is aimed to be a place where all classes and colors and creeds and nationalities may gather for the discussion of subjects in which the whole people are vitally interested.

Toronto has three Forums, the Open Forum, presided over by Prof. A. T. DeLury, of the University of Toronto; the People's Forum, with W. Greenwood Brown as president; and the Open Forum of the Independent Labor party. The People's Forum meets on Sunday nights and the other two on Sunday afternoons. As may be imagined, the topics discussed are by no means confined to religious matters.

Montreal has two Forums, one for the English-speaking and the other for the French-Canadians. Winnipeg, centre of radical ideas, has four Forums. Ottawa has two. At a recent meeting of the People's Forum in Ottawa, when Capt. Carpenter of the "Vindictive" was the speaker, there were thousands on thousands turned away from the hall. Other cities and towns are taking up the idea and establishing Forums. The Open Forum National Council defines the Forum to stand for the following objects:

1. The complete development of democracy.
2. A common meeting ground for all the people, in the interest of trust and mutual understanding, and for the cultivation of community spirit.
3. The fullest and freest open public discussion of all vital questions affecting public welfare.
4. For free participation from the Forum floor, either by questions or discussion.
5. The freedom of Forum management from responsibility for utterances by speakers from the platform or the floor.

In these times of unrest the latter clause seems to be quite essential to the protection of Forum managements, as in Toronto there have been some rather startling things said by speakers both from platform and floor.

Gleaning the Stumps.

The rapid decrease in the number of tall stumps which have been so familiar to the traveler through the coast hills of Oregon, is regarded as an indication of their approaching extinction. Hitherto some 20 feet of each stump has been left standing, silent relics of former monarchs of the forest, too thick for most saws to compass and too full of pitch to suit the sawmills. But now the need for timber is greater and men no longer climb high up on to boards thrust into notches in the trunk to suit the saw and the sawmill. They have learned thrift and they cut low down lest good lumber be uselessly wasted. Only as a record of past wastefulness are the tall stumps with their deep notches still visible.

A Filipino Vassar.

What the occidental ideals of universal opportunities of education are to mean to women of the Orient takes on a large significance with the establishment in the Philippines of a university for girls only. This university is to be part of an educational group called Centro Escolor de Senoritas, where until now the instruction to girls has been only in the primary, secondary and intermediate grades. That this Filipino Vassar will develop traditions characteristic of girls' colleges in the United States cannot be doubted by anyone who has observed how wholeheartedly though shyly, girl students from the Orient have entered into the undergraduate studies, festivities and pastimes at American colleges.

Coquelin's Memory.

"How many parts do you know well enough to play tonight if need be?" somebody asked Coquelin. He took a sheet of paper and wrote down the names of 53 plays of his repertoire. His friends laughed.

"You are boasting surely, mon ami?" said the Viscounte de Lovenjoul.

"You have every one of these plays in your library," said Coquelin quietly. "Get them all out and put them on the table." The viscounte did so. "Now," said Coquelin, "let anybody select a cue from any one of these plays at haphazard and give it to me."

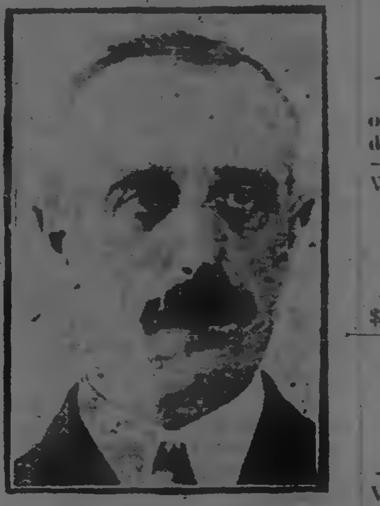
They tried him with 16 plays out of the 53 and he never missed a single cue or made one mistake.—Fortnightly Review.

Hon. Harry Mills Felt the Lure of Public Life Once Studied Philosophy

HARRY MILLS, the Minister of Mines in Ontario's first Farmer Government, though English-born, is north Canada tempered; a bit materialistic in his everyday observations, if it may be put that way. In other words, Mills is never sure of anything. That may be safely set down as his most outstanding characteristic, and, curiously enough, the one that brought him a majority of 1,513 in the recent elections in a field of three. He never let up in his campaign and refused to concede he was winning till the last working hour had expired.

Self-made, with the unique record of literally leaping from a transcontinental locomotive engineer's cab into the Ontario Cabinet, previously unknown outside railway circles in his home city, he's a driver at work overlooking no bets for self-improvement or for more firmly establishing his own popularity.

He's forty-five years of age, of Welsh parentage. Twenty-six years ago he became identified with the Canadian Pacific Railway in the humble capacity of wiper, from which job he steadily gained promotion till he became locomotive engineer. All the time he was burning the midnight wick with an eye on bigger things.



HON. HARRY MILLS.

He was studying philosophy and the lives of great Canadian and foreign leaders. Mills was schooling himself for politics and when the flood-tide in his fortunes came he was ready to grab the helm and steer his ship into the high seas of Ontario affairs.

Mills' training field for politics was in the unions and brotherhoods of western railwaymen and in fraternal lodges. In these societies he took such active and sustained interest that he invariably stepped up through the chairs and eventually wielded the gavel. His next personal try-out of his capacity was on the school board of Fort William, of which he was chairman when elected to the Legislature.

There is no doubt Mills' rise to Ministerial honors was more rapid than he himself ever hoped for, but the opportunities for successfully contesting this last election with a solid city labor and railwaymen's vote behind him were too tempting to be overlooked.

The Hon. Harry Hills has no rose-strewn pathway ahead of him, even if he has brought distinct honor to Fort William riding. He happens to represent a constituency that is long on neither frills nor political frumpery; he must prove himself as big as the position he has been elevated to. In many respects, Fort William riding is the most exacting task-master for a parliamentary representative in the province. Some idea of the cosmopolitan aspect of its people may be gained when it is stated that no less than twenty-seven dialects are spoken within its borders.

The whole of Mills' constituency is yawning for development, a new country demanding roads, bridges, and means of access to its farming and mineral belts overnight. Its potentialities, so its people believe, have too long been neglected and overlooked by the Government. They will look to Mills to materially change things. That will be quite a task because it has always been difficult to make eastern representatives see reason for spending millions in the development of what they have erroneously looked upon as "the frozen north."

Mills, however, may be able to do this very things, and if he does, his solidarity in Fort William district will be firmly established.

Hon. Harry Mills' wife is a native of Grey country, a splendid woman who has done much to increase his popularity and prestige. They have five children.

Pershing Changed Church.

Gen. Pershing was understood to be a Presbyterian, but, according to published reports, he has lately become confirmed as member of the Protestant Episcopal Church. The Living Church, an organ of the faith, states that the confirmation service took place in France and was conducted by Rt. Rev. Charles H. Brent, Bishop of Western New York.

Madame Edvina's Wedding.

Although some years have passed since Madame Edvina had any connection with Canadian life, her old friends must have been interested in the romance of her third marriage. Her engagement to Major Stuart Wortley, son of Gen. Stuart Wortley, and a nephew of the Earl of Wharncliffe, whose wife is half Canadian, came as a surprise to her friends, and her marriage even a greater surprise. At a lunch party Madame Edvina excused herself early, as she was going to be married in an hour! The beauty and charm, as well as the wonderful musical talent, of this famous Canadian sheds reflected glory on the Dominion, which can already boast of an old-time famous daughter in Madame Albani, another in the charming Beatrice La Palme, and yet another in Donalda, who has been singing lately in London. Those of us who have known all these celebrated singers take an affectionate pride in their success, as well as in the devotion they all have for their homeland. The present writer heard both Beatrice La Palme and Donalda, whose real name was Pauline Lightstone, when they sang as students in Montreal.

UNPLEASANT SUPERSTITION.

Woman of the English Fen Country Boycotted as a Witch.

We constantly hear it said that "this is the twentieth century; superstition and all that sort of thing died out long ago." Yet there is hardly a person in the country without his pet belief—that misfortune follows stooping over a baby or spilling salt, or that a black cat brings good luck, for example. Hence, too, the universal practice of wearing mascots "for luck."

These, however, are not very serious beliefs, being merely personal fads. Superstition of a deeper rooted and more unpleasant type is still common in the more backward rural areas, however. Only a few weeks ago an old dame in the Fen country was boycotted by the whole countryside because she had the reputation of being a witch and of throwing spells over people's children, stock and crops. No one would go near her or let her have food or clothing, and she nearly starved to death.

The cold, legal atmosphere of the courts would be thought unfavorable to belief in witchcraft, and yet a farmer—by no means an ignorant man—stood up the other day in Norfolk court and informed the bench that someone had bewitched his cows. He cured the evil spell by thrusting a red-hot poker into his churn, when the evil spirit vanished in a bright flame.

Years ago any old crone who was cross grained with the neighbors stood a good chance of being tried (and burnt) for witchcraft, and cases are even known where animals were solemnly brought into court and tried on a similar charge.

A tough old cock at Basle, in Switzerland, was accused of laying eggs—a most serious offence, as such eggs were used only for making witches' ointment. The unhappy bird was haled before the justice, and one of the eggs produced as proof of guilt. In the face of such evidence the rooster's case was hopeless. He was convicted and he and his miraculous eggs solemnly burnt at the stake in the town square.

A sow and six young pigs were accused of witchcraft towards a child, and were brought, protesting loudly, before the "beak." Amid great sensation, the sow was found guilty and publicly executed, but the porkers were acquitted on the ground of extreme youth. As late as 1740, a cow was accused of possessing a "devil," and, after a long hearing, was found guilty and condemned to death. "Rats and mice and such small deer" have been summoned on numerous occasions, but almost invariably failed to put in an appearance at court.

In the fifteenth century, the peasants of a village in the south of France took legal proceedings against a plague of locusts which trespassed on their fields and devoured their crops. As the case was still being fought nearly half a century later, the modern gardener can sympathise with the unlucky plaintiffs, but would probably prefer the more up-to-date application of lime or mustard.

Another action was brought against a pest of leeches swarming in the ponds and streams of another country district of France. The judge issued a decree against the leeches trespassing further on the disputed territories, but history is silent as to whether the injunction was obeyed or ignored, with resultant punishment for contempt of court.

Animals have even been admitted as witnesses in the courts. It used to be considered no offence to kill a burglar trying to break into a house. There arose the difficulty that one man living alone might ask another to his house, and then murder him, pretending that he was a robber. To get over this, it was decided that any domestic animal, such as a cat or a dog, present at the time might bear witness. If the animal, on being questioned, satisfied the court that his master had acted in good faith, the killing was held to be justified. There are not many instances of acquittal.

Livingstone Memorial Tree.

One of the most curious memorials of Livingstone is the "name tree," near Victoria Falls, on the Zambesi. On the trunk Livingstone cut his initial and the date 1855 on the day of his first visit to the falls. In his book giving an account of this Livingstone says: "This was the only instance in which I indulged in this piece of vanity."

Remarkable Tattooing.

Perhaps the most extraordinary tattooing idea ever carried out was that of a French coachman, who, at the time of the celebrated Dreyfus trial, had his body covered with no fewer than 120 illustrations of the case, including portraits of the leading personages. The work occupied nearly two years.

Safety Fire Escape.

A woman has invented a fire escape for dazed and frightened victims. It consists of a seat and footboard fastened together by ropes like a swing. For further protection there is an extra loop of rope which slips over the head and tightens about the body.

STUMBLING ON FORTUNE.

Scotch Sailor Went Through Many Vicissitudes, But "Struck it Rich."

Although some of the richest gold and silver mines in the world have been found by men who were prospecting for the precious metals, other mines have been discovered quite by accident in the most curious ways imaginable, says Spare Moments.

It was in 1867 that Donald Ross a young Scottish sailor, and two companions deserted their sailing ship at San Francisco and started for the new gold fields on the mountains at the head of the Kern river. They failed to strike anything there, however, and so they crossed the passes into the Mojave Desert to try their luck there, only to again be unsuccessful. Then they went to Arizona, making their way to the source of the Little Colorado river. Here they met with fair success, but the apaches were on the warpath, and forced them to fly to the nearest fort, from whence they reached Hardyville.

They started again without compass, map, or trail to guide them across the 200 miles of scorching desert, for Owen's Lake. In their futile search for water the prospectors wandered along the southern edge of Death Valley. Their mule died, and the next day one of the men died, and the other became raving mad and fled into the desert. Ross, quite mad, wandered on until he fell unconscious.

Indians nursed him back to life, and guided him to the San Joaquin Valley, pointed out the way to civilization. Within an hour of leaving his guides Ross found himself in the bed of a rocky stream. He walked half way through the icy waters, when he pressed his hands to his eyes, dreading that his reason was again giving way. He looked again. "Gold!" he shouted. And it was. Half the sands at his feet were gold. Within two months he had made $300,000, and he arrived back in Glasgow some weeks before the sailing ship from which he had deserted.

Criminals Like Smart Clothes.

A world upside down, or, at any rate, not certainly right side up, offers continual surprises. Nothing is quite like it used to be and much is shockingly different. So you read that in the dock at the Central Criminal Court in London one frequently sees the latest fashions in men's and women's wear.

"It is," says a writer in the London Daily Mail, "a sign of the times.

"Twenty years ago the average criminal was ill-educated, ill-mannered, and slovenly in appearance. Today many thieves, men and women, are intelligent, punctilious in behaviour, and dressed in the height of fashion.

"Recently a notorious West End sharper, confident that the jury would acquit him, ordered his motorcar to be ready to take him home! It was a sad blow to his dignity and prestige when some one else ordered Black Maria for him.

"The modern criminal who infests the West End craves for the best of everything. He dines in the best restaurants, drinks the most expensive wines, smokes the choicest cigars, and makes love to pretty women. His clothes are faultless in material and style.

"And among the women 'crooks' are just as fastidious. Parisian gowns cover them; rare jewels adorn them; sparkling eyes and a ready wit carry them anywhere. They all spend money as freely as a war profiteer. One woman — a clever jewel thief—appeared in the dock wearing a dress for which she had paid 70 guineas. Her £300 fur coat had been stolen by another thief, otherwise, no doubt, she would have worn that in court.

"Thieves have been making enormous profits. Furs, clothes, cigars, and jewels to the value of hundreds of thousands of pounds have been stolen during the year, and they have been sold again at practically their full market value. Receivers — the people to whom thieves dispose of their booty — willingly pay high prices for all kinds of wearing apparel because, although vast quantities have been recovered by the police, the risk of detection is comparatively small and there is always a generous return on the money expended.

"Motor Cars, of which many hundreds have disappeared, have also a ready sale, but there is a greater danger in dealing with them, and consequently the thieves themselves get only about a tenth of the actual value."

Reduced Calibre.

Soon after his translation to his present episcopate a rather fresh young lady remarked to him at a social function that she supposed he must now be considered to be "quite a big gun."

"Not at all, my dear young lady," was the reply. "Not as big as I formerly was, in fact."

Then, seeing the puzzled look on the face of the fair one, he added quizzically:

"I was formerly a canon, you know."

One at a Time.

A man from the north of Scotland, visiting Glasgow, was "boned" by a Salvation Army lass, and he gave her a sixpence. Turning into another street, he was again asked for a contribution. "Na, na," he said. "I gied a saxpence tae ane o' your folk 'roon the corner just noo." "That was very good of you," said the girl. "But then you can't do a good thing too often. And, besides, you know, the Lord will repay you a hundred fold." "Aweel," said the cautious Scot, "I'll just wait till the first transaction's feenished before we start the second."

RAILWAY POSTAL CLERK TESTIFIES

ATTACKS OF BILIOUSNESS AND INDIGESTION END AFTER HE TAKES TANLAC.

"Since I started taking Tanlac I have gained ten pounds in weight, and my general health is as good as it ever was," said Albert MacKenzie, a railway mail clerk, who resides at 2140 Garth street, Regina, Sask., recently.

"For some time I have suffered from a severe stomach trouble and frequently would have have bad bilious attacks," he continued. "After every meal gas would form and I would bloat something terrible, and what little I ate just seemed to form into a solid lump. My appetite was very poor, and I had to force down every mouthful I ate. At times I would turn deathly sick and become so dizzy it was all I could do to keep from falling, and spots of different colors would come before my eyes. I was so nervous I could get but little sleep, and was so restless I would just roll and toss from one side of the bed to the other all night long, and get up in the mornings feeling miserable.

"I had been reading so much in the newspapers from people who had been benefited by taking Tanlac, I decided to try it, and after I had taken two bottles my improvement was simply wonderful. I continued taking it until now I have taken five bottles in all, and I am glad to say my stomach trouble is a thing of the past. My appetite is simply splendid, and I can eat anything I want and all I want without suffering the least it afterwards. I never have those pains or dizzy spells, and my nerves are in such good condition I can sleep all night long without ever waking up once, and always get up feeling greatly refreshed and full of energy. I am surely glad I took Tanlac, and I never miss an opportunity to tell others about it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

What Happened at Kut.

Speaking at Newport, England, at a fete organized by the Comrades of the Great War, Gen. Sir Charles Townsend said that he wished he could live long enough to see what history would have to say about the defence of Kut. He was ordered to go forward with a handful of men. Instead of having 13,000 men at his disposal he should have had 113,000. He had warned the authorities of what might happen if he was asked to go on with only a limited number of effectives, but after having given the warning his duty was done. Any orders he received afterward had to be carried out. With a sufficient number of men he could have guaranteed not only to take Bagdad, but also to hold it. The Turkish army could have been thrown into the river. He very nearly accomplished that as it was, but under the circumstances which hampered him, if Bagdad had been taken it would have had to be evacuated the next day. He had found almost as many enemies when he came home as he had beaten in the field. He decided to halt at that place (Kut) to give the Government time to send out more troops from overseas, but without the necessary number of troops he was forced to surrender. Owing to starvation men were dying at the rate of 26 a day, dying of hunger, but at the same time, he remarked proudly: "I did not surrender even then until I was ordered to do so, and told that no relief could be sent to me."

Old English and Middle English.

The "Old English" period, as generally understood, ended about 1100-1150, the "Middle English" period about 1500, when the period of "Modern English" began. The term "Old English," in popular use, applies vaguely to all obsolete forms of the language. The name "Early English" is often used vaguely for "Early Middle English," or for "Middle and Early Modern English."

Iron Clogs of Lancashire

THERE is something remarkable, says the Christian Science Monitor, in the Lancashire clog when it has the streets to itself, and this was evidenced in no small degree only lately before hours of labor were shortened, say about 5.45 a.m. There is nothing more indicative of the solid character of the Lancashire people than the sturdiness and the self-denial of the clattering crowd who earn their breakfast before they eat it.

In all the Lancashire manufacturing towns, one sound more than any other betokens the opening of a working day. From five o'clock onward, as the men and women turn out for the mills, the pavements ring with a sharp metallic clatter. It is the clang of many ironshod clogs. And in the evening, when the mills are "loosing," the streets again resound to the music of what Webster describes as an "overshoe with a thick sole of leather or wood for wet weather." "Into Lunnon aw'll walk wi' mi clogs on mi feet," says some boaster in a ballad.

None but a Lancashire man would have so spoken, for the clog is a peculiar institution of the mill folk. Yorkshire, it is true, has borrowed the idea from her neighbor, but still the clog is endeared by an intimate association with all that marks the Lancashire breed. To a lover of old things it is sad to be told that the clog is dying out. There are those who say that before many years it will be as obsolete as the crinoline, though there have been threats of a return of the latter in a mixture of feminine foibles and fancies.

Happily these are croakers' prophecies. Many generations to come will doubtless hear, as we do now, the familiar noise awakening a thousand homely thoughts and memories.

And yet in many parts of Lancashire the clog is losing ground before its victorious enemy, the boot. Time was when clogs were generally worn; boots were an expensive luxury, only to be indulged in, if at all, on the Sabbath. Nowadays, boots have become cheaper in comparison with clogs, and the honest clog suffers from modern competition. Another potent factor is the superior respectability of the boot, which confers an elegance on its wearer unknown to the demonstrative clog.

But the old cloggers do not despair for they say that the clog is peculiarly suited to the conditions of mill life. It will stand the wear and tear of flagged floors, and it is not ruined by heat and grease as is the delicate boot. People wear it because their fathers did before them, which is, perhaps, the most hopeful consideration. It is believed that the clog was first introduced into Lancashire when the Flemish weavers came to Bolton in the year 1337, thus establishing the clog as well as the cotton trade of Lancashire.

Like his brother, the shoemaker, the clogger figures in literature as a ripe philosopher and critic of his kind. He is Lancashire in essence. He is wise and he gives generously of his wisdom to all comers. His little shop is hung with rows of finished clogs which make the customer bow his head. Behind the counter—if he is in good business—there will be three or four journeymen busy cutting and stitching the uppers. More often the clogger is master and workman in one.

The place is like the old-fashioned cobbler's shop, which existed before the boot factories had come into being. The clogger of to-day works with the same tools as did the earliest cloggers. His is one of the gradually diminishing number of hand industries. Machinery has been tried for shaping the wooden soles, but it cannot supplant the delicate skill of the craftsman.

There is more variation in the shape of clogs than is generally imagined. Customers are measured for them, as they are for boots, and niceties of form are carefully followed in curving the sole. There are the garden clog, the Wellington clog, the dancing clog, the laundry clog, imitation Dutch sabots, the Blucher clog, the washing clog, and many others. The finished soles pass into the shop, where the top leather is firmly fastened and the iron rim nailed on.

In working-class Lancashire almost every one stamps cheerfully about in clogs. There are clogs in the shop windows with a tiny rim of iron, hardly bigger than a doll's shoes. It would seem that the wearers love the sound of the clanking iron, for if the iron comes off the heel they run to the clogger's without delay. These mill girls enjoy "the clickety clack of their heels," as one clogger put it.

The biggest expression of the clogger's art is the "Sunday clog." This piece of decoration often bears an elaborate pattern on the front. Sometimes there is a streak of red paint along the sole to give it a dashing appearance, and as a finishing touch there may be three small pearl buttons stitched in a rakish row on the side.

Heligoland as Bird Sanctuary.

It is practically agreed that the island of Heligoland, late German naval base in the North Sea, has but two possible uses: the one it served in the World War, or as a sanctuary for the millions of migratory birds that have long utilized it as a temporary resting place. Since it will never be permitted to revert to its former state there seems to be little in the way of making it a bird refuge. The proposal is made by British ornithologists, and has American support.

U.S. ships outnumbered British entries into Boston for first time in history, but latter exceeded American in tonnage.

Australia Must Be White

Says the Prime Minister

In Answer to Japanese

IF there is one question upon which all Australia may be said to be agreed, it is on the tremendous importance of keeping Australia "white." A long succession of statesmen have approved the policy and enunciated it with force and conviction whenever occasion demanded, until, to-day, it has taken its place as a national postulate. So firmly convinced is the Australian as to the justice of his position on this matter, and so entirely is he persuaded that, as far as he is concerned, it is really outside the realm of discussion that, when obliged to discuss it he is able to do so with a quite remarkable detachment. He does not get roused about the matter, or allow himself to be betrayed into saying harsh things about his neighbor, or into criticizing other people or their standards of life and conduct. He simply takes his stand on the right, he claims to be the sole judge of, who shall and who shall not settle within his borders. He is perfectly willing to extend the same right to other peoples without question.

This attitude was particularly well exemplified by Mr. Hughes, the Australian Prime Minister, in the course of a recent speech in the House of Representatives. Mr. Hughes was describing the stand which he had made, during the Peace Conference in Paris, against the efforts of Japan supported by several of the powers to secure the recognition of racial equality, and the practical acceptance of the consequences of this recognition, namely, the throwing open of the doors of Australia to the Japanese immigrant. Mr. Hughes, as he told the story, followed in Paris the usual course. He at once opposed the proposal which was put forward by the Japanese delegate with a quite friendly but quite emphatic refusal. The Japanese delegate, not unnaturally, declined to take no for an answer. The proposal was amended and again amended. Pressure was brought to bear in this direction and in that, and by other delegates than the Japanese. But Mr. Hughes remained quite unmoved. "I said then," he told the House of Representatives, "that it did not matter how they altered it, or what way they put it, we would not accept it."

PREMIER HUGHES.

Mr. Hughes, however, was very far from refusing to discuss the question. To Baron Makino, when he declared that the Japanese were a proud people, and that they regarded it as intolerable that they should not be considered as the equals of Australians and other races, he insisted that he was amongst the first to recognise the Japanese as an equal. He hoped, moreover, that the Japanese people and the Australian people would always be friends. But, he added, a man in his ordinary life did not invite all his friends into his house, and even those he did invite he did not ask to become permanent residents. Because he did not invite a man to his house was not to say that he did not regard him as an equal. It was the right of every freeman to say who should come in and who should not come into his house, and therefore the Australians were not to be regarded as not looking upon Japanese as equals because they desired to exercise this right. He pointed out that Japanese ideals and Australian ideals were different. He would not venture to say that Australian ideals were greater and better than Japanese ideals. He would content himself with saying that they were different. The paths of the two peoples lay in different directions, and the Australians must tread theirs according to the instincts and impulses which came from their history and their race.

Having said this and more along the same lines, Mr. Hughes just stood. It was a typical attitude, and the Australian Prime Minister was quite justified in remarking, as he did. "I knew I spoke for Australia."—Christian Science Monitor.

THE COWBOY OF ECUADOR.

He Loves to Ride Fully Dressed and Equipped.

It is a custom to celebrate the popular festival of San Pedro and San Pablo in the Sabana Grande with an equestrian frenzy, says Jose A. Campos in Inter-American. I say equestrian frenzy, for it is now well known that this is the hippic festival par excellence; everyone who wishes to celebrate it and to contribute to the honor and glory of the holy apostles must go on horseback, or, lacking a horse, he must mount the first ass he chances upon and set out at a gallop like the Cossacks of the plains. The only ones who came off whole are our montuvios, who, to tell the truth, are not outdone by the Venezuelan llaneros or the Argentine gauchos.

These montuvios are the heroes of the festival of San Pedro and San Pablo, the only ones who survive all the numbers on the program.

Give a montuvio a half-broken mule; he is in his element and you will see him transfigured. He puts on him one of the great, broad pommelled saddles of national manufacture, with long leathers from which hang enormous metal stirrups; sets brutal bits in his mouth and tightens the martingale until the neck of the animal is given a curve of 60 degrees; attaches the indispensable cotton saddlebags of the coast of vivid tint and finished with tassels and a fringe; coils at the head of the saddle 20 or 25 fathoms of rope; and then mounts, displaying wide pantaloons of cloth, girded at the waist with a long belt, from which hangs a murderous machette, a starched shirt without a collar, a poncho as ample as a choir cloak, a wide-brimmed manabita hat, called a "singing oven" by the common people, and finally the inevitable "snoring" spurs, bound tight, "as hard as a knot," to the bare feet.

There you have the type.

Add, to complete the figure, a bejuco de montana, two yards long, by way of a hunting crop in his right hand; a Daublean cigar between his teeth and a bottle of aguardiente in his stomach.

These are the equipment of the man and his beast that from the moment they set out together form a single creature.

The mule may caper and cut up to his heart's content; run away, kick, roll over on the ground. One of our countrymen hardly notices these details. What you see is that he always stays on top.

The only time he becomes disturbed is when his hat falls off. The montuvio has an infinite affection for his hat, however old or worthless it may be. He would expose his life a thousand times rather than run the risk of losing his hat.

If it falls in the water he plunges into the most dangerous current to recover it; if he is pursued by justice and, during the flight his hat escapes him, he turns squarely around, goes back, secures it, and lets himself be captured. Finally, when he gets drunk and goes to sleep outdoors a relation or a friend who thinks something of him takes charge of his hat and keeps it for him lest he lose it.

If he drops his cigar or his match he picks it off the ground without dismounting — performing prodigies of horsemanship, to all appearance with the greatest ease—as if they were at his side on a table.

Can't Fake Black Opals.

There has been a great rush in New South Wales on account of the finding of black opals, and already several hundred "claims" have been pegged out by excited prospectors. They have reason to be excited, too, for if the discovery of a black opal field turns out to be as big as has been stated, many of them will become millionaires.

The real black opal is not only one of the rarest of all stones, but, curiously enough, it is found hardly anywhere except in New South Wales. Most ordinary opals, which are usually semi-transparent, are of a bluish or yellowish white in color, and found in Hungary.

In fact, the most famous opal ever discovered was found there, and forms part of the crown jewels of Austria-Hungary. This magnificent opal measures five inches by two and a half inches, and if it were sold in the open market would fetch several hundred thousand pounds.

There is a kind of black opal which is fairly common and cheap, but it is not a real black opal. It is the ordinary opal that has become spoilt by earth and other things. Opals, by the way, are one of the few precious stones which cannot be artificially imitated like rubies and diamonds.—Pearson's Weekly.

The main entry to Venice from the railway station is by the celebrated Grand Canal by means of gondolas or omnibus steamers. The latter maintain a regular service along the Grand Canal and across the lagoon to the Island of the Lido. There are also tram-steamer connections between Venice and the more important lagoon islands.

CELLS OF BODY LIVE ON.

Proof That They Do Not Die When the Body Does.

Never was there a more convincing proof of the recently discovered fact that the cells of the body do not die when the body dies, but live on, how long no one yet knows, than that contained in an article by Dr. Albert H. Ebeling, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, in the Journal of Experimental Medicine. In this article Dr. Ebeling describes his experiences with a piece of the heart of an unhatched chicken. This was cut out by Dr. Alexis Carrel on January 17, 1912. To-day it is still alive. Needless to say, the embryo chick from which it was cut has turned to dust long ago. The fragment is a bit of connective tissue. Not only is it alive, but it has been growing all these seven years. The old cells have been forming new ones, taking the material for this purpose from the medium in which they have been kept. This medium is a clot formed by mixing the blood plasma of adult chickens with an extract of chick embryo in equal parts. The latter is obtained by washing seven or eight day old embryos in Ringers' solution, chopping them up fine, centrifuging for ten minutes and drawing off the super-natant fluid.

The fragments of heart are kept in glasses filled with this fluid and carefully covered. They are left undisturbed for forty-eight hours and then a fragment is transferred to a black glass, in which it is cut with a cataract knife into two or three pieces as nearly equal as possible. Each of these pieces is washed in Ringer's solution and placed in a glass with fresh medium, there to grow undisturbed for another forty-eight hours when they are ready for examination.

This process has been repeated 1,390 times, and the latest strains are still growing—in fact, they are growing more rapidly than when first the piece was taken. During the first year the growth was slow and irregular. When the strain was twenty-eight months old the fragments of tissue which showed the maximum speed in growth increased fifteen times their area in forty-eight hours. The seven-year-old strain may sometimes become forty times larger than the original fragments in forty-eight hours. This is probably due to the fact that as time went on the doctors have improved the medium and are now using one that exactly suits the connective tissue of the heart.

The speed of growth can be watched under the microscope, and Dr. Ebeling's article is accompanied by some splendid photographic enlargements. One of these shows a piece of the tissue magnified 240 times, photographed on April 25, 1919, after forty-eight hours growth. It shows a mass of living cells of connective tissue, each with its nucleus showing as a dark spot.

Australia's Big Irrigation Scheme.

Thirty thousand acres of land will be submerged by the construction of a mammoth dam in southeastern Australia, the object of which is to form a great irrigation reservoir. Work has started on the structure, which will be located on the Murray river a short distance below the confluence of Mitta Mitta Creek with that river. It is estimated that the project will cost $8,000,000 to complete. Approximately 43,560,000,000 cubic feet of water will be impounded.

The total length of the dam will be 3,601 feet. This will comprise three sections: An earthen dam, 2,700 feet long; a concrete speedway, 740 feet long, and an outlet works of the same material, 161 feet long. At some points the dam will be nearly 100 feet in height. The foundation will extend down to a stratum of granite, 34 feet below the surface of the earth.

Only a comparatively small portion of the dam will be situated in the river bed proper, as the greater part will extend across an alluvial flat on the left bank of the stream. In constructing the earthen dam, a concrete core wall will be built, and covered with stone to reinforce the dirt embankment. Thirty-one sluice gates will be installed in the spillway section. Water turbines, placed in the dam will furnish power to operate these. The outlet works will be pierced by eight 6-foot pipes, equipped with valves and capable of discharging 8,000 cubic feet of water a second under a 29-foot head.—Popular Mechanics.

Trains Driven by Air.

Many people believe that the only way railway trains will be driven in the future will be by means of electricity, but if the new system now being tried on the Italian state railway is as cheap as experts predict it will be then our railways will be driven by air!

By this new system air is compressed into big central tanks, from which it is distributed to special air fuel stations along the railway line by means of strong pipes. At these air fuel stations locomotives will be able to stop and refill their own tanks with compressed air.

It is said that the building of air tanks along the railway and the laying of pipes will be nothing like so costly as electrification, which requires not only a third of track, but means altering the engines. With compressed air the modern steam-engine requires very little alteration, and so the enormous expense of a complete new set of engines would be done away with.

The fuel is easy enough to get! Moreover, it is absolutely clean, and this will be one of the necessary qualities of any motive power of the future.

LAKEFIELD PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH MADE LONG ADVANCE IN PAST YEAR

Receipts in all Departments of Work Show Increase—Members and Adherents Pledge Themselves to Help Forward Movement.

(Special to The Review.)

Lakefield, Jan. 22.—The annual meeting of the Lakefield Presbyterian Church was held on Tuesday evening, Jan. 20. Although the weather was very stormy the attendance was fair and the meeting was of a real Forward Movement order.

The treasurer's report, submitted by Mr. J. H. Chamb, was very encouraging. The loan of $300, standing for several years, has been paid in full and all accounts and salaries paid up to date. For all congregational purposes there was raised last year $2,546, compared with $2,115 for 1918 and $1,647 for 1917. For the missionary budget there was raised $501.25, compared with $356 for 1918 and $189 for 1917. The W.M.S. and Mission Band raised $175 for missions and the S. S. a $50 Victory Bond. The S. S. also reported a donation of $125.00 from some friends in the congregation for S. S. work. The ministers stipend was increased t o $1,500 dating from April 1st last in accordance with the regulation of the General Assembly.

Report of Session.

The session report was presented by the pastor, Rev. P. L. Jull, who referred to the very successful every-person canvass in February last, the organization of a junior congregation with forty members on they list, and of an Adult Bible Class with thirty-four members in October, the unveiling of an honor roll tablet on June 29, the successful anniversary services in November and the inspiring thank-offering service held by the W. M. S. He also announced that Miss Alice Hunter had been appointed by the session in place of Miss Nelson who has resigned as leader of the choir.

The Forward Movement.

The congregation stood with bowed heads and were led in prayer by the pastor as a sign of agreement with the following resolution: "We, members and adherents of this congregation, pledge ourselves, with God's help, to try and realize the highest objects of the Forward Movement, viz: to foster our own spiritual life by Bible study, prayer, public worship and consistent Christian living; to train our young people at home, in the S. S. and the church for true Christian life, citizenship and service; to advance by every means in our power the evangelisation of the world and the growth of the Christian spirit in our own land."

The session and managers were instructed to conduct a canvass for the peace thank-offering simultaneously with the annual every-person canvas during the second week of February.

May Buy New Organ.

After considerable discussion regarding the purchase of a new organ for the church, a committee was appointed, consisting of Messrs. A. E. Kennedy, W. Blewett, J. A. Portter, W. H. Casement, Dr. J. C. Smith, Miss Hunter and Rev. P. L. Jull, to consider the matter and report to the congregation before the end of February.

The pastor thanked those present for their expeditions dispatch of business and the general good feeling manifested throughout. The members then adjourned to the school room for a social hour after one of the most encouraging and delightful annual meetings in the history of the congregation.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT.

Editor Review: It has been my humble wish to do what I could to aid the churches in their mighty effort to throw off materialism so prominently set forth at present in many ways. As a contribution to this determined attempt to rescue us from the new temptation, I ask you to publish the following for one week as an advertisement: "These five separate communions are of one mind as to their belief in God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth, and in Jesus Christ His Son our Lord. They now declare to their respective constituencies and also unitedly to the Canadian people, that the Only Effective Method of Making Good Citizens is by urging men to a more faithful practice of Christianity by inculcating personal faith in Jesus Christ. They insist that there is no other dependable way of correcting evil tendencies in individual and national life. Signed by the United National Campaign, representing the simultaneous but independent Forward Movement of the Anglican, Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian Communions of Canada."

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS PLACES ORDERS

AGAIN DOES NOT PUBLICLY ADVERTISE FOR TENDERS BUT CONSULTS 20 FIRMS

Toronto, Jan. 22.—When criticism fell upon the head of Hon. F. C. Biggs, Minister of Public Works, as a result of the awarding of a contract for $100,000 worth of motor trucks to a Dundas dealer without calling for tenders, it was intimated by Hon. Mr. Drury that there would be a change in the system, that tenders would be publicly advertised for.

The change has not taken place yet. Hon. Mr. Biggs has now placed an order for six stone crushers and four road rollers to be used in the highway work of the coming season. The stone crushers are being supplied by the Climax Road Machinery Company, of Hamilton, and the road rollers by the Waterous Engine Works Company, of Brantford, and the Sawyer-Massey Company, of Hamilton. The sum involved in these orders is about $40,000. More equipment of a similar nature is still to be secured.

Hon. Mr. Biggs stated yesterday that bids had been invited from about twenty different firms and the contracts had been awarded to the companies quoting the lowest prices.

Hussey, Guelph; Mrs. E. Coy, Kitchener, and Mr. R. Carney, Los Angeles, Calif. There are twenty-seven grandchildren, 32 great-grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren living.

VEZINA IS PREMIER AS A GOAL GUARDIAN

YOUTH OF SMALL VILLAGE ATTRACTED ATTENTION OF GEORGE KENNEDY.

Chicoutimi, somewhere in Quebec, a little hamlet that is hemmed in by six months' snow in the fall and winter, has one distinguished citizen of whom they think more than any other. George Vezina, goalkeeper supreme and wizard defender of the Canadien nets, is the gent on whose alabaster brow they implant the wild garland wreath. This Vezina is some custodian. He stands in an absolute class by himself when it comes to fending off the flying puck. Since breaking in some ten years ago Vezina has never yet turned in a poor game. In all that time he never surpassed the exhibition he gave against Ottawa in Montreal Saturday night. He stopped showers of shots, and once turned aside half a dozen wicked drives in a row. His greatest feat was going out and relieving Broadbent of the puck when the latter was right in on top of him. Vezina was only 16 years of age when he broke into the big show. Without previous goalkeeping tuition he attracted attention when the Canadiens visited Chicoutimi to play an exhibition game with the team of that town. His wonderful work so impressed George Kennedy that he signed him up. He has been a sensation ever since.

Benedict is the nearest approach to Vezina in the point of consistent goal tending efficiency, but Benny sometimes has an off night, and long shots have a way of slipping past him unexpectedly.

VETERAN GETS APPOINTMENT

Man Who Lay Wounded For Five Days Now Issues Licenses.

Owen Sound, Jan. 22. — An appointment which has just been made by the new Government, and which is proving very popular here, is that of Pte. Jack Crow as issuer of motor licenses. Pte. Crow, who was a prisoner of war for several years, was severely wounded and lay for five days between the lines until picked up by a German patrol and taken to hospital. There both legs were amputated. Last year 3,200 licenses were issued.

CRITICS SHOULD BE FAIR TO JIMMY WILDE

LITTLE BRITISHER ONLY MAN WILLING TO GIVE AWAY 10 POUNDS.

By William H. Rocap.

Now that Jimmy Wilde, the champion flyweight boxer of the world, has been released from his contract by the International Sporting Club, still in an embryotic state, he is privileged to box anywhere in the United States. The litte Briton is a wonder with the gloves for his pounds and inches. He has alwas been compelled to concede from ten to twelve pounds in weight to his opponents and has invariably been on the winning side.

Wilde came to this country as a professional boxer. He makes his living at the game. It is from that angle he must be judged. He is free to fight east or west of the Mississippi river. There will be a great effort made to beat him. His bout with Young Sharkey proved that he canoot concede the average American boxer ten pounds in weight and get away with the kick.

Each boxing centre in this country has a flyweight eager to spring at Wilde the moment he enters that particular zone. Some are wonderful little felows in their own district, but do not measure up in class to the men of national repute.

Philadelphia has ahalf-dozen legitimate bantamweights who can scale 116 pounds or under, who are eager to take a crack at Wilde. Battling Murray stands in the front rank, then comes Patsy Wallace, Joe Dorsey, Battling Leonard, Battling Mack, if he can still make the weight, and even Little Bear, who rarely scales more than 110 pounds, could swap punches with the skillful Briton.

American critics should be Liberal in the judgment of Wilde. The man who has ever boxed knows what a handicap a few pounds means. With the inception of the Marquis of Queensbury rules contestants would quibble over a half-pound. When two lightweights were to box at 133 pounds, weighing in say at 6 p.m. and one would be a pound overweight, he was invariably compelled to go and run off that excess pound or steam it off in a turkish bath. He would be compelled to make the 133 pounds or there would be no fight, and after he would sacrifice a substantial forfeit too.

When Jack McAuliffe was the lightweight champion he was [illegible] to give or take two pounds so any opponent weighing 133 pounds suited him, but not one ounce over that limit.

The fact that Jimmy Wilde has been able to concede ten pounds to opponents and still win only accentuates his rare ability.

PREMIER DRURY MAY BE OPPOSED BY A LIBERAL

INDICATIONS ARE THAT HON. MR. DOHERTY WILL BE ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION

Milton, Jan. 22.—Judging from talk by Liberals and Conservatives, there is sure to be opposition to Premier Drury in Halton. The candidate to oppose the Premier is likely to be Charles Readhead of Nelson, ex-Warden of the county, and a Liberal.

Much general satisfaction is felt throughout the riding of East Kent over the announcement that Hon. Manning Doherty has been assigned to East Kent. Practically all U. F. O. Clubs in the riding have been canvassed during the past few weeks, and with two exceptions, all endorsed his candidature.

J. B. Clark's action in making way for the Minister is highly commended in U.F.O. ranks and by prominent Liberals. "West end of the riding is practically unanimous in favor of Doherty being unopposed," was the statement of a man who knows. It is not considered probable that the Conservatives will nominate a candidate.

More contributors to charity, manage to be caught in the act.

Plumbers are not the only pipe fiends.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Said:

"After all what a man does with his money is to invest, and there is no better way to in it than in Life Insurance.

As an ESTATE BUILDER there is nothing to equal Life Insurance.

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210380) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $66.30 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $3495.00 in case of death.

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

No wonder Sir Wilfrid said—and he might have added (no better place than the Sun Life of Canada)—"there is no better way to invest it than in LIFE INSURANCE."

THEATRICAL

: : AT THE GRAND : :

"Fair and Warmer" a most amusing comedy by Avery Hopwood attracted a capacity audience to the Grand last night and for two hours and a half all were convulsed with laughter. This is one of the funniest shows seen in Peterborough this season, in fact, even after the last curtain the crowd was still laughing as they passed out to the street.

Anthony Blair as Billy Bartlett, the model husband, scor d a decided hit and Miss Jeanne Elliott as the wife of the man who believed in keeping his wife guessing, was perfect in her part. The scene in which this pair decide to do something "devilish" is most laughable. Their skyscraper cocktail, a most mysterious concoction, containing everything to be found on the lists sent out by certain Montreal business houses as well as several items not found on these lists, was a splendid example of the amateur bartender's art.

Miss Ruth Allen as Laura Bartlett and Ben White as Philip Evans were good, as was Miss Swannie Taylor, in the part of Tessie, the maid. Joseph Bowl as Harrigan and George Watkins at Pete Nealy made two husky looking furniture movers.

Altogether "Fair and Warmer" is a show which, while there is nothing very deep about the plot, is one that will always raise a laugh and that no dobbt is what it was written for.

For today and tomorrow Manager Dahn has secured four of Keith's best vaudeville acts which will be shown in conjunction with eight reels of feature films. Saturday that splendid show, "Friendly Enemies," will be seen at the local playhouse and no doubt will attract a large audience.

A pyramid of beauty with Irving Berlin's International Musical Revue, "WATCH YOUR STEP," Grand Opera House, Wednesday night, January 28th.

"WATCH YOUR STEP" ONE OF THE BEST MUSICALS

FULL TO THE BRIM WITH MELODY, DANCING AND LAUGHTER.

better success of brillian individual

Crowded to the brim with melody, dancing and laughter, and played in a sparkling manner by a company who never seem to tire, "Watch Your Step," Irving Berlin's international syncopated musical success, will be the offering at the Grand for a limited engagement of one night only, Wednesday, Jan. 28th.

There is an intovicating "something" about "Watch Your Step," so it is said, that savors of the best the stage has produced in the musical way in a long time. It has a wealth of harmony of the kind that makes you want to join in the singing, or dance, or whistle the tunes. Its comedy is rich and its story amusing. It just seems to carry itself along with a dash and a rhythm that is delightfully irresistable.

Along with everything else, the scenic effects and costuming are of a high order and it is seldom that one sees such a refreshing succession of original ideas in stage settings, the light and color of which harmonize so well.

In "Watch Your Step," stagecraft is one of the chief factors in making the very desirable first impression which is sustained throughout the action of the production.

Down to the smallest detail as well as in the big things, the company and the production reflect the intelligence and care taken by the producer.

AARON HOFFMAN WROTE "FRIENDLY ENEMIES"

GREATEST SUCCESS OF FAMOUS THEATRICAL AND HUMOROUS WRITER.

Aaron Hoffman, who with Samuel Shipman, wrote "Friendly Enemies," the famous comedy success, which A. H. Woods will present at the Grand Saturday, matinee and evening, has been for many years one of the most prolific of all writers for the stage. In particular, he has writing for In particular, he has been writing for who has ever attended a vaudeville show who has not heard some of Hoffman's material. He has also written musical comedies, but his connection with "Friendly Enemies" may be regarded as the turning point of his career.

Some of the most famous monologists have been going to Hoffman for their material for years. The late Cliff Gordon won fame with the political satires written by Hoffman and Lew Dockstader, using similar material without the accent, has made a huge success in the two-a-day. Mr. Hoffman's vaudeville sketch, "The Cherry Tree," is considered the best vaudeville sketch in years. And dozens of other sketches and monolouges have been written by Mr. Hoffman for such performers as Weber and Fields, Joe Welch, Nora Bays, Henry Lewis, Sam Mann, Jess Dandy and others.

Mr. Hoffman wrote nearly all the vehicles which the late Rogers Brothers used in the days when they were the most popular comedians on the American stage. He wrote several full length pieces for Yorke and Adams, the popular comedians of the West. He dramatized "The Newlyweds" when that cartoon series was in its prime.

Not content with vaudeville and the legitimate theatre, Mr. Hoffman has also turned his hand to film scenarios, and written a series of ten for Olga Petrova. Since the production and enormous success of "Friendly Enemies," Mr. Hoffman has been in great demand as a writer for the legitimate stage, and has turned out several successful pieces.

Canada's Coal.

Canada's coal production during 1919 has probably been about thirteen million tons. This is rather disappointing when compared with the 1918 figures, for it shows a reduced output of about 13 per cent. Strikes chiefly, also lack of tonnage for the transportation of coal, thus cutting down the market, together with minor causes, have been responsible for the falling off. Another noteworthy feature of the year's showing is that Alberta, which in 1918 wrested from Nova Scotia the laurels for production, slumped badly during 1919. Indeed at the end of October it had only produced seven-tenths as much as the province by the sea, and the indications were that this ratio of loss would be pretty well maintained until the end of the year.

Last year, even with a production of practically 15,000,000 tons, Canada had to import over 21,000,000 tons during the financial year that ended March 31st, 1919.

Wouldn't Have Kept Another Day.

A certain sportsman went out for a day's rough shooting. He was not a particularly good shot, and so he got nothing; but since he was rather ashamed to return empty-handed, he bought a hare in the town on his way home. He presented the hare to his wife, who, after responding with the usual congratulations, thoughtfully remarked: "Do you know, it was a good thing you shot that hare when you did, John; it wouldn't have kept another day."

Advice.

Father—Now, my son, I'm going to give you some good advice. Some day you'll wish you had taken it. It's the same advice I wish I had taken when my dad gave it to me.

Shipping in Montreal.

That the first year of peace was a banner shipping year for Montreal is reflected in the statistics placed before the harbor commissioners of Montreal. In the season just closed 786 ships came to Montreal, of which 702 were trans-Atlantic ships, as compared with 644 last year. The British tonnage totalled 1,646,532 and total of other tonnage was 532,748. Inland transportation totalled 7,499 vessels, with 4,357,734 tonnage, an increase of 1,397 ships and of 1,043,836 over the previous season. River and gulf traffic between Montreal and the Maritime Provinces showed great improvement, number of vessels in this category being 84, with tonnage of 137,642, as compared with only 30 vessels, and tonnage of 22,861 in 1918. The 1919 season opened on April 14 and closed December 12. The opening was the earliest since 1913, but the closing was five days earlier than last year. First ocean arrival was on April 22, five days earlier than last year, and last ocean departure was December 10, four days earlier than in 1918.

Winnipeg to Build Houses.

As the first definite step toward relieving the housing shortage, the Winnipeg Housing Commission has called for tenders for the construction of fifty residences in Fort Rouge and west end districts. These houses, to be erected at a cost of about $185,000, are to be the first block of about 300 that the commission proposes to build before next autumn.

Agile Rhinoceros.

The rhinoceros, nothwistanding its unwieldy shape and short legs, is one of the most agile of beasts. A horseman can scarcely manage to overtake it, and in strength it is perhaps unsurpassed by any animal in the forest. In a single combat no animal but the elephant can stand up against it. To kill a rhinoceros a rifle ball must strike behind the shoulder.

The Araucanians of the southernmost province of Chile use a crab shell as a barometer. In dry, fair weather it is white, but when rain is approaching red spots appear on it, and when excessive moisture is present in the atmosphere it becomes red all over.

Cause of His Complaint.

Pay of British Flyers Raised.

Particulars of the new scale of pay for officers holding permanent or short service commissions in the reconstituted British air force have been made known by the air ministry. A uniform system of rates for all branches (with the exception of certain specialist services) has been adopted, the pay ranging from five shillings per day, for a cadet, to £7 for a general.

The rates, it is explained, have been fixed with reference to the present high cost of living, and it has been decided that 20 per cent of the pay, and retired pay will be considered as due thereto, and will be subject, after five years, to change, either upward or downward, according as the cost of living rises or falls. Subsequently revisions will be made at three yearly intervals on the basis of board of trade food prices.

Balance Wheel Activities.

The balance wheel of an average watch makes 300 vibrations every minute, 18,000 each hour, 432,000 in a day, or 157,788,000 a year.

Tree Trunks Made Cisterns.

The gigantic baobab tree of central Africa, the trunk of which sometimes attains a diameter of forty feet, often serves as a natural cistern, retaining rain-water in large quantities in a cavity formed at the top of the broad trunk. Taking the hint thus afforded by nature, the Arabs artificially hollow out the huge baobabs and fill them with water during the prevalence of rains, as a provision against the dry season. These cisterns are in many cases twenty feet in height and eight or ten feet in diameter.

CANNINGTON LOSE TO PETES 10 TO 2 IN VERY SLOW UNINTERESTING GAME

Visitors Played Good Combination and Were Exceptionally Game but Were Lacking in Weight and Speed—Locals Good but Did not Extend Themselves.

In a slow, listless game that was witnessed by a small disinterested crowd, the local intermediates defeated Cannington last night by the score of 10 to 2. The score itself tells the story of the game which, except for a few flashes of speed and combination would have been nothing from a spectator's standpoint.

Cannington are a game crowd of players and gave all they had all the time, in spite of the superior speed and weight of their opponents. The forward line of the visitors displayed some combination that, if it could be copiedby Peterborough or by Lindsay, would turn either into one of the best in the league.

Welsh, as centre, was perhaps the best forward for the visitors, although it was never advisable to leave T. Halward, the little left wing man unguarded. The latter had a rather amusing habit of loafing around centre ice, but was always in his position when it came to a rush. The number of passes he accepted and returned last night was astonishing and this combination play would have resulted in more counters if the little fellow could have skated faster. McLeod in right wing, played his position well but like the rest of his team was hampered by his inability to get up speed.

The defence, at times, worked like a pair of professionals. They were exceptionally steady but when Rose and company of the local forwards would swerve, neither F. Halward nor Callahan had the speed to go after them.

Williams, in goal, made some pretty saves especially in the first period Most of those that beat him were hard ones from close in.

For the locals, all must share the credit of the the victory except Banty. Evans who failed to put in an appearance. The same regular line-up was used as played the last game in Lindsay and from all appearnces it words well together. Ray Rose plays a nice game on the defence with Pete Thornton, but it must be noticed that his work around the Cannington net was particularly persistent.

On the other hand, Grover Halpin, although he played a nice game, does not appear to help his team along so well from the centre position as when he lines up on the defence.

Harry Thornton did most of the scoring for the Petes and did some spectacular playing especially in the first period.

Lornie Rose, on left wing, was good as usual and seems to be adding to his speed as the season progresses. When Lindsay come here a week from Friday they will do well to watch out for the local captain or he will spell defeat to their championship aspirations.

Cherett and Jackson played nicely, but as the game was already won when they were introduced into the game they did not extend themselves.

Murray, as usual, stopped everything that came his way except the two that were scored on passes right at the goal mouth.

Cannington Scored First

Cannington started the scoring when Welsh accepted a long pass from T. Halward inside the Peterborough defence.

The locals came right back and H. Thornton tied the score, adding two more for good measure before the period ended.

The second period was a listless affair with the visitors showing nice combination on occasions and the locals attempting some, but making a better success at brilliant individual efforts.

From the early minutes of the last period it was apparent the players were just waiting for the final bell. The locals had the puck most of the time and no doubt could have scored more had they extended themselves. Halpin made strenuous efforts to break into the score solumn in this period, but this honor was denied him by the visiting defence.

Between the second and third periods "Rube" Brady donned a sweater and warmed up but referee Washorn would not allow him to enter the game on the grounds that he was not registered with the O. H. A. as a regular player.

ZARA RULED BY VENICE.

Winged Lion of Saint Mark Caps Gate In the Town Wall.

Zara, where Gabriele d'Annunzio is reported to have landed, and its location relative to Flume, already occupied by the soldier-poet, is described in a U. S. Geographic Society bulletin, based on a communication from Kenneth McKenzie, follows:—

"Starting from Fiume, one sails down the channel called Quarnerolo, leaving Istria and the Gulf of Guarnero to the right. The Island of Arbe, about half way to Zara, has an old cathedral with a twelfth-century tower. Coming from Trieste one skirts the western shore of Istria, stopping perhaps at Rovigno and at Pola. The stay of an hour enables one to get a hurried glimpse of the great amphitheatre and other Roman remains of Pola, under Austrian rule an important naval station and strongly fortified. The language here is chiefly Italian. Istria would well repay the time devoted to a trip of several days; but we pass on, stopping at one or two of the islands, to Zara, the most northerly town of importance in Dalmatia.

"Zara is noted all over the world for its maraschino. Aside from this, however, the town has many attractions to offer. On landing from the steamer in the land-locked harbor, we find ourselves in front of a gate in the town wall. Over the gate is the winged lion of Saint Mark, often met with here and elsewhere in Dalmatia, and a symbol of the former dominion of the Republic of Venice. Passing through the gate, we enter the narrow paved streets of a typical Italian city, such as we may imagine it to have been two or three centuries ago, except that the hotels are more comfortable. There are many mediaeval churches in the town, interesting achitecturally, and containing works of art. The cathedral in particular, a majestic Romanesque church, is richly adorned outside with many arcades of little columns and inside with marbles and paintings. It is in the best Italian style of the middle ages. Its campanile is a landmark.

"Wandering among the narrow streets, we come upon several open squares and market-places, where in the morning scores of peasants may be seen in the brilliant-colored costumes. There are Roman remains too—columns and statues.

Leaving Zara, the steamer comes out of the harbor, encircles the point of land on which the city stands, and skirts low-lying shores, passing among innumerable islands. All at once a narrow opening appears; we go through it, and find ourselves in the spacious harbor of Sebenico, with the town rising from the water to a fort crowning the hill."

Loyal to British Crown.

There are a number of diminutive water-surrounded monarchies off the coast of Scotland. They each have their kings, but are subject to the British crown. One of them is the Isle of Bute, in the Firth of Clyde, which is owned by the Marquis of Bute.

The kingdom contains only fifty square miles, but has a population of 11,000 people. There are six lakes within the island, the largest being Loch Fad, which is about a quarter of a mile wide and about nine times that in length. The famous old home of the marquis dates from the year 1608.

Arran is another of these kingdoms in the same firth. The Marchioness of Graham rules over its 5,000 inhabitants. It is nineteen miles long and ten miles broad. It was on this island that Robert the Bruce is said to have hidden in a cave for some time and there planned one of his expeditions to recover the crown. The ruins of a castle, once the home of one of Scotland's kings, is on the island.

Sir John Bullough rules over the island of Rhuth, which is one vast game preserve. Nearly all this island is deep forest and moorland, and all of it is mountainous. Only 300 acres are tillable, and there are 160 inhabitants. The island provides deer and other game for the nobility.

The largest of these island groups is doubtless Lewis Island, one of the outer Hebrides group, off the west coast of Scotland. It covers an area of nearly 700 square miles and boasts a population of 37,000 people. It has splendid lochs, where splendid fishing is to be had, and red deer still roam over the moors and forest land.

This land has a stirring history, for the people have always been fighters and have many times defeated the royal troops.—Answers.

Solved Labor Problem.

The Malays and Bataks of Sumatra have solved their labor problem in a unique way. An important part of their food is the cocoanut, and this also forms an important part of their commerce. They have trained monkeys to pick nuts, in which they show great dexterity. Carl D. La Rue of Sumatra writes to Science saying that trained cocoanut-picking monkeys sell at from $8 to $20, according to their skill. He adds that they are very savage, and will inflict a serious bite whenever they get a chance

Mirrors.

In the early part of the sixteenth century mirrors first became articles of household furniture and decoration. Previous to that time — from the twelfth to the end of the fifteenth century—pocket mirrors or small hand mirrors, carried at the girdle, were adjuncts to ladies' toilettes. The pocket mirror consisted of small circular plaques of polished metal fixed in a shallow circular box covered with a lid.

Norway Extracting Salt from Ocean.

Experiments in Norway with a view to extracting salt from ocean water by means of electricity have been successful, and two salt factories will be started for this purpose in the near future.

The Thoughtless Answer.

A certain Kansas City physician will never know just how near death he was the other day when, after a thorough examination of probably the brightest, sweetest and altogether supreme nine-months-old baby in the world, the mother asked, "Well, what do you think of my baby?" and he said, "Oh, it's a normal child."

Combinations in Soap.

The principle of soap making is always the same and is based on the combination of fat and an alkali, as in the case of tallow and lye. Variations in soaps are largely due to additions of perfumes, coloring matter and such substances, which have nothing to do with the primary purpose of soap, which is to cleanse.

War-Made Millionaires

Duped by the Dealers

Who Reap Rich Harvest

During the war the art dealer has reaped a rich harvest, and there is no reason to believe that he is not reaping it still, for the demand for valuable oil and water-color paintings is unprecedented. War-made millionaires, says London Ideas, who openly admit knowing more about a bale of cotton than art, have paid stupendous sums for alleged "old masters" which in reality are not worth the canvass they are painted on.

There are at the present day art factories and studios in France, Belgium and Austria which are turning out these show "old masters" by the carload. Paintings by Rubens, Hals, Vandyke and Rembrandt have all been duplicated innumerable times, and even yet the game goes merrily on.

The painting of these spurious masterpieces employs a large number of broken-down artists, who work on what is known as the "part-picture" principle. One artist paints the head and arms, another the masses, whilst others touch up draperies and fill in back-grounds. By this method the painting occupies less time and looks more realistic than if performed by one man. The brilliant colors, so marked in "old masters," are easily obtained by first impregnating the canvas with special chemicals, whilst the dirt of centuries is applied with a mixture of gum and powdered black cinders.

The finished canvas is now ready for framing, and here again the spurious art manufacturer shows his ingenuity by placing it in an old worm-eaten frame, the material of which was probably obtained from a neighboring barn door, or secured at the demolition of and ancient cottage or church. The completed masterpiece —of trickery if not of art—now passes into the hands of the crafty art dealer, who, if he has no customer with more money than sense, on whom to palm the picture, invariably takes it to a second-hand shop, where, by arrangement with the proprietor, the faked painting is placed in the window, probably upside down, or under a heap of old books.

Sooner or later, a "green" collector, looking for a bargain, will rush in and, in his excitement at having discovered an apparent Rubens, will not realize how the price is being run up until it is too late to draw out. Only on getting his worthless painting home, is he left to meditate upon his folly.

Cleaning up and revarnishing old pictures is another trick of the trade which brings a substantial increase to the art dealer's income. It is by no means an extraordinary thing for an art dealer to buy a collection of worthless paintings for a few pounds and afterwards sell them for as many hundreds. Wielded by a competent man, a brushful of black oil paint will soon forge the name of some dead artist whose work is in constant demand, whilst experts on art declare that there is nothing like the pulp of a raw potato to tone up and bring out the colors of a faded painting. A small quantity of picture varnish is now cleverly applied, the frame regilded, and once again the crafty art dealer has a real, genuine, "old master" for sale.

Ireland Is Prosperous.

Samuel S. McClure, publisher, has just paid a three months' visit to Ireland, where he said he found a "paradise."

"Ireland is the most prosperous, comfortable and law-abiding country in the world," said Mr. McClure. "The people are well dressed and well housed. One has to read outside papers to learn of trouble and unsettled conditions there.

"I found that Irish banks have deposits of more than 100,000,000 pounds, and have been forced to form alliances with English banks in order to find an outlet for their money. There are 5,000,000 head of cattle in Ireland, or half as many as in Canada. Ireland has exported as much food to England since 1913 as either the United States or the Argentine."

A Self-made Briton.

From general utility boy to general manager sums up the career of Mr. Charles Addington, the new manager of the Great Western Railway in the Old Country.

Forty-three years ago he began at the bottom of the ladder, as a boy of thirteen. To-day he controls the railway which possesses the longest mileage in Britain.

His favorite yarn concerns a passenger who remonstrated with the guard on the slowness of the train. "If you don't like the speed, get out and walk," said the guard.

"No, thanks," was the reply. "I'm not in such a hurry as all that."

Female Magistrates.

Seven women have been appointed magistrates in Great Britain, in pursuance of an Act of Parliament making members of their sex eligible to such an office. They are: Mrs. David Lloyd George, wife of the Prime Minister; the Marchioness of Crewe, younger daughter of a former Prime Minister, the Earl of Rosebery; the Marchioness of Londonderry, who recently opened a political salon; Mrs. Humphrey Ward, a famous author; Mrs. Sidney Webb, who has been active in investigating social and industrial conditions, upon which she has written important works, and who has served on Government missions; Miss Elizabeth Haldane (sister of Lord Haldane), who has been conspicuous for many years in welfare and educational work, and Miss Gertrude Truckwell.

They are to constitute also a Women's Advisory Committee to advise the Lord High Chancellor as to the fitness of other women for magisterial office when vacancies occur.

These appointments were made by the Lord High Chancellor (Lord Birkenhead, better known as Sir Frederick E. Smith), the highest judicial officer of the British crown, who appoints all judges as well as justices of the peace. He regards women as especially qualified for work in children's courts.

He Had to Play.

The best story ever told by Major Regan, veteran bandmaster of the British army, concerns a music hall manager of the old school who once entered the place during a band rehearsal. Soft music was being played, and the trombone player was not required. "Why ain't thate hap playing?" demanded the manager. "Well, they are play pizzicato, you see," was the explanation volunteered. "I don't care a hang what they're playing," roared the irate one. "Tell him if he cannot play pizzicato or any other dashed tune that is put in front of him, he's to get out of my band."

A Dreary Journey.

The greater part of the route lies through a desert region, practically devoid of life, and utterly uninteresting

Known In Canada.

The recent marriage of the famous actor, Mr. Charles Hawtrey, to the Hon. Mrs. Petrie must have interested many people in this country who have affectionate recollections of the father of the bride, Rev. Prof. Clark of Trinity College. His charm of manner and his preaching made him a remarkable figure in Toronto years ago, and he is still remembered with admiration by those who used to flock to church to hear him. Mr. Hawtrey, also, has a great following in Canada, where he is an old friend. Age has not withered him nor custom staled the amusement he gives his audiences when he appears in a typical "Hawtrey" part.

Find River Jordan Unclean.

Bathing in the River Jordan, famous in sacred history, has lost its popularity as the result of the discovery by American physicians that it is a dangerous disease germ carrier.

One of the first steps taken by the American Red Cross unit reaching that region was an analysis of the river water. Red Cross headquarters here has been informed. It was found laden with the germs of skin diseases and other maladies. There has never before been restrictions on bathing in the stream, regardless of the physical conditions of the bathers, but the revelations of danger lurking in the Jordan's waters caused the local authorities to place a ban on the unrestricted bathing.

Coffins Rented in Moscow.

Unofficial advices to the state department state that practically all stores in Moscow have been municipalized as a rule without compensation to owners. Eggs are quoted at 11 rubles and matches at four rubles a box. Individual coffins are reported to be no longer used, but are being rented out. The mortality rate is very high, with typhus, grip and erysipelas being especially prevalent and overcrowding the hospitals.

COLD FEET IN ADVERTISING

It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.

Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.

National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.

Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms? Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.

HOUSING SCHEME ALL DEPENDS NOW UPON ACTION OF THE LEGISLATURE

Question is Whether That Body Will Loan Any More Money to Municipalities for the Erection of Dwellings.

(By F. H. Dobbin.)

As might be expected, man enquiries are coming forward from those interested in the Housing proposition for Peterborough. Enquiries from several, in addition to the number who during November last signified that if the proposition were open, each would be ready to avail themselves of the opportunity. But at present things are at a standstill.

The director of the Ontario Bureau of Municipal Affairs, and who is the operating head of the Housing activity, has been written to asking if, so far as he is informed, will the new Provincial Government go forward and finish up appropriations to municipalities, for work in hand, and further extend the facility to borrow money to municipalities proposing to embark in the enterprise. So far reply has not been received.

There are newspaper statements that the new Government looks with a not cheerful eye on the whole scheme. And that it realises that immediate and prospective demands would entail the procuring of a very large sum of money. Looking, in turn to the Dominion Government, to see if it would be willing to advance so much as $8,000,000 at the stated rate of interest, five per cent. Until something definite is learned, little can be done, except in the way of securing information.

With regard to what has been accomplished in the past year, of the municipalities which have gone into the venture, none have so far given publicity to results. It would be most helpful if they would. And not doing so it is left to pick out three or four places that have been building and go and see.

Will Visit Other Cities

Council has instructed the local commission to visit at Hamilton, Brantford, Guelph, and calling at Oshawa as well. Hamilton is reported to have been very successful. Brantford to have had satisfactory success. Guelph to have built twenty-seven houses and is fairly well satisfied with results. That city is going on again this summer and hopes to accomplish considerable. A not from the secretary says that a six-roomed house, comprising downstairs, hallway, living room, dining room, kitchen, and upstairs three bedrooms and the bath room with furnace and electric wiring, water, etc, has averaged in cost $2,970.00; exclusive of the lot. Built of brick and well fitted and supplied with heating and sanitary sewer service. These houses are nicely planned, having a broad verandah across the front end, and are in every way just what a working man would need.

The deputation has in mind to see and be seen. To get at each place photos of the houses completed. Plans and specifications if possible. So far as procurable statements in detail of cost. Both in materials and labor. To consult with the occupant and owner of the house and ask if he is satisfied with the whole arrangement. How payments are being met, and how devised. Consult with the workingman himself and get his opinion and viewpoint. Then one has both sides of the story.

Much that is valuable can be ascertained. One place can profit by the experience of another, and those which ventured first will be able to give of warning, if such be pertinent. Bringing back all information procurable, a report will be made to Council from which the facts can be used to form conclusions. Council may then decide to go ahead. It might view the whole venture with caution especially when the building costs are figured out as such as would be entailed in building in Peterborough. One important factor will be the wages scales as set by the several branches of the building trades in this city. These scales will be available for reference about the middle of April. It is the intention to place the stated cost of erecting in Peterborough on the prices for materials and labor as they will stand at the time indicated. Then the prospective owner of the house can form his conclusions.

Rests With Legislature

In the end the decision as to more money rests with the legislature. No doubt the Dominion Government would oblige with further loan if the Province be willing to take the responsibilty. In no other way can the money be had at an interest rate of five per cent. And that is the foundation of the whole movement. Already there is in sight a call for as many as forty dwellings. And this municipality, if it is to grow and progress must provide, either by the Housing scheme, by civic enterprise or by private effort additional houses. The plea that we have already plenty of houses offered for sale is not well taken. Many houses are too large. Others not well fitted and indeed not desirable. Almost anyone owning a house will sell it if the inducements be sufficiently attractive. But the situation to the working man is that he wishes to own his house and equally wishes to avoid paying these attractive prices. With labor and materials as they stand, it will take planning and economy to secure a home. Even one of moderate dimensions.

In other parts of the province it has become the settled conviction that for the future, people must be content to live in houses of modest dimensions, and not immoderate cost. Such mean lessened taxes, lessened fuel for heating, etc. It is indeed surprising how well a family can accommodate themselves to the dimensions of a small house, providing the same be well planned, well laid out, unnecessary spaces deleted, and equipped with modern conveniences. A well planned pantry, for instance, is a revelation to the housewife, accustomed to stow the food and dishes in an orifice tucked in under the stairs. Cupboards, closets, etc., are worked in to serve without taking up floor space. All these things are considered in planning the workman's dwelling, when of standard type and construction.

WEEKLY MEETING AT THE BOARD OF TRADE

MESSRS. G. A. GILLESPIE AND W. H. PRETTY, THE SPEAKERS TONIGHT

George A. Gillespie, president of the Peterborough Milk Products, Limited, who for several years represented Peterborough as a member of the Provincial Parliament, is to be the chief speaker at the special meeting of the Board of Trade tonight. His subject will be "Industry in Peterborough."

Mr. Gillespie is one of Peterborough's younger business men who, by rare ability and industry, has won a high position among our men of affairs. He is qualified to speak from the Peterborough viewpoint, and will no doubt deal with local initiative and promotive enterprise as a stimulant of the city's advancement.

William H. Pretty, an enigneer of the Trent Canal staff, will follow Mr. Gillespie on the subject "The Political Economy of Power." As a graduate of the English school of engineering and with years of practical professional work in Canada, he is sure to interest the Board of Trade.

The economy of water power and electrical energy has special interest at this time, when the policy of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission is under fire from the Board of Trade. Peterborough's interest lies in the use of power at the waterpower centre, while the policy of the Hydro-Electric is to diffuse power beyond the natural economic zone.

The fact that the base upon which the prosperity of Peterborough must rest is industry, and that a definite plan of city development has yet to be made, will doubtless attract an unusual attendance of members. The attendance is limited to members of the Board of Trade.

This is the second of the series of discussions devoted to practical problems touching the future of Peterborough, and in which the City Council and the Board of Trade are particularly interested.

The topic for next Thursday evening will be the Ontario Safety League. The speaker will be Mr. H. B. Morley.

Consider the Conditions Among the Mixed Population Degrading.

Welland, Jan. 22.—The Local Council of Women here have asked the Council to make a grant for the purpose of a girl's home and a children' aid society. Conditions among the children in some parts of the city are degrading. The population, being mixed, and having no inspector, the children are growing up in filthy and immoral surroundings. Robt. Martin, provincial inspector, urged prompt action in this respect, as he said the children of to-day are the citizens of tomorrow. Welland police force will be reduced to four to cut expenses.

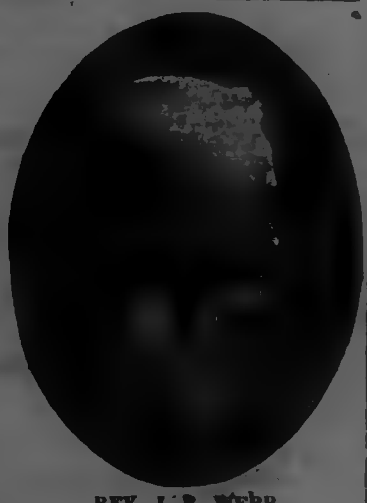
Murray Street Baptists at Their Annual Meeting Increa.e His Salary by $400 a Yearr,

At the anual business meeting of Murray Street Baptist Church held on Wednesday evening, Jan. 21st, most encouraging reports were received from all departments and the officers were elected for the ensuing year. During the year over $11500.00 was raised for all purposes, including $900.00 contributed by the Ladies' Aid Society. For the first time in many years the Finance Committee was able to report a favorable balance and by a unanimous vote the pastor's salary was increased $400.00.

Resolution of Appreciation.

The whole session was punctuated by expressions of appreciation of the services of Mr. and Mrs. Webb, and on the motion of Mr. R. Merrill and Mr. V. Eastwood, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:



REV. J. R. WEBB
Pastor of Murray Street Baptist Church, whose ministry of fourteen years was warmly commended at the annual meeting of the congregation, and whose stipend was increased by $400 a year.

"While the services of our beloved pastor are being recognized and appreciated in other parts of the convention, the members of Murray Street Church cannot be silent lest that silence be interpreted as a lack of appreciation of his ministry and work among us.

"At the beginning of this, his fourteenth year of service with us, it is well to recall some of the many incidents which make his pastorate one of the most blessed and fruitful in the history of this church. His tender ministries at the bedside of our loved ones, his ready sympathy in all our trials, great and small, his word of encouragement to the burdened, his prompt assistance to the needy, his willingness to sacrifice himself at all times for those who are dependent on him for spiritual and mental comfort, and not least, the sincerity with which he rejoices in all our success have endeared him to the hearts of his people here.

"Not only his pastoral work but his ministry from the pulpit is most inspiring and helpful. His fearless and forceful presentation of the truth is at all times an incentive to a higher and broader spiritual life to those who are privileged to hear his messages. And this ministry is increasing in power and inspiration with the passing years.

"Therefore, be it resolved, that on this, his thirteenth anniversary, we once again express our loyalty to him personally, our interest in the work in which he is leading us, and our determination to go forward to greater things under his capable leadership; that we individually remember him daily in our prayers at the throne of grace, thanking God for his devoted and self-sacrificing ministry and presence among us, and invoking continued blessing upon his work here

ONE CENTURY OF INDUSTRIAL GROWTH

G, A. Gillespie Ex-M. P. P. Delivers Interesting Address Before Board of Trade.

The practical and scientific discussion of industry engaged the attention of the Board of Trade last evening, when George A. Gillespie, ex-M.P.P., spoke on "Industry in Peterborough," and William H. Pretty, C.E., on "The Political Economy of Power."

President Turner was not able to be present on account of a temporary illness and Vice-President Thos. Barrie occupied the chair.

In opening the meeting Mr. Barrie spoke of the growing interest the members of the Board are taking in these serious but interesting studies in city development and expressed the hope that out of them we may become less and less superficial—more and more purposeful in co-operative city building.

Chairman Barrie said that Mr. Gillespie needed no introduction to the members of the Board of Trade or to the citizens of Peterborough. After a brief acknowledgment of the reception given him, Mr. Gillespie spoke as follows:

Mr. Gillespie's Address.

Mr. Chairman and Fellow Members:

In the year 1819, one hundred years ago, Peterborough was first established, but not until the year 1825, with the Robertson immigration settling here, was much progress made, but from that time on Peterborough began to make real progress in increased population, and we find between the years 1819 and 1850 several saw mills and wood working plants, including the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Co. were established, and according to record, the population was 2,000 people.

Between the years 1850 and 1875 real industrial development began in Peterborough. The raceway was built from London to Murray street, with the view of developing water power for industry, and was responsible for building up a number of woollen, flour mills, etc. The Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Co., which were manufacturers of saw mill machinery, boilers, etc., was established between these dates. The population of Peterborough in the year 1875, according to records, was 7,055.

From the year 1875 to the year 1900 a further number of industries were established, in the line of woollen mills, iron works, flax mills, lock manufacturing, carriage works, canoe building, harness manufacturing and the present plant of the George Matthews Company, pork packers, which has been responsible for the building up of the agricultural district, taking from the farmer his production of hogs.

The population in the year 1900, record show to have been 10,897.

From the year 1900 up to the present year, 1920 a further number of industries were established, among them being the Quaker Oats Co., the Peterborough Cereal Co., the Colonial Weaving Co., the Bon-

Allies Request For Surrender Of The Ex-Kaiser Is Denied

(Canadian Press Despatch)

The Hague, Jan. 28.—The Dutch Government has refused the demand of the Allied Powers for the extradition of former Emperor William of Germany.

The reply of the Dutch Government regarding extradition of former Emperor William was received in Paris this morning, and during the noon hour was still in process of being deciphered at the Dutch legation.

The newspapers today declared Holland would [illegible] a service to civilization by refusing to allow an action which in the future would be regrettable to everybody. One paper insists that the Allies did not expect Holland to accede to the demand in the note. Foreign diplomats here also expressed unofficially their desire that the demand be not granted, asserting that if it were the Allies would become the laughing stock of the world. One paper characterized the whole affair as "theatrical."

Ottawa, Jan. 23.—At the concluding session of the Dominion executive of the Great War Veterans' conefrence here, permission was granted to the local, provincial, and district commands to circulate petitions among the public asking for further financial aid from the Government as a means of solving the re-establishment problem.

The executive approved the resolution adopted by the Toronto district command requesting the House to reconsider the question and solve the problems of re-establishment by providing substantial gratuities for all who have served in the Canadian expeditionary forces, and their dependents.,

Reaffirming its belief in the inadequacy of the re-establishment methods of the Government, now in operation, the exective have forwarded a letter to Sir Robert Borden declining the invitation of the Premier to submit any other aspects of the question or further suggestions or recommendations. A resolution was also adopted favoring the principle of proportional representation.

ST. ANDREW'S CONGREGATION ADD $400 TO SALARY OF PASTOR, REV. JAS. ROLLINS

Practical Appreciati n of Excellent Service He is Rendering the People—Annual Meeting Held Last Night—Legacy of $10,000 Left by Late Mrs. T. R. Hewson.

St. Andrew's Church has fallen heir to a legacy of $10,000 bequeathed by the late Mrs. T. R. Hewston, who died recently and who was for years one of the most esteemed and active members of the congregation. The announcement was made at the annual congregational meeting last night by the pastor, Rev. Jas. Rollins, and came as a surprise to the members and adherents in attendance. Mr. E. Bruce Fowler, presided, and Mr. W. A. Richardson acted as secretary of the meeting.

It was decided to add the legacy to the fund which will be raised for the erection of a new Sunday school building. The minister and board of managers were authorized to sell the property belonging to the church and which was purchased by the money left to the congregation by the late Mrs. Nicholls. The proceeds of the sale will be set aside for the construction of the proposed new building, and it is expected that the committee having this matter in charge will be in a position to report some definite arrangements at the next annual meeting, so that the work of building may be commenced in the spring of 1921.

The church has shown advance in every department during the past year, especially so since the return of Mr. Rollins from overseas, and the attendance at the evening services has been especially gratifying. The congregation last night gave practical expression of its appreciation of the work of Mr. Rollins by unanimously voting him an increase of $400 a year in his stipend. During the year the congregation has lost the services of the talented organist and choir leader, Mr. Herbert C. Treneer, who is now taking a college course in Toronto, but has been fortunate in securing as his successor, Mr. John Crane.

The report of the Session, presented by Mr. Rollins, after an eloquent reference to the Forward Movement, set forth that the number of communicants now on the roll is 527. There were 37 added during the year, 15 by certificate and 22 on profession of faith. There were during the same period 25 baptisms, eight marriages and seven deaths.

The Sunday school report, presented by Secretary C. M. Thornton and Treasurer A. McNab, showed gratifying results both as to attendance and finances. The same was shown in the reports of the Young Women's Bible Class, the Women's Missionary Society, the Young Ladies' Mission Band and the Ladies' Aid, the latter society reporting a balance on hand of $1416.51. Mrs. William Stevens received the honor of special mention for her work in connection with this society.

One of the most pleasing reports of the evening was that of the Willing Workers' Mission Band, which was presented in admirable form by little Dorothy Clark, and which showed that this society, which meets on the first Saturday of each month, had raised $120.43 during the year and has the odd cents remaining as a bank balance. It has 50 members and had an average attendance of 25.

When the war ended the Patriotic Society of the congregation had a balance of $249, which has been held as a trust fund ever since. It was decided at last night's meeting to donate this amount, with accrued interest, to the Armenian Fund.

Financial Report.

The financial report, presented by Mr. J. John, showed that the congregation raised last year for all purposes $3920.26, and that the net receipts from the real estate holdings amounted to $776.74. The budget for the current year calls for $5860, an increase of about 30 per cent. over the expenditure of last year, a certain indication that many improvements have been planned.

Officers Elected.

There were two resignations from the board of managers, Mr. W. S. Campbell, who is leaving the city, and Mr. A. McNab, who wishes to devote all his time to the Sunday school work. Each gentleman was allowed to suggest his own successor. Mr. Campbell chose Mr. R. M. Waddell, and Mr. McNab selected Mr. Fred Raines, both of whom were unanimously elected. The five regular vacancies were filled by the re-election of Messrs. A. MacFarlane, G. A. Gilelspie, G. Walter Greene and W. A. Richardson, and by the election of a new member, Mr. G. A. Macdonald. Messrs. A. Weddell and T. O. Donaldson were re-elected auditors.

SAVINGS OF CANADIAN PEOPLE LARGE ENOUGH TO PAY OFF NATIONAL DEBT,

Balance of $65,000,000 Would Still be Left on Deposi Increase in Material Wealth Beyond all Comprehension.

Canon Gould, organizing secretary of the Anglican Forward Movement delivered a forceful and illumintaing address in All Saints' Church last night, in support of the great project in hand by the Church of England in Canada to awaken its laity to a sense of their responsibility for the advancement of their faith during the period of afterwar reconstruction, now entered into. He explained that the Anglican Forward Movement is one of various movements, which go to make up what is known as the United National campaign. One cause for the Anglican Movement, is that the Church of England threw the whole weight of her power resources and influence behind the Empire's civil forces to win the war, and must now aggressively take up and forward her deferred and accumulated responsibilities. Another cause for this Forward Movement is, he said, that the effect of the war has been a shaking to the very foundations of commercial, industrial and social life and the first year of peace finds the whole world in need of building up anew on a more staple and substantial footing.

Savings Stupendous

Continuing, Canon Gould gave as a third reason for this Forward Movement, Canada's ability to undertake all that it entails, especially so in a financial sense. In illustration of this contention, he pointed out that in 1914 the first year of war, the people's savings in Canadian banks amounted to $1,000,000,000. In 1918, those savings had grown to $1,800,000,000, anincrease of $800,000,000; and $1,300,000,000 are also invested in victory loans and war-savings generally. This shows a total savings increase since 1914 of $2.100,000,000; and, declared, the speaker, there is enough of the people's money in Canada's banks to pay off her whole national debt, leaving $65,000,000 to work on until fresh taxes flow into the treasure.

In speaking of the amount per capita paid by the British Isles and the colonies for the war, Canon Gould showed that whereas Canada had paid $200 per head, Great Britain's per capita contribution had been $700. Talking of the condition of the world as a result of the war, he said Cana-

POSTMASTER CORKERY.

THE PROMOTION of Mr. John Corkery to the position of postmaster in succession to the late Postmaster Edgar will give universal satisfaction to the patrons of the office, who have always been satisfied as to Mr. Corkery's fitness for the position and who appreciate the courtesy and efficiency with which he invariably discharged his duties. It is difficult to see how the Department could have taken any other course, as, according to the new civil service rules, Mr. Corkery was entitled to the position by virtue of his long years of service as deputy. The Government has demonstrated the sincerity of its avowal to abolish the evils of patronage so far as possible, and Peterborough, under the new system, has secured a true and trusted public official, who assumes his new duties perfectly equipped as to experience.

Another matter that will give satisfaction second only to that with which Mr. Corkery's case is regarded is the fact that Mr. Charles Lacheur now automatically succeeds to the position of deputy postmaster. If faithful devotion to duty is to be rewarded in public as in private business life, a greater degree of stability as well as efficiency is assured in the civil service.

THAT WORD "ALCOHOL."

INDULGING in a habit it has of making insinuations against the Government, and using one of its favorite stock phrases, our contemporary says, "it is to be hoped" that the authorities will pass a law making it compulsory for all dealers who sell wood alcohol to label it poison. If the Examiner could locate itself it would know that such a law has been in existence ever since wood alcohol became an article of commerce, and the dealers are living up to the regulation. No complaint to the contrary has been heard save from our misinformed contemporary.

It is certainly deplorable that so many men, seeking a substitute for the liquor of which they have been deprived through prohibition, should poison themselves with wood alcohol. The weak and foolish must be saved from themselves. But it is not a question of label so much as designation. That word "alcohol" misleads them, and they ignore the sign of the skull and crossbones on the bottle. They indulge and the mischief is done.

What the Government should do is to retain the word "alcohol" only as it applies to the variety made from grain, and which is the basis of the intoxicating element in liquor. Men have been told for ages that all alcohol is poison, the varieties differing only in degree but a large percentage of the masses is still apparently unconvinced. Let them call the liquid responsible these days for so many deaths woodine or something similar and the end will be heard of these tragedies that are now of daily occurrence

A CHANCE FOR THE SOUTH SIDE.

PRESIDENT DENNE, of the Industrial Exhibition Board, springs another of his characteristic, practical ideas when he suggests that a cattle barn be erected on the Fair grounds, the building to be used as a skating rink during the winter months for the benefit of the residents of that district. Mr. Denne adds that it seems a pity that so much money should be expended in fitting up grounds for a three or four day annual exhibition.

Peterborough is expanding toward the south. It is only a question of time when the suburbs now forming a part of Monaghan Township will be annexed to the city. At present that section has no public playground except the small portion of land in the vicinity of King Edward School and which by easy courtesy is called a park. In the northern section there were three parks before the purchase of the Riverside property added another to the number. The Fair grounds is an ideal location for a pleasure resort for the residents of the south end, and a baseball diamond at least should be established there. The directors of the Exhibition seem set on the accomplishment of great things for the benefit of the citizens. Everybody believes that they will achieve any object for the attainment of which they unite. President Denne's suggestion is one that should not be allowed to drop. There should be no sectional favoritism shown in Peterborough. The suburbs will all the more readily cast in their lot with the city if they can be convinced that annexation would mean real metropolitan advantages.

THE NEW "HERO OF HAARLEM."

THE STORY BOOKS of children have it that years ago a little boy in Holland, on his way home one night through a lonely district, found a small leak in one of the dykes that shut out the ocean from that country. He was wise enough to know that the small opening in the wall would soon become larger, and that eventually the entire country would be flooded. Placing his finger in the opening, he succeeded in stopping the water, and spent the whole night in that position, thus saving a nation from death by drowning.

The press agents have sprung the story of a new savior of Holland in the person of the ex-kaiser, who has, it seems, abandoned his wood sawing and is now devoting all his spare time to the mending of dykes. The fact that his own castle prison is in immediate danger robs the tale of the element of self-sacrifice that marks that of the younger and earlier hero. But by way of increasing the interest, it is added that the new duty serves to divert the ex-kaiser's mind from his personal troubles, and that he is not worrying over the avowed purpose of the Allies to bring him to trial.

How many people have ever really believed that this royal paraoniac would ever be brought to book, like a common criminal, for his offences against humanity? International law, like domestic legislative enactments, appears powerless when a precedent is lacking, which seems to be the case in this instance. Legal records show nothing of a parallel to the situation that has risen out of the war. The Allies have sent a polite note to the Government of the Netherlands, asking for the fugitive's surrender. Holland in like vein replies that there is nothing doing. No such request can be entertained unless it comes from Germany, whence the ex-kaiser fled when all was lost, honor included.

Certainly the friends of the ex-kaiser do not lack material for putting up the semblance of a case in his defence. When The Hague Convention revised the rules of warfare there was no provision made for conflict by means of submarine and airplane, and it was through these new engines of destruction that the brutality of the Germans found its chief vent. How can the ex-kaiser or any of his associates in crime be charged with the violation of laws that had no existence?

But there is plenty of evidence to commit the deposed despot. There was not an article in the code, not a single clause in The Hague Convention, that he did not ruthlessly violate, just as at the outset he disregarded the obligations of a solemn international treaty. Before the bar of public opinion the monster of iniquity already stands condemned. This is no time to stand on precedent, when everything of the kind was ignored all through the war. Rather is it a time for setting up new guiding posts for the direction of future generations. This present day spirit of general unrest will never be quieted, the people will never believe that the war was really won, and that the future safety of humanity is assured, so long as the arch villain, whose hands are red with the blood of millions, is protected by the trifling technicalities of international ethics.

The cable despatches of yesterday told how three thousand of the prisoners taken in the Lille district were returned to their homes in France all "looking happy and wearing good clothes." A contrast this, certainly to the emaciated and ragged Canadians and other allied captives who were released from the prison pens of the Hun.

Is the royal murderer of women and children to escape while lesser offenders are being hanged every day? No one need be surprised if this happens in a world where the ways of the blind goddess are often above comprehension. The man who steals a loaf of bread, even if it be to feed his starving children, goes to prison. The professional man entrusted with the last cent of a helpless widow or with the patrimony of orphans to invest for their benefit, sometimes appropriates the money to his own use. He gets a chance to clear himself by making restitution in his own time. The violation of one of the highest principles of honesty is not penalized

MAKING PLACES FOR VETERANS.

TO SOME IT MAY look like a hardship to turn out employes of the civil service who have no war record to make way for returned soldiers, but in taking this course the Government is simply keeping its pledge with the veterans. The service is not likely to suffer in efficiency as all of the men so placed are required to demonstrate their fitness for their new duties by the test of a written examination.

The employes now deposed, all through the war enjoyed a life of peace and security while the soldiers faced death in the trenches. The heroes of the war are certainly entitled to everything in the way of reward in the gift of the country they made so many heroic sacrifices to save.

The atmosphere must have been both clearer and more befuddled in Canada since the first of this year. Clearer because nearly one thousand orders-in-Council more or less affecting and restricting every resident are abolished, and more befuddled because liquor can be obtained more cheaply and more easily than at any time since December, 1917.

UNIFORM DIVORCE LAWS FOR CANADA

(Journal of Commerce.)

The former member for Kingston, Mr. W. F. Nickle, did a good service by moving in the House of Commons for the establishing of divorce courts in Canada. Just why, after carrying his bill through its critical second reading, Mr. Nickle dropped the matter, has not been explained. Mr. Nickle has now retired from Parliament. It is stated that a Western representative, who is a member of the legal profession, will take up the measure at the coming session. Let us hope that if he is to do so he will press the bill to a conclusion. There has long been need of such a law, and the need seems greater than ever now, for a large increase of divorce cases, here as in England and in the United States, is one of the most unhappy features of war's aftermath. At the last two sessions of Parliament the Senate's chief occupation seemed to be the hearing of divorce cases, and the notices appearing in the Canada Gazette indicate that a considerable volume of the same kind of business will require attention at the coming session.

Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and British Columbia had divorce courts before Confederation and these tribunals have continued to exercise their owers. In Prince Edward Island it is held that the Executive Council—the local Government—is clothed with the power to grant divorces, but the power has not been exercised. The Island seems to be as fortunate in its domestic relations as it is in some other respects. We do not recall any divorce case from the Province claiming attention.

In Quebec and Ontario there are no divorce courts, and consequently every divorce case has to be dealt with by a special Act of Parliament. The objections to this method of dealing with such matters have often been pointed out, and need not be repeated here.

The three prairie Provinces—Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—were for many years believed to be in the same position as Ontario and Quebec, their divorce cases coming before the Dominion Parliament. Several years ago, however, a Manitoba judge who had burrowed more deeply than his predecessors came to the conclusion that certain sections in the constitution of the Province, respecting the application of English laws of a certain period, covered divorce laws, and that in this way the Manitoba Court was empowered to grant divorces. This somewhat surprising discovery was confirmed by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in England. As the sections in question were also in the constitutions of Saskatchewan and Alberta it followed that the courts of these Provinces had power to grant divorces. This ruling has relieved the Dominion Parliament of a considerable portion of the disagreeable business. A point to be noted, however, is that the divorce laws of the prairie Provinces are not the same as those of the older Provinces here divorce courts have existed. It is the English divorce law that is applied in the prairie Provinces, and there are some provisions of that law which have long been regarded as unjust.

It is much to be desired that the divorce laws of Canada, since such there must be, shall be uniform. For this reason, as well as for others, the establishing of Canadian divorce courts which will take the whole business out of the hands of Parliament and treat it in a judicial way should be supported.

RUSSIAN PEASANTS CALL FOR PEACE IN VAIN

Russian peasants are the people who hope for peace, and hope in vain! The peace conference about which you must have heard so much, is now trying to help Russia out by gaining a hard time of it with the Bolshevists and the Reds and no food into the bargain. Everyone hopes that the Russians will soon be at peace and able to really live again.

Russia is the tragedy of the great war. You must know this vast empire, stretching between the North Sea and the Pacific Ocean. This whole nation is now reeling in misery and ruin which means that Russia is upside down.

She has the greatest family in the world. Count up the English people and for every one is a whole family of Russians.

They live in a very rich country and how rich they are in hope and faith and trust in the world! Nobody hates the Russian peasant and all he wants is to be happy in his great land. A peasant is one of the gentlest and kindest men on earth and is always hospitable and generous to a stranger. They live simple lives in their little Russian villages, driving their troikas through the snow in the winter time (a troika is a sleigh drawn by three horses, one between the shafts, and one on each side. It goes like the wind and has numbers of merry bells hanging around it)

But Russia was cursed by the czars who were the rulers of the land. Nothing has been so cruel as czardom ever. It is like a horrible fairy story. Then in the early days of the great war these millions of Russian people became thrilled with the spirit of war and did one of the most dramatic things we have ever lived to see. They smashed this czardom in three days—the most glorious, shortest and quietest revolution the world has ever known.

But somehow everything went wrong. The Russian people had not agreed among themselves about what to do with their freedom and some of them set up a tyranny as cruel as the one they had overthrown. This is known as Bolshevism.

Russia is like a house divided against itself, some wanting Bolshevism, some wish czardom was back again and all wanting neither. Of course the world, or the peace conference, has tried to do something for Russia, to bring it peace. But they failed because they tried to get it by force and the result is that Russia is now poorer than ever and starving. So now peace is going to give Russia her chance. Peace can beat war any day.

How splendid it will be to see these poor old Russian peasants clasp hands in a peaceful land!

Just about two years ago the whole English-speaking world felt a sense of personal loss when the word flashed that the great soldier, physician, poet, Col. John McCrae, had passed away while still in the prime of life. Yet, though he has passed away, he lives and will live as long as men and women read his lines; lines that were an inspiration to civilization at an hour when darkness seemed to cover the face of the earth and the enemy of humanity plunged the world into the blackness of despair.

"In Flanders Fields" proved a clarion call to a wavering, hesitating people. It pictured, as no other picture ever could, the swiftly growing rows on rows of graves, where rested, till the trumpet call should sound, the dead who died that right might live. It awakened an empire to a new life, and beat back the hosts of darkness, and established liberty, love and honor in the hearts of humankind.

The mother of that soldier, physician, poet, passed recently from Guelph to the Great Beyond. The passing of the son of her heart in the great battle against evil had cast a shadow over her life that grew deeper and deeper with the gathering years. The mother heart bore her grief with uncomplaining fortitude, for hers was a hope the grave could not hide. While sorrow was her inseparable companion, none but herself and her God knew how heavy it was to bear. The silver lining to her cloud opened, and comforted her as the world spoke of the worth of her beloved son. The world's praise was as sweet incense that lightened the burden, and she, like the Mary in Bethlehem, "pondered all these things in her heart."

Janet Simpson Eckford McCrae was a woman who lived to do good. That was her life pleasure. Her smile, a benediction to all, brought comfort and gladness to those bowed down with sorrow like unto her own. With a quiet and gentle serenity of spirit she ministered to the poor. In the holy sanctuary she bowed in supplication and adoration, as became the greatness of her spirit. She was a devoted worshipper at the shrine of truth, sturdy in the faith of her Covenanter ancestry, yet gentle and tender while the gathering years silvered her head. Mrs. McCrae was a woman who loved to serve humanity everywhere. To those in dark heathenism she loved to send a message, and to those near at hand no less kind. A woman of rare talent and virtues, she was one who will never be forgotten. Her illustrious son was what he was largely because of her, and Guelph is the richer for having known her as one of its best citizens.

CANADA NOT ASKED TO SEND OVER TROOPS

SIR GEORGE FOSTER DENIES RUMOR THAT CANADA WAS ASKED FOR 50,000 MEN.

Ottawa, Jan. 22.—The rumor that Canada has been asked by the Imperial Government if she could furnish 50,000 men in the event of hostilities with the Soviet Government of Russia, is officially denied. Sir George Foster, Government leader in Sir Robert Borden's absence, said the Canadian Government had not been asked to send troops to fight in the Caucasus or in any other theatre and that the matter had not been officially considered.

At the headquarters of the Militia Department it was stated that the Department was without knowledge of any inquiry from the Imperial Government as to Canada's ability to send a contingent of 50,000 men against the Bolsheviki in the event that the frontiers of any part of the Empire should become endangered.

JEWELS AND THE WAR.

Many Valuable Gems Were Lost and Stolen.

Never perhaps in the history of the world have there been so many gems "loose" as there are in the present day. The treasures of the Serbian kings, the royal treasures of Russia, the jewels of private individuals whose homes were invaded—are today in the hands of unknown persons in various parts of the world. Few of the precious jewels of the European monarchs have appeared on the market.

Already the police of foreign countries are troubled with reports of frauds connected with these jewels. The impostor who professes to have a part of the "loose" loot is already offering to sell the treasures at a "ridiculously low price" if the purchaser will advance a certain sum "as evidence of good faith." And the police of foreign countries are surprised at the number of people who are caught in the little fraudulent game. The same fraud was practiced when treasures were reported lost in the French Revolution, in the Peninsular War, and in the Franco-Prussian War of 1871.

While the political pot boils in Russia, with such intensity that an outsider takes his life in his own hands to enter the country, treasure seekers or their agents are already browsing around seeking the precious things that may come cheap among the sackers of the royal treasure houses. Whispers have spread of the stealthy passing of the wondrous gems concealed in filthy rags in the vile drinking dens of the criminal quarters of Petrograd. The agents of jewel seekers who have ventured into these criminal haunts for jewels stolen from the treasure houses of Russia are many. Decrees of death against the thieves have failed to restore the treasures.

The contents of the Kremlin, the greatest Russian royal treasure house, were alone estimated to be worth more than one hundred million dollars. In it were the thrones of the past emperors, the royal crowns, the collection of hundreds of years of Russia's barbaric splendor.

In the Winter Palace, the Petrograd residence of the court, were the crowns of the Czar and Czarina, and the renowned room full of diamond, emerald and ruby ornaments. The royal residence outside of Petrograd, Tsarskoe Selo, with its famous lapis lazuli room, of which the floor was ebony inlaid with mother-of-pearl, was a third treasure house despoiled by the pillagers.

And the Serbian monarch's jewels—treasure that no common eyes had even looked upon—were looted as the invaders beat back the Serbian army late in 1916. In a secret vault within the grim walls of the ancient monastery of Vesoki Dechani, far up in a mountain gorge, the jewels had remained hidden as they accumulated through the ages. The monastery had been guarded by a superstitious reverence, where the holy dead would take vengeance against anyone daring to raise a predatory hand against it.

The royal jewels of Germany—their owners better able to take precautionary measures against their loss—have been secretly conveyed to places of security in Holland and Switzerland, and the jewels of the Hapsburgs are understood to have been preserved and in the hands of the Government that has superseded the old regime.

The Belgian and French Governments have received claims amounting to millions of pounds from private persons, pleading the loss of jewels during the German invasion and seeking compensation from the enemy, into whose hands they are supposed to have fallen. A huge amount of jewelery was buried in secret hiding places, many of which, it appears, have been rifled.

A Gay Dog.

"The late Dr. Anna Howard Shaw," says an exchange, "possessed a good vein of humor. A young relative of hers—we'll call him George—came from the country once and got a job in a Philadelphia store. George did not make much money, but he soon developed the society bug. He read all the society news he could get hold of, and talked in a big way to the doctor, about his friends in Spruce and Pine streets—yes, and even in Rittenhouse Square. Poor George was always hard up, and one evening his funds were so low that he fed in the park on a couple of pretzels and a hard-boiled egg. In the middle of this repast, his aunt, Dr. Anna, passed in a carriage. George averted his head in shame; he hoped he wouldn't be seen; but the doctor called to him merrily: 'Hello, George! Dining out again, are you, you gay young dog!'"

Using More Coffee.

Whether prohibition has or has not increased the use of coffee, it is at least a fact that the people of the United States are now consuming more coffee than has been their custom and paying far greater sums for it than ever before. A statement by the National City Bank of New York shows that the quantity of coffee brought into the United States in the calendar year 1919 was greater than ever before, notwithstanding the fact that the cost is about three times as much a pound as formerly. The imports for the ten months ending with October approximate 1,140,000,000 pounds, against 940,000,000 pounds in the same months of last year, and 1,122,000,000 pounds in the corresponding months of 1917, the former high record years in importation.

A Cattle Census.

In order to determine just what protective measures should be taken to preserve cattle in Argentina, a new cattle census will be taken. COLD FEET IN ADVERTISING

It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.

Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.

National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.

Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms? Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.

EX-MAYOR GEORGE H. DUNCAN ELECTED CHAIRMAN OF LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH

Board Will Communicate With Utilities Commission Regarding the Contamination of Water by Campers Along the River

At the meeting of the local Board of Health last night, ex-Mayor G. H. Duncan was elected chairman for the year. His past faithful service on the board had so impressed its members that they showed their appreciation by choosing him to occupy the chair for the coming year.

A resolution was passed that the Utilities Commission be communicated with and that their attention be called to the contamination of the Otonabee River by campers along the shore.

These campers, so it was said, create unsanitary and filthy condition in the wate r supply, it was said, and endanger the health of the city. It was thought the Utilities Commission might give attention to this matter and prevent further cause for complaint.

Local scavengers were given permission to carry on their work in the daytime until the end of February.

NO ALLIED TROOP TO GO TO THE CAUCASUS

SUPREME COUNCIL DECIDES TO HELP ONLY IN MATERIAL AND SUPPLIES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 23.— The recent announcement of the imminent dispatch of an extensive military expedition to the Caucasus was an enormous deduction caused by the fact that the British had given notice of their inability to furnish their quota of troops for the plebiscite areas, according to a statement fro mthe Foreign Office today.

The fact is, it is pointed out, the Supreme Council has specially rejected propositions to send even small contingents of troops to help the Georgians and Azerbaijans and has decided to confine its aid to material and supplies.

THE J. C. TURNBULL
Company, Limited.

ONE CENTURY OF

ner-Worth, the De Laval Co., the Heary Hope Co., and the Vermont Marble Company, and since the war closed, we have added to our industries, the Western Clock Co., the Nashua Gummed & Coated Paper Co., the Alladin Mfg. Co. and the Albion Knitting Company.

During the past one hundred years, there has been established in Peterborough, in the neighborhood of 80 manufacturing plants. The majority of them are still doing business under their original names or having become amalgamated with other companies have grown into greater industries.

Pioneers With Foresight.

Looking over the hundred years of progress we note, in the first place, that the men who located the site of Peterborough must have had clear foresight. The different manufacturing establishments in the first 25 years, such as the Peter Hamilton Company, were responsible for the development of the agricultural interests, the saw mills for the development of the lumber industry and the flour mills for the development of agriculture and the city of Peterborough. During the next 25 years we note that the Wm. Hamilton Mfg. Co. were responsible, with their saw mill and mining machinery, for this industry all over Canada. The raceway was responsible for the first development of power in this city.

The Present Year.

In the year 1920, after reviewing briefly the industrial development of Peterborough for the past 100 years, I have come to the conclusion that industry and business, to be successful, must be brought about by clear thinking and proper planning, with an honest definite purpose in view and with a will to carry it out.

Now the war is over, we enter on a new era of conditions, called a new democracy, which means that the fundamental principles of civilization, in a free people, must be controlled in the individual, in the corporation and in the nation.

Labor Situation.

While the war is over it does not mean that we can go back to pre-war conditions. The business and industrial situation today, in this country, and in fact all over the world, bristles with uncertainties. Take the Labor situation interesting and baffling, sometimes full of danger, sometimes full of hope, it is always with us. To play our part wisely and well, we must all work, and if fewer hours more intensely. Capital in places had the large end of the profits and the unrest today with Labor is a natural condition, brought about by past conditions and the part Labor played in the great war. They are not content to be simply a cog in the wheel of industry. What could be better for the nation than a high percentage of ambitious workmen. If they were not different today I would be sorry for the nation, and if progress is to be made we must be willing to divide a fair share of the profits, and give a chance to the brains of Labor to co-operate and solve the many problems of the reconstruction of our nation. I am confident that the advent of the workman on a board of directors, when he learns his vocation as a director, and not before, would be the means of achieving the greatest progress for the greatest industrial concern that could be imagined.

When the time comes when the workingman can share the responsibility with the directors, and when he has learned the lesson that by increased production and by a less cost he can beat competition and increase the wages and profits of our industries then, and then only, will our industrial plants of Peterborough be second to none. Permanent prosperity can only come when the world's workers, which include employers and employees, jointly and harmoniously stand together for the best and highest production of those things which the world needs.

Same in Agriculture.

In agriculture the same conditions apply as that in Labor. Before the war the farmer did not receive his share of the profits for his industry and capital invested, and today we find they, too, are not satisfied to be simply a cog in the wheel of production, and they are asserting themselves, as never before and, in fact, in our Province today, have control of the "Ship of State." The farmer taking his share of the responsibility in governing our Province, will bring to the front more than anything else, the great industry of agriculture.

Take their proposed policy of good roads and demonstration farms. I have been convinced for the past ten years, in fact the first move I ever made in the Legislature was to advocate demonstration farms, and I have in each succeeding year, done all in my power to convince the Government of the necessity of having these farms. The Agricultural College and the Experimental Farm are doing good work as educational institutions, but there demonstration farms must be operated on a profit and loss basis, on such a scale that all farmers may be able to imitate, so that eventually they will be recognized as manufacturing plants second to none in our cities.

I hope to see the day when the farmer of this Province will be able to go before any board and give the exact cost of producing the various products which he has to sell, then and then only will the consumer be educated to the real value of farm products and the farmer to business methods of farming.

Must Export More.

Now, to come to the exporting of our manufactured goods. Some one has said we should cease exporting to keep prices down, we cannot do this, we must export and export more, if we hope to bring about an even balance of trade and bring down the high rate of exchange, which I am free to admit, is serious and to this I have given a lot of thought. There is a bright side to this, like everything else, and we should take advantage of it at the present time and that is to quote our goods in Canadian dollars value for this reason: Demand sterling in Toronto is worth $4.11 and in New York $3.79, a difference of 32 cents in our favor, and this applies to all the foreign countries, on large exports from Canada it means an enormous advantage to the Canadian exporter, over our neighbors to the south.

Interests Are Mutual.

Suming up the situation, political, industrial, agricultural and labor, we see how their interests are all mutual and dove-tailed together, so that any advance made effects the whole. I am one who can see, difficult though it may seem, with the responsibility placed on the new shoulders, a real advance. We will find that out of all the chaos the men of sober thought will prevail and the two great factors, so long held dormant—agriculture and labor—will come into their own. We see it every day in the press, one company putting on group insurance, another giving a bonus to its employees.

A better feeling prevailing between employer and employees, and until we realize that our civilization is based on co-operation for the good of all, centred in the individual in the corporation and in the nation, then and then only can we hope to build up Peterborough as it should be, a great industrial centre, with a great agricultural backing, and this must be done by clear thinking and proper planning.

CAPT. FRASER TO LEAD MACHINE GUN COMPANY

LOCAL BRANCH OF FOURTH CANADIAN BRIGADE GETS UNDER WAY

Good progress was made with the Peterborough company of the 4th. Canadian Machine Gun Brigade at the meeting held in the Empress Hotel last night.

Capt. L. Fraser, M. C., will be in command with Capt. J. H. Cobb, M. C., Lieuts. R. Perry and G. Perks as battery commanders. The applications of these gentlemen were handed in to Capt. J. Edwards, M. C., last night. They will be forwarded to headquarters immediately for confirmation.

The names of three officers as section connamders were also secured. It is hoped to complete the establishment of officers by Friday night. The adjutant is particularly keen on this being done not only in the interest of the brigade but in the interest of the officer, whose seniority is concerned.

The organization of the signalling section is complete. It will be in charge of Sergt. Hardwick.

Sergt.Major R. Bethune of the company and Sergt. R. Muir, quarter master sergeant.

All the officers and non-commissioned officers will be returned men. It is expected that a goodly portion of the men will also have had overseas experience. In nocase has machine gun experience been insisted upon. The Company has, however, been particularly fortunate in securing manw of good machine gun training and experience.

A goodly proportion of men have already signified their intention of joining, and when the company meets on Friday night at 8 p.m. in the armouries for its first parade, it is expected it will be nearly if not actually up to strength.

The officers are particularly anxious to secure the keen and interested young man who was, at the time, too young to volunteer during the war.

Regular parade will be on Monday and Friday nights unless notification is given to the contrary.

In 1918 he was appointed and chosen chairman of the Board of License Commissioners. He has been an active worker in practically every war charity, and during the past ten years has been honored for his work in the Anglican Church.

HERE I AM AGAIN.

The other day a man from Havelock came into the office and said he had got some of Gallagher's Blood Purifier and Cough Syrup last fall, and it was the best medicine he had ever used, so hunted us up to get some more. He bought a 50-cent bottle of Cough Syrup and two 75-cent bottles of Kidney Remedy, and was going to get the Havelock merchant to stock the medicines. One of our prominent city druggists was in the office at the time and can corroborate what I say.

BISHOP LUCAS OF MACKENZIE RIVER TELLS OF WORK IN THAT DISTRICT

Very Interesting Address on Christianizing of the Indians and the Eskimos in That Far Away Corner of the Dominion

At the meeting held in St. John's Church last night in connection with the Anglican Forward Movement Bishop Lucas of the Mackenzie River diocese, gave a very interesting address on work being done there among the Indians and the Eskimos.

The diocese extends from Lake Athabaska on the south in a northwesterly direction for 1,500 miles to the Arctic Ocean, along the Arctic Ocean, 1,000 miles to Coronation Gulf and then back to Lake Athabaska, completed a funned shaped territory. And in this largest docese of the world are only 6,000 people.

Sixty years ago all the people in this country were "a people sitting in darkness and in the shadow of death. It is truly a land of darkness, he said. The missionaries working up there along the Arctic coast now are worging in total darkness, and will continue to do so for ten weeks.

Since the establishment of a mission on the Mackenzie River in 1861, 2,300 people have been baptized in it. "The service of the missionary who started that work was not wasted," declared the Bishop.

And now 90 per cent of the Indians of that territory can and do read the Holy Bible in their own language every day of their lives. They carry it with them whereever they go in winter and in summer. The intense religiousness of these Indians is noticed by all travellers passing through that country. God's day is strictly honored and the house of and sacrament of the Lord are loved and appreciated.

The missionaries worked for seventeen years among the Eskimos before any results of their toil were perceived. Finally some were baptized into the Christian Church and they immediately, considering themselves workers for Christ, went out among their people proclaiming the new and time religion. The next year 112 were brought into the kingdom and in 1918,500 Eskimos had been baptized into the Church of Christ.

The Eskimos were a degraded and dirty race. Now, through the influence of the Church, they are clean and neat.

Four hundred and fifty of the five hundred can read and write and their power of memory is particularly great. They take great pleasure memorizing the Scriptures and can do it as fast as it can be translated into their language.

The relogion of the Eskimo is a very happy one shown in the constant joyful expressions of their countenances. And the Eskimos have learned to give until it means sacrifice and yet give cheerfully. And now as these Eskimos, along the shore of the Arctic Ocean, gather in their huts of snow and ice in a temperature of zero or colder, God's name will be remembered, prayers will be rendered and hymns sung in His name..

"The Forward Movement will fail in one important word if it does not lead young men and women to devote themselves wholly to God's service," declared the Bishop, as he closed his address with an appeal for workers in the Christian Church everywhere.

Feburary Delineator Now on Sale at Pattern Counter

The Semi-Annual Lonely Sale of Men's Clothing

"I Purchased This Suit A Year Ago and It Is Worth A Great Deal More To-day"

That was the remark a man made the other day when he came to purchase more clothing at this half yearly sale of ours. The same will be true next year, for we see no promise of reduction in the cost of manufacturing clothing.

There are many Suits and Overcoats here right now that are marked down and should be marked up, for their value is greater, but we prefer to clear our stock of broken lines after a season of busy selling. It will be well to remind you that they are fashionable garments from this season's stock.

CITY HALL EMPLOYES ASK FOR MINIMUM

BEGINNER TO GET $5 A DAY IF SCHEDULE GOES THROUGH COUNCIL

Toronto, Jan. 23.—The City Hall Employees Association, which represents the inside civic service, and which has signed up 500 members in a few weeks has prepared a resolution for presentation to the heads of departments, who are holding meetings nowadays with a view to recommending the year's salary increases to the Board of Control. The gist of the association's requests is as follows:

That the high cost of living allowance of $3.00 per week granted last year, and expiring in August of 1920, become a permanent addition to each employee's salary.

That there be a further augmentation of $6 per week for each civic employee.

That still further increases be granted to those whose special merit is thought deserving of special recognition by heads of departments.

That where an employee is promoted, he should get the salary of his predecessor in the new position.

The effect of the first two suggestions would be to raise the present minimum salary of $21 per week plus $3 per week bonus ($24 in all) to $30 per week or $5 per day. The employees say that this minimum salary is justified by present cost of living.

EXAMPLE OF THE LIFE OF A MOVING STAR

VERY BUSY TIME IS DAILY WORK OF MISS ALICE BRADY

All ye young maidens, who aspire to be moving picture stars, listen well to this tale of a star and after having pursued each word very carefully and weighed them in the balance to see what is wanting, be wise and hearken ye to the call of the dishpan or your books.

If you are fully resolved that no power on this earth can prevent you from becoming a screen satellite, you should start in training now. No hustle or bustle should be too much for you—no noise too loud for you—no work too hard for you and no food to bad for you. That is not your idea of a star's life, is it? But your ideas are not correct. A star's life is one madheterogenous whirl of color and motion.

Alice Brady, Select's charming young star, can well be cited as an example of what the life of a star is. The following is a brief resume of how Miss Brady occupied one twenty-four hour day— one of the days when she was filming her latest Select Picture, "Marie Ltd.," which will be shown on Monday at the Empire Theatre.

Miss Brady rose at seven o'clock She had breakfast at eight o'clock and was at the studio ready to begin work at nine. She worked until twelve when she left the studio and went to the hairdresser's to get a wig for her next picture. From half past twelve till one, Miss Brady took a dancing lesson. (She was learning a new dance which she will do in her next Select Picture.) At one o'clock she went to the modiste's. At half past one, she was back at the studio ready to continue her work. Her maid gave her a sandwich and a cup of coffee, which she ate while she was changing her costume, That was her lunch.

At five o'clock Miss Brady left the studio and went to take a singing lesson. At half past five she took a French lesson and at six o'clock she had dinner. From half past six to half past seven, Miss Brady dictated letters to her secretary, looked over her huge pile of mail for the day and received about one dozen phone calls. At half past seven she left for the theatre where she appears every night and three matinees a week in her stage play, "Forever After." After the theatre, she was invited out for supper, which invitation she accepted. At half past two she was in bed with nothing to do until seven o'clock the next morning.

That's the life of one of the screen's biggest stars. Each day is a repetition of the day before, with the exception of a slight change here and there. Instead of the modiste it may be the milliner and instead of the hairdresser it may be the photographer. A mad dive from one thing to another, harly ever getting time to think for yourself. Is it any wonder the stars acquire temperament?

: : AT THE GRAND : :

The vaudeville bill at the Grand yesterday contained something a little out of the ordinary in Celina's Circus. This act is composed of a number of ponies, dogs and monkeys and their turn is one which shows the results which may be obtained for training animals. All the kiddies should see this act.

Manuel Romaine, Powers and Delmere, the midnight marauders, present a very clever act and do some splendid singing.

Al. Lester & Co in their skit "I'll Make a Note of It," score a decided hit. Their act is one continuous stream of wit and humor.

The feature film is entitled "A Man's Desire" and stars Lew Stone and Jane Novack. This picture is well worth seeing. A Sennett comedy entitled "A Bad Exchange" and the Pictorial Life Film completes a really worth while programme, which will be repeated for the last time tonight.

Tomorrow afternon and evening the great comedy success "Friendly Enemies" will be seen at the local theatre.

Cat-tail as Food.

Prof. P. W. Claassen, of Cornell University, recently called attention to a hitherto neglected source of food, viz., the common cat-tail of our marshes, says the Scientific American. It appears that the Indians made flour from the root stalks of the cat-tail, but for some reason white men did not adopt this item of the Indian dietary as they did maize and potatoes. There are thousands of acres of cat-tail marshes in the United States. Prof. Claassen finds that an acre of cat-tails yield a total dry weight of rhizomes amounting to about 10,800 pounds. From this it is possible to obtain 5,500 pounds of flour. The flour is found on analysis to contain approximately the same amount of protein as rice and corn flours, but the ash content approximates that found in potato, cassava and dasheen flours. Cat-tail flour has proved very satisfactory as a part substitute for wheat flour in baking, and a complete substitute for cornstarch in puddings.

Hungarian Weddings.

Hungarian wedding celebrations are generally of a very lively character, with much feasting and dancing and frequently last two or three days. The most interesting feature of the festivities is the "cracking of the plate" when the men throw silver in handfuls on the plate for the privilege of dancing with the bride. The contest becomes quite spirited, and finally the plate is smashed to fragments with the silver hurled at it by the contestants. Oftentimes as much as $50 is obtained in this way by the bride for the furnishing of a home. The custom is followed by Hungarians in different parts of Canada.

Value of a Dollar.

A kindly adviser says: "Learn the value of a dollar." Nothing is easier than that. All you have to do is to go out, taking a dollar with you, and try to buy something.

Hindu Children Mechanics.

Hindu children are remarkable for their precocity. Many of them are skilful workmen at an age when the children of other nations are learning the alphabet. A boy of seven may be a skillful wood carver, while some of the handsomest rugs are woven by children not yet in their teens.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT.

Editor Review: It has been my humble wish to do what I could to aid the churches in their mighty effort to throw off materialism so prominently set forth at present in many ways. As a contribution to this determined attempt to rescue us from the new temptation, I ask you to publish the following for one week as an advertisement: "These five separate communions are of one mind as to their belief in God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth, and in Jesus Christ His Son our Lord. They now declare to their respective constituencies and also unitedly to the Canadian people that the Only Effective Method of Making Good Citizens is by urging men to a more faithful practice of Christianity by inculcating personal faith in Jesus Christ. They insist that there is no other dependable way of correcting evil tendencies in individual and national life. Signed by the United National Campaign, representing the simultaneous but independent Forward Movement of the Anglican, Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian Communions of Canada."

J. H. BURNHAM.

St. Ambrose the Fearless

ST. AMBROSE, one of the most able, fearless and transparent men that ever graced episcopal authority, was the John Knox of the early church. This man who dared openly to rebuke his sovereign for his sins and heresies has had few successors in any age. Chrysostom, Luther and Knox come readily to the mind, but Ambrose stands almost unique in this, that he not only reproved, but he punished, and brought the greatest emperor since Constantine "to the stool of penitence." He is paralleled only by Hildebrand and Becket.

Ambrose, a noble youth of the Roman Empire, had been appointed governor of Milan at the age of 34 and that very year, A. D. 374, an event occurred that changed the whole current of his life. Archbishop Auxentius died and the See of Milan became vacant. It was an age of factions, heresies and tumults and the sudden death threw the whole city into the wildest excitement. The emperor wisely declined to interfere with the election. Rival parties could not agree on a candidate. A tumult arose. Ambrose had at that time little interest in the issue except to keep order and prevent bloodshed. It was for this purpose that he went to the cathedral church, where the election was going on. His appearance produced a momentary calm, when a little child cried out, "Let Ambrose, our governor, be our bishop." That voice, regarded as a voice from heaven, was at once caught up as the slogan of the distraught and deadlocked assembly. The people caught the words and shouted with great enthusiasm. "Yes. Let Ambrose, our governor, be our bishop."

The event was an index of the times and shows the enormous strides the church had made as one of the greatest institutions of power when it is recalled that Constantine had seen the blazing cross only sixty years ago. It was thought a greater honor to be a bishop than a governor.

That Ambrose was a layman and not even baptized at that time seemed to be no bar to the office. The history of the times is eloquent of the fact that he was the ablest man for the post to be found in Italy.

Selected, not because of his learning or eloquence, but because he was just and virtuous, he nevertheless became eminent as a theologian and was one of the most eloquent defenders of the early faith. Charity allied with poverty was the great test of practical Christianity in those days, and Ambrose met it by scattering his princely fortune among the poor.

But it was in the Arian controversy which involved the divinity of Christ and raged for a hundred years, that he achieved undying fame. It is said of him "that he contributed more than any man who preceded him to raise the power of the bishop as one of the controlling agencies of societies for more than a thousand years.

The Empress Faustina was an open advocate of this sect and her son, Valentinian, a sympathizer and patron. Ambrose did not shun the conflict and danger. Into this struggle between principles and principalities he threw himself with reckless abandon; he, a defenceless priest, defied a powerful emperor with an army at his back. He successfully resisted Caesar on his own ground and resisted him too, not as a martyr, but as a conqueror. He made the bold claim that in all spiritual matters emperors were subordinate to bishops, not bishops to emperors.

And what was the response of the empress, who ruled in the name of her son? The haughty and insolent priest should be exiled, should be imprisoned, should die. But he seeks the shelter of his church and prays to Almighty God. His friends in large numbers resolve to stay with him—die with him if need be. The soldiers surround the spacious basilica in battle array, but dare not enter. Why? Because the church had become a sacred place and "they were afraid of the wrath of God more than the wrath of Faustina of Valentinian." What a striking example of the power of ideas: They lay siege to the place, however, to starve him out or frighten him into surrender. Then it was that the resources of this wonderful man appeared. Day after day, night after night, he stuck to his post. He preached and the people prayed and sang Psalms. History tells us that in that long protracted meeting was instituted the beautiful antiphonal chant of Ambrose which was sung in all the churches and cathedrals of Europe, for over a thousand years.

At last there were signs of rebellion among the soldiers. They hated the job to begin with and were tired and disgusted. Moreover, a new spiritual power was felt even among them. Finally Ambrose conquered, or it would be more proper to say the ideas of Ambrose conquered. But the empress was a woman and if we are to believe the poet "Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned." She renewed the attack again and again and on each succeeding occasion she met a more and more humiliating defeat. At length fearing absolute mutiny among the soldiers the court became alarmed; but it was not until the officers of the palace sided with the bishop that the crestfallen and defeated monarch said in words of bitterness: "I perceive that I am only the shadow of an emperor, to whom you dare dictate my religious beliefs."

Other Roles.

Ham—He was a wise poet who remarked that in this world a man must be either anvil or hammer.

Clam—Oh, I don't know! It seems that most of them are merely bellows.

AN ARABIC DICTIONARY.

Ponderous Volume Comes From the "Golden Age."

The ponderous dictionaries of Europe, even the famous many volumed etymological index of Larousse, which is the monumental work of all modern tongues, are more than surpassed by the Arabic dictionaries of 500 years ago, which are still the great authority for students in that language.

The Arabic dictionary most used by scholars who are familiar with no other language is in twenty quarto volumes and weighs close to 100 pounds. There is a fifty pound ten volume abridgement of it, presumably for use at home. This and practically all the Arabic dictionaries were made in the time of the great Haroun-al-Raschid.

The Islamic Empire is credited by Moslems with two great eras. The first was that of conquest, when the only history was written with the sword. Then came centuries of Mohammedan domination, when the Moslems peacefully held the empires they had conquered in Asia and in the Iberian Peninsula. During these art and literature flourished and the Arabic dictionary was born. In Arabic the flower of this period was in the golden time of Calif Harun-al-Raschid.

Each of the words that have been familiar in the daily life of the nomad Arabs for centuries has an enormous number of synonyms. The lion, for example, was feared by villagers and hunted not only for sport but as a matter of necessity. Therefore in the Arabic dictionary the lion has more than a hundred different names. The camel was the sole mean of transportation across the thirsty deserts and is characterized in 122 different ways. But above all the horse and the sword were the two great standbys of the Arab. There are more than 200 different words that convey ideas of "horse" and "sword." All other familiar words, such as tent, flocks, herds, water, woman, sun and air, have long lists of synonyms that are interchangeable and in constant use. This affords some slight explanation why Arabic dictionaries are of so large a size.

Arabic, so the Arabs say, was the language of the Babylonians, and it is also contended by them that it was the tongue in which Abraham spoke.

China's New Language.

Chu Yin Tzu-Mu, as it is called, is not the first attempt to give China a rational writing. To understand it, one must remember that Chinese is entirely made up of monosyllables. There are only 420 monosyllables in the Pekinese official dialect. The number of words in the Imperial Dictionary of K'ang Hai, two centuries old, but still the standard, is 44,449. Each monosyllable on the average has 105 meanings, says a writer in Asia Magazine. These are distinguished in two ways: First, by the slight differences of pronunciation, and, second, by the association of one word with the word next to it. It must be remembered that each of these 105 variations of the same monosyllable is an entirely distinct word to the Chinese, and each has an ideograph which bears no suggestion of the 104. It is easy to see why Romanization failed. In a little dictionary which the missionaries tried to use were 165 characters Romanized as "chi" and 178 as "i" (pronounced like English "e").

Chu Yin Tzu-Mu uses 39 symbols, 24 initials, 12 finals and three medials or connecting sounds. These do not even remotely suggest Roman characters, but they represent all the sounds of what is to be the new national language. The new national language was founded on the so-called Mandarin. This was already spoken in fifteen out of the eighteen provinces, for the southern coast provinces have a quite different speech. But the pronunciation of Mandarin varied so much that natives of different provinces often were unable to understand each other. To overcome this difficulty a standardized pronounciation was adopted. The pronunciation was fixed for about 800 words, and all the rest grouped themselves naturally around these.

Then in the fall of 1918 a special congress of representatives of all the provinces, called by the National Ministry of Education, officially adopted Chi Yen Tzu-Mu as the written language of China. A Government decree to this effect was promulgated November 23, 1918.

Lynching In U. S.

Eighty-two persons were lynched in the United States during 1919, an increase of 18 over 1918, the Department of Record and Research of Tuskegee University announced through its annual report. Seventy-five of those who met death at the hands of mobs were negroes and seven were whites. One negro woman was included in the list. Seven persons were burned to death and nine were killed and their bodies afterward burned. Nineteen were charged with murder, all of the whites having been charged with this crime; four each for abetting riots, shooting officers of the law, killing officers of the law otherwise, and insulting women, and three because of "remarks about the Chicago riots." Seventy-seven of the lynchings occurred in the south and five in the north and west.

Protecting Carrier Pigeons.

An ingenious contrivance consisting of a framework of bamboo tubes is fastened to the bodies of carrier-pigeons in China. During the flight of the birds the air passing through the tubes produces a shrill whistling sound which frightens birds of prey and keeps them at a distance.

Greeks Go Home.

Approximately 12,000 Greeks have returned to their native land from this continent since last June. Since the first of last year more than $25,000,000 in postal orders has been remitted to Greece, in addition to the money carried by returning Greeks in the form of drafts and bank notes.

Auto merchants on Broadway, New York, are alarmed over the increasing rentals on Automobile Row, and many of smaller concerns will be forced to move before May 1.

FACTS ABOUT SNAKES

DEADLY POISON OF COBRA AND RATTLER.

Authorities Say That Snakes Cannot Fascinate Their Victims as Many People Believe—There Are Other Myths Regarding Reptiles Which Have No Basis in Fact, Declare Naturalists.

IT appears that snakes change their skins several times a year before reaching the adult state. The main reason why snakes cast their skins is to provide for increased growth. The skin of a snake does not grow with the growth of the body, as is the case with warm-blooded creatures. So when it begins to get too tight it is discarded.

The hissing of a snake is caused by the long sac-like lung being inflated with air, which is forcibly expelled through the glottis and nostrils. The puff adder makes the loudest and most prolonged hiss of any snake. When alarmed snakes hiss with the object of frightening off their enemies. If snakes were not able to make their presence known they would be frequently trodden upon and injured by the various creatures of veldt, forest and mountain.

An animal will often manifest the wildest alarm at the sight of a snake, or on hearing one hiss, although it has never before come in contact with one of these reptiles. This power of transmitting experiences is a wonderful provision of nature, for if every living creature had to learn entirely by its personal experience to avoid its enemies and ascertain what kinds of food were wholesome or the reverse a great number of species would rapidly become extinct.

Statements with reference to the length of reptiles, especially the African python, are conflicting. One expert, who has examined many, states that the longest was twenty feet. The average length he puts down as about sixteen feet, the circumference at the thickest part being about eighteen inches. Pythons are very fond of water, and often lie along the branches of trees with their eyes fixed upon the ground below.

If something good to eat comes along the snake simply drops on it, the end of the tail gripping tight to the branch. Pythons are not venomous, and the tales about their swallowing people have never been thoroughly authenticated. Pythons will show fight when wounded or cornered; at these times it is distinctly dangerous for a man if alone to tackle them.

Those who have had much experience with snakes, and have had it their business to observe carefully their habits and ways, both in their natural condition in the wild state and in captivity, state that in no instance have they known a snake to fascinate an animal in the manner in which it is alleged to do. One authority speaks of two species many a time in trees surrounded by a crowd of fluttering, chattering, excited birds. But the birds were not, he says, fascinated by the snake; they were endeavoring to intimidate it in order to frighten it from their haunts.

The snake's legs have been a source of myths and mysterious tales since ancient times. There is an old story, which some persons still believe, that if one throws a snake into a fire it will show its legs! This story is, of course, a pure myth, for the very good reason that snakes possess no legs. Strictly speaking, they walk on their ribs.

These ribs are jointed at the backbone and extend down over each side of the snake's body. The ends are connected with plates on the under side of the snake. These plates have projecting edges, which take hold of the surface or objects beneath the reptile. When the snake moves his ribs, therefore, he can move forward just as readily and as swiftly as though he had one thousand legs.

Perhaps you have tried the experiment of putting a snake on a smooth plate of glass and watching its vain attempts to run. The reason the snake cannot move in this case is because the projecting edges of these plates can find nothing to take hold of on the smooth surface of the glass.

It is said that about half a drop of Indian cobra venom is sufficient to kill a man. That means that a full-sized cobra would be able to eject enough venom at a single full and complete bite to kill about twenty persons. The Indian cobra yields as many as twenty drops, and there is on record one specimen that gave as many as twenty-eight drops.

The deadly power of snake poison has been shown in some curious ways. Of these perhaps none is more extraordinary than that of the Chinaman who while gathering grapes in the vineyard of a Californian was bitten by a rattler.

The unfortunate man was immediately given the usual remedies, and as an additional measure his injured arm was placed in a bath filled with strong native brandy, the expectation being that the spirit would aid in dissolving the poison from the wound. Nevertheless, in a short time the man died.

His employer, who had held the man's arm in the brandy had a tiny scratch upon his skin, yet he was poisoned, and for a long time was dreadfully ill. He finally recovered, but only after much suffering. Only a tiny part of the poison could have become dissolved by the four gallons of brandy, yet it was apparently enough to inoculate the owner to a dangerous extent.

One authority on snakes has declared that the venom of the rattler will affect even vegetables. Having inoculated various varieties with a point of a lancet, he found them the next day withered and dead, looking as if they had been struck by lightning.

WORLD'S CHAMPION RACING EVENT

WILL BE HELD IN CHRISTIANIA SOON BETWEEN AMERICAN AND NORWEGIAN.

Bobby McLean, the world's skating champion, is on his way to Christiania, where he will compete against Oskar Mathieson, the European champion. This is the first of a record number of foreign sport excursions which will take place in 1920

The American champion will arrive in Norway about Jan. 28 and will have only about ~~ten days~~ in which to prepare himself for his foreign rival.

The race will consist of either seven or nine events at distances ranging from 200 to 10,000 metres, and the winner of the majority of these contests will be the undisputed world's champion of professional ice skaters. The racing will continue over a period of from two to three days, and will be held on the quartermile track of the Christiania Ice Skating Club at what is known as Franges Rink. The rink is an open air stadium which will seat close to 30,000 spectators, and, as the admission fee will be equivalent to about $1, the gate receipts are likely to establish a record for such a contest. The club, which is an amateur organisation of high social standing, refused to participate in the arrangements for the races, although perfectly willing to donate the use of the rink for the occasion without remuneration.

The arrangements were left entirely in the hands of Mathieson, and the later soon discovered that he could not train properly and also promote the affair. As a result he requested that an American promoter and publicity man be sent over to take charge of arrangements. The later sailed several weeks ago with thousands of foreign posters printed in this country, and in all probability by this time Norway is getting an idea of American publicity methods and appears much like a country town here on the eve of the annual visit of the circus.

McLean has the advantage of youth, for he is twenty-five years old, while Mathieson is thirty-two. The latter, however, has the longer stroke when skating at top speed, for his stride measures forty feet to McLean's thirty-six.

Mathieson was over here a couple of years ago and McLean defeated him in fifteen out of sixteen races.

The Norwegian has always claimed that the small tracks in this country hampered his long stride and that he could do much faster work on the larger courses of his city. His claim is borne out to some extent by the records, which show records for the following distances: Five hundred metres, 43 2-5 seconds; 1,0000, 1 minute 31 4-5 seconds; 1,500, 2 minutes 17 seconds; 5,000, 8 minutes, 36 3-10 seconds; 10,000, 17 minutes 22 3-5 seconds.

Following the races at Christiania McLean will give a series of exhibitions in Sweden, Denmark, Switzerland and England, and will challenge all comets in those countries if he is successful in defeating Mathieson.

CARPENTIER WILL VISIT AMERICA

CONTRACT WILL NOT PREVENT HIM FROM BEING SEEN IN ACTION

New York, Jan. 23.—Private advices from France indicate that Georges Carpentier, European heavyweight champion, will arrive in this country about the middle of February. The French pugilist, challenger for the world's title now held by Jack Dempsey, will come to the United States to fulfill a contract entirely outside his ring activities, but there is understood to be no obligation in this contract which would prohibit him from engaging in either exhibition or limited-round boxing contests

While Carpentier's manager, Descamps, refuses to divulge the exact conditions embodied in the contract, various promoters appear to take it for granted that the French heavyweight will be permitted to engage in some form of restricted ring activity, and there is certain to be a wild scramble for his services. In view of his early arrival it is considered unlikely that Carpentier will definitely sign for a championship bout with Dempsey, even if in a position to do so, before he reaches America.

Cable negotiations appear to be uncertain and unsatisfactory, and it is understood that the French pugilist and his manager prefer to do business directly with the promoters, who have already passed the $500,000 mark in their bids for the fight

DR. CLAWSON LECTURES ON SHAKESPEARE

Deeply interesting as well as informative was the lecture delivered last night to a large audience by Dr. W. H. Clawson, professor of English Literature in Toronto University, in the Conservatory of Music Hall, under the auspices of the Woman's Art Association.

Dr Clawson choose a subject which holds for all more less of a unique interest, "Shakespeares Theatres," and with the aid of illustrated lantern slides provided an evening's program which not only entertained but stirred the intellect to a sense of appreciation of a subject well worth serious study.

The opening number was a solo by Miss Helen MacLaren, and it can only be said that this gifted singer excelled herself on this occasion, calling forth an insistent enchore.

Mr. F. J. A. Morris, who presided at the gathering, introduced the lecturer and the subject of his address at the same time extending a wish that the evening's program would prove interesting and pleasure-giving.

Commencing, Dr. Clawson brought before his listeners, by means of the screen and descriptive passages, old London and its out-door theatres. Going back to the days when the drama was yet in its infancy, an resurrecting from the long-ago, those brilliant intellectuals, in whom the dramatic instinct first had birth, the lecturer pointed out the great difficulties with which they had to contend and the rare genius which must have been theirs.

The most prominent character in this role, Shakespeare, crowned with literary laurels, and the idol of a thinking world, was the power that thrust the legitimate stage into the haunts of elite society. So great was this man's belief in the ennobling influence, the immense power of the spoken drama, that he faced the problem of popular disfavor, and a thousand handicaps that he might bring the uncredulous multitudes to see this phase of art in a clear light. Shakespeare, he said, was a deep thinker—an idealist—an untiring student of human nature.

The fact that the stage was frowned on by respectable society was immaterial to him. He was consumed by the vision of an ideal and world labor unceasingly toward it. In order to interest the public of his time, this playwright stage-director and artist in one had to appeal to the simple instincts of human nature. His audiences were for the most part illiterate. Hence the absurdity of so-called "high-brow" entertainment. He could appeal to their sense of pity, humor, sympathy and corresponding emotions. He aimed to be simple, true to nature, and in so doing produced a work of the highest artistical merit and most compelling originality.

The Shakespearian Stage.

The Shakespearian stage was constructed on vastly different lines from those of our modern play houses. After many changes in the architectural designs each, introducing a better idea, a certain plan of lay-out was contrived and generally accepted. This stage consisted of a raised platform projecting out at some distance into the audience, curtained off at the rear with an exhit at each side. This afforded the spectators an excellent view and was accepted as beyond improvement until, the modern stage—the framed picture effect—came into vogue. However, this original idea is worthy of consideration for a great many reasons. The most important of these is that it brings the players into closer personal touch with the audience and so enhances the interest. The desirability of this mode of construction is coming to be realized, one of our most modern and up-to-date play-houses, in the city of Toronto having adopted this style of architecture.

Early Day Actors.

Dr. Clawson also touched on the great stage stars of that time, pointing out that youths always took the part of ladies, as there were no actresses in those days, at the same time showing upon the screen the photos of some of the most handsome and gifted actors of Shakespeare's time.

Once the drama gained the favor of the royal personages—once it was taken "under the royal wing," so to speak—it forged steadily forward until it became the moving force it is today.

At the conclusion of the lecture, Inspector A. Mowat moved a vote of hearty thanks to Prof. Clawson, which was seconded by Miss Rush. The gathering dispersed with the singing of 'God Save the King."

dians had increased in material, wealth, beyond all compremension, and are able, and he believed willing, to carry on in this Forward Movement until the Prince of Peace is firmly established on earth for all time to come.

Pay Own Debts

In this Forward Movement, urged the speaker, Anglicans are expected to pay a debt they owe to the first original inhabitants of Canada and owners of its resources—the Indians and Esquimos—; and in doing so, pay a debt owed also to those early missionaries, away back even to 1760, who really planted the foundations of the Church of England in Canada. "But we must do more even than that," he said; "We must pay our debt to those who come after us. We are trustees for the future, and shall be held accountable for the effect of our trust upon coming generations."

Debt to The Head

Extolling the glorious heroism of those who went forth to fight the good fight in the cause of liberty and justice, Canon Gould urged that Canadians pay their debt to all who died for them in the war. Their places here he said, are vacant, and it is fitting that the Church as a whole should, in addition to local memorials, build up a greater memorial, worthy of their memory and a credit to the Church—in the shape of living men and women going forth in their names and engaging in missionary work. As a result of the Forward Movement, it is expected to secure the equipment needed to prosecute this missionary work more effectively and more generously than in the past.

Gateways Opened

The Allies' victory, Canon Gould concluded, has thrown open the the gateways of the world to Christian influences. Today, evidence is to hand of a movement of even the Turks toward the Christian Faith, and the doctrines of Christ are very welcome to the Chinese. He felt confident that the issue of this Forward Movement is sure, and victory certain. "Win we will, for win we trust," he declared, "for to do justice in this day of peace and of Christian victory, we must emblemize our soldiers' sacrifice by the establishment of a righteous brotherhood, God has opened the gates of the world for us to win all humanity for Him."

Canon Gould was followed by Bishop Lucas, while the former here, hurried to St. John's Church to delived his advertised address.

MAY CALL ON GERMANS TO EXTRADITE EX-KAISER AND GIVE HIM UP TO ALLIES

One Premier is Said to Favor Such a Course—Conference Between British, French and Italian Representatives Will be Held Before Next Step is Taken

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 24.—Conferences between the British, French and Italian premiers will be held before the next move in the proceedings to extradite former Emperor William from Holland is decided upon, according to information given the Associated Press by the Foreign Office. Whether the next demand for the surrender of the erstwhile kaiser will be directed to The Hague or to Berlin will be the main subject to be determined by the three governments.

The next meeting of the premiers will be held in London, but the Foreign Office expressed the opinion that the question would be settled through diplomatic channels between Rome, Paris and London. It is understood that at least one premier is not averse to asking Berlin to call for the return of Count Hohenzollern to Germany and then demanding that Germany deliver him over to the Allies in accordance with Article 228 of the Versailles treaty.

The sentiment in official circles here is against such a procedure, as there is no desire that the former emperor return to Germany.

AUSTRIA IN NEW ALLIANCE

Terms of Agreement Entered Into With Czecho-Slovakia.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Budapest, Jan. 24.—The terms of an alliance between Czecho-Slovakia and the Austrian republic, according to a news agency report, provide that Austria will undertake no measures looking to an increase in her military establishment without submitting them to Czecho-Slovakia for approval, and that in the event of war between the Czechos and Hungary, Austria will supply munitions and material only to the former. In addition, it is said, Czecho-Slovakia has agreed to furnish troops to aid Austria in securing German sections of western Hungary.

TRANSPORT PACIFIC SAVES PASSENGERS

WOMEN AND CHILDREN WERE AMONG ARMY OFFICERS ON POWHATAN

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Jan. 24. — The army transport Northern Pacific, carrying 271 of the passengers of the disabled steamer Powhatan, reached port early today and is expected to dock at Hoboken during the forenoon. The Powhatan's passengers, who were removed when the transport was about two hundred miles off Halifax, after she had wallowed in the high seas for six days and nights, included eleven women and two children, in addition to army officers.

CITY WILL PROBABLY EXPROPRIATE PROPERTIES FOR NEW PARK PURPOSES

Valuations are Below Options and an Agreement with Owners Seems Improbable

It looks like expropriation proceedings by the city to acquire the properties across the river needed for park purposes.

James Ellis stands firm for $8,000 for his property, $7,500 is still being asked for the Bettes property, $6,250 for the Rapid Tool premises and $11,000 for the Riverside Park, a total of $32,750.

Jas. Finnie and J. T. O'Connell have valuated these properties for the city as follows:

Ellis property	$ 3,640
Betes property	5,340
Rapid Tool	4,780
The Park	6,000
Total	$19,760

These valuators had allowed a total of $10,70' for the buildings and $9,060 for the land, and the Council's Parks Committee last evening express a readiness to allow an additional 50 per cent. on the land valuation.

Mr. Finnie said he and Mr. O'Connell had valuated these properties as though the new bridge was not in question. The properties, he said, could neither be classed as "residential" nor "business," and he doubted if they could be considered desirable manufacturing sites.

Messrs. Ellis and Bettes were present at the meeting by invitation; Mr. J. J. Lundy, owner of the Rapid Tool building, and Messrs. Howden and Dr. Whiteman, owners of the Riverside Park, did not attend.

Mr. Bettes said if he could get a chance to withdraw his option he would be glad to do so. "You could not replace those solid brick houses today for the money I am asking for them," he said.

Ald. Crowe: "They have been there fifty years."

Ald. Gordon: "Your damages by reason of the bridge would not be fixed on a re-placement basis. There is such a thing as depreciation." Ald. Gordon also contended that this property would never be used as a factory site as no railway siding could run into it.

It here was shown that Mr. Bettes' property is only assessed for $1,700.

Mr. Bettes: "My assessment was voluntarily reduced two years ago, for what reason I do not know."

Ald. Gordon here said he would be willing to offer $6,250 for this property, leaving the city's valuation of buildings as it stands, and adding 50 per cent. to the valuation of the land.

Mr. Bettes said he might consider this offer during the next day or two. He thought he had been very considerate with the city of late, for his property had practically been expropriated already. His land had been made a public highway through bridge building operations, and stakes driven into his lawn.

Mr. Ellis thought that the city's acquiring his property at the option price of $8,000 would be a "steal;" he would not consider the Mayor's proposition of $6,000, and contended he would get more than $8,000 by arbitration.

It transpired that this property and the Bettes premises were purchased in 1917 by Mr. Bettes for $4,500, that Mr. Ellis paid $1,500 for the stone foundation of his factory left after the fire, and that he (Mr. Ellis) spent $1,300 in raising the present super-structure.

The books show that Mr. Ellis' premises are only assessed for $1,700.

Mr. Ellis claims that his factory cannot be replaced today for $8,000, that he cannot get as good a site anywhere else in the city, and that his business would suffer by removal.

On motion of Ald. Gordon and Crowe the committee adjourned.

This means that the options on the properties will be allowed to run their course unless Chairman Ald. Gainey is communicated further with by the owners.

PRODUCTION CONTINUES AT HIGH PRESSURE IN THE UNITED STATES

Many Flurries were Noted in Financial Circles During the Past Week—Interesting Light on Labor Situation is Expected Next Week

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Jan. 24.—The extreme weakness of foreign exchange and another advance of interest and discount to the highest points ever ordered by the Federal Reserve Bank were of themselves enough to effect irregular reaction of quoted values in this week's dull stock market. A break in exchange, which caused leading remittances to fall below all previous levels of depreciation, was again mainly precipitated by trade balances unfavorable to European countries. Movement doubtless received further impetus from forced liquidation here and abroad. Efforts of the Central Bank to release "frozen" credits evidently apply to foreign bills no less than to better known and more negotiatable forms of financial accommodation which have been subjected to speculative influences. Shorts had the best of the week's operations, in so far as losses exceeded gains, but hurried covering was occasionally noted in some of the high-grade industrials and specialities controlled by the professional interests.

In important lines of industry production continued at high pressure Statements of United States steel and Bethlehem steel companies covering the final quarter of 1919 are to be issued next week. They are expected to throw an interesting light upon labor conditions during that period.

ILL FORTUNE FOLLOWS THE STATESMEN WHO HELPED FRAME TREATY OF PEACE

Lloyd George Sees Hand of Fate in Defeat of Premiers of France and Italy and Reverses Met With by President Wilson—His Turn Next

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 24.—Ill fortune has attended statesmen intimately associated with the framing of the Treaty of Versailles, in the opinion of Lloyd George. According to a newspaper article published here, Lloyd George was so convinced that Clemenceau would be the next president of the French republic, that he considered the race over. Therefore when he heard of the election of Deschanel as president he could not refrain from expressing his astonishment. In conversation with a member of the Chamber of Deputies, the British Premier is said to have expressed the opinion that "the peace treaty was hard luck for anyone having had a hand in it."

"Yes," the deputy is quoted as replying, "Premier Orlando is out of office, Clemenceau is again in private life, and President Wilson has met with reverses in Washington. Only you have been spared."

"Yes, and in less than six months it will be my turn," is the reply attributed to the British leader.

LOCAL JUNIORS HOLD MIDGETS TO 4 TO 3 AND TIE ROUND

Joe Dwyer's Youngsters Displayed Combination, Speed and an Abundance of Gameness—Tieing Goal Came With One Minute to go After a Brilliant Play.

The local Juniors again performed the unexpected when they invaded Lindsay last night and held the Midgets to a 4 to 3 victory, thus tieing the score on the round, 23 to 23.

Defeat faced the Juniors until one minute before the final gong sounded when Lawson and Collins combined for the prettiest play of the game and, in fact, from a local standpoint, the best play of the series when the former bulged the net for the goal that tied the round. It was a "close call," but the local youngsters' gameness and earnestness was rewarded.

If anyone wishes to know how that last goal was scored ask Frank Collins who describes it somewhat as follows: Collins got the puck at the Peterborough end of the rink. He started up the ice and saw a Lindsay sweater in front of him so passed to Lawson. A few strokes and the puck came back to Collins Another Lindsay sweater appeared and the puck again found its way to Lawson. The same performance was repeated but this time Lawson shot and the rubber lodged in the corner of the home team's net. It was a beautiful play and coming as it did in the last minute is one that will be remembered for a long time by the handful of local supporters who saw it and shouted themselves hoarse.

All Good.

But in describing this play notice of the other members of the local team must not be lost. Every player deserves equal credit for saving the district honors in last night's contest. From Burgoine out to Collins every man was working hard, earnestly and unselfishly. Combination was plentiful and it is largely due to that that the locals have yet another chance of capturing the district.

The Petes were far superior in that department to their more experienced and weatier opponents.

Burgoine was as steady as a rock and the four goals that got past him were from mix-ups right at the goal mouth. The defence pair, Sheehan and Lawson, played like veterans. Although they were all excited, never once did their eagerness carry them away into running out. Every Lindsay rush, whether it was in individual effort or a combination play, ended either in a long shot, which was easily turned aside by Burgoine or was chased into a corner.

Sheehan rushed with his customary speed and cleverness and Lawson was particularly good at carrying the puck. Lawson's performance last night was the best he has turned in yet.

On the forward line Collins, Foley, Jackson and Thirnbeck can share the honors equally. The former pair were on the ice during every minute of play except when Foley drew a penalty for an accidental trip. Jackson and Thirnbeck alternated at right wing and were very effective, especially in checking. Thirnbeck's lone poke stopped many a dangerous looking rush on the small ice.

Ranger did not get into the game so what he might have accomplished remains unknown.

Garnet Off Form.

For Lindsay Chambers was perhaps the most effective. Big Bill Garnet was checked right off his feet by the forwards and never once broke away with anything that looked dangerous.

Stoddard and Bell worked hard and played good games as did Kelley who appeared in a midget uniform for the first time this season.

Green was good as usual and the two substitutes worked effectively McClary in goal stopped a few hard ones and one unfortunately hit him in the face, causing a very nasty cut.

How It Happened.

The first eleven minutes of play was a battle royal. Lindsay rushed [illegible] but Lawson relieved and McClory was fortunate in saving a couple of nasty ones.

The locals were back checking like [illegible] and on the narrow rink this kept the Midgets pretty well bottled up at their own end.

Foley drew a penalty when a Lindsay man stepped on his stick and

EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS ON PACIFIC COAST

BUILDINGS WERE SHAKEN IN VANCOUVER BUT NO SERIOUS DAMAGE IS DONE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vancouver, Jan. 24.—One of the most severe earthquakes that ever visited this vicinity shook the city shortly after 11 o'clock last night. The people rushed from buildings but up to the present no damage has been reported beyond some telephones being put out of commission. Victoria reported feeling the same shock almost at the moment it occurred here, and similar reports arrived from Nanaimo a little later. Some people thought there had been an explosion in the Nanaimo coal mines.

Shock at Seattle.

Seattle, Jan. 24.—Three distinct earthquake shocks were felt here at 11:08 last night. Tremors extended through Washington and British Columbia. At Bellingham, Wash., windows were broken and brick walls were cracked. No damage is reported in Seattle.

At Victoria, Too.

Victoria, Jan. 24.—A pronounced earthquake shock, described by F. N. Denyson, superintendent of the Dominion observatory, as of local origin, was felt here last night at 11.10 The duration lasted five seconds. The centre of the disturbance was either the Straits of Juan de Fuca or the Strait of Georgia. It was felt at all island points communicated with, but no damage is reported. Considerable alarm was occasioned here as some thought there had been an explosion on James Island.

EX-KAISER EXPECTED HOLLAND'S DECISION

NO SURPRISE TO HIM THAT HE WAS NOT SURRENDERED TO ALLIES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Amerongen, anJ. 24. — Former Emperor William of Germany was not surprised by the formal refusal of the Dutch Government to comply with the Allied demand for his surrender, it was declared today at Bentinck Castle, where he makes his home. The refusal of extradition had been expected from the first the correspondent was told, but the castle's residents had never been officially informed that such decision had been or would be reached.

TRANSPORT POWHATAN ONCE MORE HELPLESS

TOW LINE BREAKS AND THE LADY LAURIER UNABLE TO HELP

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, Jan. 24;—Misfortune again attends the attempt to bring the disabled transport Powhatan to port. Captain Travis, Master of the Lady Laurier, which yesterday was slowly but steadily towing the Powhatan towards Halifax, advised the Marine agent here this morning that one of the tow lines had parted and that nothing had been done since.

The Cassandra was damaged in collision with the tug F. W. Roebling in Halifax harbor.

BIG CROWD EXPECTED AT FARMERS' BANQUET, VICTORIA HALL, FEB. 2ND

County President Anderson of the U.F.O. Issues a Circular for the Guidance of Those Who Wish to Attend

County President Wallace Anderson, of the U. F. O., has sent out from Warsaw to the officers of the cheese factories and Farmers' Clubs, the following circular dealing with the banquet which will be held in Victoria Hall, on the evening of February 2nd;

Recently we wrote you in reference to the holding of meetings of the patrons and shareholders of our local cheese factories and creameries in order that we might find if they are in favor of uniting with the proposed big dairy company, The United Dairymen Co-Operative Limited, in the buying of their supplies and the sale of their products.

Since then the proposal has been made that in connection with the linking up of our cheese factories we should endeavor to purchase the Peterboro Creamery and Milk Condensory and Cold Storage Plant and Milk Distributing System.

Because of the great importance of the whole proposal we have thought it well to call a conference of the farmers of the county to consider the situation fully. In the evening a big banquet will be held in Victoria Hall, Peterboro, by our county association and the members of the Peterboro U. F. O. Club at which the principal speakers will be Premier Drury, B. S. A., and Hon. F. C. Biggs, B. S. A., the Minister of Public Works, Toronto.

Enclosed you will find a program for the afternoon meeting. Your factory is invited to send as many delegates as possible.

Because of the great demand there will be for tickets for the banquet in the evening and the fact that the number of tickets that can be sold is necessarily limited we cannot guarantee to provide more than five tickets for the delegates from each factory and U. F. O. Club. If you expect to require these tickets will you kindly send the names of your five delegates as quickly as possible to Mr. H. B. Cowan, of Farm and Dairy, Peterboro, who has been asked to look after the distribution of these tickets for us. The tickets may be obtained either from Mr. Cowan or Mr. Barrie. These tickets will be available for sale to additional delegates from other factories or clubs. As the time in which to act is short we would ask the officers of your factory or club to deal with this matter without delay. I hope that you will be well represented both at the afternoon meetings and at the banquet and that we can count on your assistance in placing the County of Peterboro in the fore front of organized movement.

JUDGE HUVCKE DELIVERS LECTURE ON LAW, ITS ORIGIN AND ITS NATURE

First of a Series of Addresses to be Delivered Weekly at the Y.W.C.A.

It was an earnest and attentive group of ladies which assembled in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. last evening to hear the address delivered by His Honor Judge Huycke on "Law, Its Origin and Nature." Judge Huycke, at the request of the secretary, Miss Layton, has consented to deliver a series of lectures touching on this subject. Dwelling on the technical phase of the subject, only in so far as it was necessary, the speaker in clear and comprehensive terms clothed with the warm glow of human interest this seemingly austere topic.

In this, his first address, His Honor pointed out that he would endeavor to impart to his listeners merely a rudimentary knowledge of the principles of law. Now that women had been granted the franchise it was highly important that they should take an interest in all problems affecting the welfare of humanity. It was imperative that having the vote they should apply the same judiciously.

Speaking not from a technical standpoint, but in a general informatory manner, His Honor went on to discuss the law of the land—the law that is human and yet divine. If we believe in the Creator of the universe, then we must attribute the origin of law to the origin of all things —God. All peoples from the beginning of the world have recognized in some degree the necessity of the guiding principles of law. All had primitive laws. For instance, Moses' tables of stone, which are the Jewish code of laws. But there is one undercurrent—one tissue in the warping of the laws of all nations. That law is universal—the law of nature. This is simply a consciousness that we ought to do right and we ought not to do wrong and that there are other powers greater than our own.

This divine spark burns more brightly in the consciousness of some individuals than others, as is the case with some possessed of finer ideals than others. The law, as it now exists, is the sum total of the evolution of the moral consciousness of civilized people. As a people, ascend the ladder of civilization, as they advance in education, culture, refinement, religion, so also do they come to recognize the rights of others. There is no curse that can be visited on a country so great as that of a disregard—a contempt for law.

We thought that when the war was over the world would be a better place to live in. It may be better, but we don't know. Right here in Canada there is this growing disregard to grapple with. Our own people are not as law-abiding as they were ten years ago. When the great national consciousness is stirred the ethical principles will be sounder and therefore our laws purer and better administered.

Speaking of the classification of law, there is first a rule of conduct prescribed and enforced by the state —we must not injure others. We have the declaratory law, the directory law and the vindicatory law.

Going back to the origin of law in our country, the speaker pointed out that over 100 years ago the Indians, who inhabited North America at that time, had customs for laws. Historically speaking, all North America was at one time French until in the year 1759 when the flags of France gave place to that of Great Britain. In the year 1763, by the Treaty of Paris, it was enacted that British law should prevail, but the French populace being dissatisfied with this in 1774, the Imperial Parliament passed an act whereby the Province of Quebec would adopt the English criminal law, leaving unmolested their code of civil law. In 1783 when the United States proclaimed independence matters were again complicated. The English colonies fell away. In 1792 an Imperial act was passed dividing Canada into Upper and Lower, at the same time enforcing the English law in Upper Canada. This, with the provision that we could, through legislative enactment, change those laws from time to time.

Touching on the Roman code of law, the speaker pointed out that they were excellent administrators with keen executive ability and in possession of a system of law that was nearly perfect. All law was founded on this. Practically all civil law was based upon Roman civil law. However, our law today is absolutely different from this. It is the English common law, the written and the unwritten law. The common law had its origin in the customs which grew up out of the intelligence of the people. Those customs were accepted as law and enforced by courts which had the judgments written and preserved. These judgments were based upon the customs prevailing at the time. Continuing, the speaker defined law as the crystallization of the common sense of the age, at the same time referring to some of the most outstanding intellectual lights who bequeathed us a heritage which we have but to follow. Perhaps our code is more cumbersome than others, but it is more desirable. There is

THE POPULARITY OF REV. J. R. WEBB.

FREQUENTLY IT IS the custom among kindly disposed people to sympathise with the clergy as men who are as a rule misunderstood and whose best efforts in the cause of righteousness so often fail to accomplish anything aside from raising up for them a new set of enemies. One too common impression of the present day pastor is that he is the real follower instead of the leader in all church work, in a word that he is afraid to act according to his own best impulses, lest he breed trouble in the community. Other pastors are classed as mercenaries, regarded as men engaged in a high calling not for the love of the services or for the opportunities it offers to work good in the community, but men who are inspired by an ambition to win fame and earn high salaries.

There are, however, fortunately, outstanding exceptions. There are refreshing instances in which sympathy for the pastor as a martyr to duty is waster. Rev. J. R. Webb, pastor of the Murray Street Church, after fourteen active years of ministerial duty in this city, seems to grow in the esteem of his people—and it is his people who know him the best—with the passing of time. He is now in point of service one of the oldest pastors in the city, one only exceeding him in this regard, and another equaling his record. Every year Mr. Webb receives some tangible token of the favor in which he is held, and the relations between pastor and people are ideal. At the annual meeting of the Murray Street congregation the other night, the substantial increase of salary voted Mr. Webb, gratifying and acceptable as it must have been, is not likely to be prized by him so highly as the commendatory resolution adopted so enthusiastically by the members of his church.

There must be some substantial reason for the success of fourteen years in the actvie ministry in one congregation. Mr. Webb must certainly possess some special fitness for the exacting duties of his profession. Living as every pastor does in the limelight, which reveals to the prying eyes of the captious critics anything like weakness in his nature, Mr. Webb has stood the test.

One secret of his success is his fearlessness in dealing with all questions taken up in his pulpit work. He always has the courage of his convictions in discussing matters of local interest, so that his sincerity is never suspected. He does not lack business ability, as shown by his success in securing the erection of one of the handsomest church edifices in Canada, a building which will always remain as a testimonial to his energy. He cannot be charged with any mercenary motives, for it is a well-known fact that within recent years he has declined calls to wider fields with more tempting emoluments, preferring to continue the happy relations which bind him to his present charge.

Brilliant endowments for pulpit work are not sufficient to assure the success of a minister. Mr. Webb shines as a pastor as well as a preacher. If he were a politician he would be called a good "mixer," being equally at his ease among all classes in the community. He understands human nature as he does the Word which he preaches with such earnestness. He is sympathetic and kindly, never faltering in his ministrations to the sick and dying, or as a comforter of the bereaved.

May the fraternal spirit which is so characteristic of the Murray Street community be long continued as an illustration of what may be accomplished by fidelity to duty.

A DIVIDEND OF FOURTEEN PER CENT.

A REMARKABLE showing was made at the thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Toronto Savings and Loan Company held recently. The net earnings were in excess of those of last year, and besides the usual ten per cent. dividend, paid quarterly, a bonus dividend of four per cent. was added at the end of the year, so that the return on investments in this company for 1919 totaled fourteen per cent. The assets of the company now amount to $4,171,720.11, so that the amount of business handled during the year was simply enormous. It is almost unnecessary to add that with such a showing as they were able to make, the executive officers were all re-elected. Prospects for another year of successful operation are bright, and no better indication of the general prosperity of the country could possibly be cited.

THE CASE OF THE LETTER CARRIERS.

THE PAPERS these days are devoting considerable space to the case of the letter carriers, who are seeking a permanet raise in wages and who are represented as being on the verge of a nation-wide strike to enforce their demands. Department officials at Ottawa are sending out propaganda which is intended to show that the postal employes have no real grievance, that they are, in fact, much better off than are the average wage-earners in commercial life. The press despatches carried the statement the other day that the minimum yearly pay of the carriers was $1400 and that that sum was paid to beginners in the service.

If that were the case, the contention of the Department that the carriers had no just cause of complaint would be justified. But it is evident that a mistake has been made if, in fact, a deliberate attempt to mislead the public has not been made, with the press used as a medium. The minmum wages of the carriers is not $1400 a year or anything like it. In fact, the men who have attained the maximum under the present scale receive considerably less than that. There are conditions in the postal service that cannot fail to puzzle all wage-earners who are not working for the Government.

For example, when a man is taken on as a temporary carrier, he is paid $2.50 a day. When he has made good and is put on the permanent list his pay is at once reduced to $2 a day. He is, however, awarded a war bonus of $420 a year in the case of married men and $252 for those who are single.

The reduction in the wages of the man who is supposed to be promoted appears sufficiently anomalous, but another peculiarity is that the Government figures that while he was still on the temporary list he was overpaid to the extent of fifty cents a day, and proceeds to deduct this from his new scale of wages. Furthermore, if he is made a permanent employe today, it is nothing unusual for the Government ot date his promotion one, two or even three months previous to the date of his notification, thus putting him considerably in debt to the Department. It is frequently the case—one such instance having recently occurred in the local post office—that a man put on the permanent list finds himself so far in debt to the eDpartment under this system of figuring, that he is obliged to work for several weeks without any compensation whatever.

The minimum pay, or the wages of the beginner in the carrier branch of the service, less the war bonus, is $626 a year, and the maximum is $935. The bonus allowed married men brings the minimum up to $1046 and the maximum to $1355, figures that show a vast difference when compared to the $1400 alleged minimum that has been tooted in the press despatches within the past few days. There is nothing assured as to the permanency of a bonus. The Government may abolish it at any time. What the letter carriers the Dominion over ask for, among other things, is that the bonus be abolished and a permanent amount be added to their compensation.

IF DRURY IS OPPOSED.

HALTON COUNTY, the constituency in which Premier Drury is to seek a seat, is essentially an agricultural riding—one of the best in the Province at that—although it contains five large and prosperous towns. Along the lake front, in the vicinity of Oakville, there is a community of country residences of city people, men who have embarked in [illegible] and dairy farming and the breeding of race horses, largely as an avocation, but who, nevertheless, do not bankrupt themselves by their enterprise.

Under the old political order of things, Halton was regarded as a safe Conservative riding for years. Every stratagem resorted to by the Liberals failed to win the constituency. They tried local men, business men, professional men and farmers from among the residents. They imported wealthy and ambitions Liberals from the city, and such candidates spent money like sailors on shore leave, but all to no purpose. The Conservative hold on the riding could not be broken.

But Halton, too, became infected by the spirit of political revolution that swept over the Province last year. The farmers put up a candidate of their own. The old political parties made light of the chances of the U.F.O. man, and all offers of coalition to accomplish his defeat were rejected. The result was a three-cornered contest. Halton, when the votes were counted on the evening of October 20, shared in the surprises that swept Ontario from one corner to the other. The farmers' candidate led the Conservative nominee, a popular resident who had represented the county for years, by a margin of over one thousand votes, and the Liberal candidate trailed behind in the rear.

There is newspaper talk that Premier Drury is to be opposed in Halton, but it will be noted that it is the discomfitted Liberals who are doing the talking. They see a chance to capture the prize for which they have vainly striven for years, but their ideas lack anything like logic. Why a coalition with the Conservatives now, when all advances made in that direction before the last election were spurned? And by what process of reasoning can it now be shown that the Liberals, the tail-enders at the last election, are entitled to the seat now that the constituency is again open?

What would the farmers of Halton, what would the old line parties gain, even if they succeeded in defeating Premier Drury? He is an outsider, it is true, but he is in this respect no whit different from other outsiders of lesser note brought into the riding from time to time by the Liberals, in an effort to redeem it. Halton, or any other constituency in the Province, should feel proud of the distinction of being represented by the Provincial Premier, let his party designation be what it may. The farmers of Halton declared themselves on October 20. Premier Drury is in everything in perfect accord with what the farmers still stand for. Halton too, has always been the banner temperance connty of the Province. Prohibition has been an issue in every campaign, even though the question may not have been openly paraded on all occasions. Better a Drury than a Dewart, seeing that the triumph of the latter, or even the election of a Conservatire, instead of the Farmer-Premier, would tend to complicate further the provincial situation already tangled as it is.

LAWS FOR PEDESTRIANS AND MOTORISTS

FOR THE PEDESTRIAN.

1—Do not cross a street except at the corner crossings if possible. This applies particularly to city traffic.

2—Do not fail to stop and look in both directions for automobiles, and listen for the warning automobile horn, before attempting to cross a street.

3—Do not rush across a highway ahead of a fast motor vehicle. It is faster than you.

4—When in doubt, give the passing automobile the right of way. Personal safety is more important than pride or pique.

5—Do not dodge across a crowded city thoroughfare between passing cars when the semaphore signal commands you to stop.

6—When alighting from a street car, always look behind the car before attempting to reach the curb.

7—Never cross a street directly in front of or behind a street car that has stopped momentarily. There is danger from street cars, and any fast moving automobile approaching from the opposite direction.

8—Admonish children to keep off the highways and not to use them as a means of travel if there is a sidewalk.

9—Alertness, balance and caution—these are the ideal A. B. C's of the careful pedestrian.

FOR THE MOTORIST.

1—Don't forget to slow down at street intersections. It may save a human life.

2—Don't forget to look to the right and left before passing a railroad crossing.

3—Don't forget, when signalled by a vehicle in your rear, to turn slightly to the right and allow such vehicle to pass you on your left.

4—Don't forget the pedestrians. They, too, have rights on the streets and highways.

5—Don't forget to use extra precautions when you see a child crossing a highway.

6—Don't forget that in case of accident, you must stop immediately and give your name, address and license number to the injured party or police officer. If no police officer is in the vicinity, report to the nearest police station or judicial officer.

7—Don't forget that all motor vehicles must be equipped with adequate brakes in good working order and adequate horns or other signalling devices.

8—Don't forget that your lights must be lit within half an hour after sunset.

9—Don't forget that "safety first" saves life and limb, and often your temper.

10—Remember the A, B, C of motoring—Always Be Careful.

UNION GOVERNMENT AND VETERANS

(Ottawa Journal.)

In his latest article in the Ottawa Citizen, Mr. David Loughnan, Editor The Veteran, running amuck at Parliament and Union Government, suggests that no war veteran need starve. "A 'hat-in-hand' fund," he says, "is to be opened for necessitous cases among returned men and dependents." We do not quite know what he means, but we do think that no veteran is obliged to starve.

Among the things Union Government has done for the returned soldolers of Canada are the following:

Canada has given a discharge gratuity to all soldiers larger by several hundred dollars than any other country in the world has done. We do not notice any infliction of starvation there upon Canadian veterans.

Canada has established a pension rate to disabled men larger by several hundred dollars a year than that of any other country in the world. This does not look like a starve policy.

Canada has given a pension rate to widows of soldiers larger by several hundred dollars a year than that of any other country in the world. Widows of soldiers apparently need not starve outright.

The Canadian Government has secured or helped directly to secure employment for 98,000 returned men. These ought not to be all found suffering from starvation.

The Canadian Government has placed 24,000 returned men in government service, giving them preferential treatment for all civil service ed soldiersi n general, here is the fact tent.

Canada has provided the most extensive and generous Land Settlement scheme of any war nation; thousands of soldiers have already taken advantage of the offer, and the expenditure will be nearly $200,000,000. Looks to us to be a good crack at starvation.

Canada has expended or will expend altogether close upon five hundred million dollars for re-establishmet work of all descriptions. No starve observable.

Canada has incurred pension liabilities which, capitalized, would represent several hundred million dollars more. If anybody should starve it will likely be only some of the civilian people of Canada.

The Canadian Government has earnestly and ably promoted all means and machinery for the expenditure of these vast sums wisely, and has endeavored in doing so to consult in all respects the ideas and advice of soldiers.

We proceed with some details of the discharge pay and pensions which may be illustrative.

As to the discharge pay to returned soldiers in genearl, here is the fact of Canada's doing as compared with that of any of the other English-speaking countries:

	For Overseas Service	For Home Service
Canada—
Married men	$600	$300
Single men	420	210
Australia	114
Britain	83	54
United States	60

In the United States, some of the individual states have voted $10 per month up to twelve months to returned soldiers, so that in these states men of a year's service overseas are sure of $180 altogether. Also there is talk of Congress increasing the Federal allowance from $60 to $240, but this has not been done so far.

In New Zealand, at last advices, the discharge allowance was $34 for each married man plus $7 for each child under 16. For single men the gratuity was $34.

SKINNER DIDN'T START THE STRIKE—BUT HE USED IT

Jay H. Skinner's Shoe Service Shop is one of the finest Louisville, Ky., but its success is due more to the way in which it handles the business than to its more tangible appearance and appointments.

Some of the points on which Skinner prides himself in the service he offers including a lounging room for men waiting for their clothes, which are cleaned in a separate department. Here bathrobes, extra trousers and slippers are loaned free of charge. There is a restroom for women customers, with telephone service and magazines gratis. Two shoe-shining departments, one for each sex, equipped with comfortable opera chairs, and a checkroom for checking patrons' parcels free, are things designed to make customers feel completely at home while awaiting their shoes or clothes. In the front part of the store is located the shoe machinery, part of the work being done in the windows.

During the recent street railway strike Skinner came out with a bold statement, in the same style of type as was used by the railway company and the carmen's union, which evoked much comment:

PUBLIC NOTICE

An Absolute Denial

Because of the fact that I have just opened the Shoe Service Shop at 330 West Jefferson street, for the repairing of shoes, and further because I have on several different occasions in the public press advocated "more walking" on the part of the public, I have been wrongfully and maliciously accused of being responsible for the present strike of street car motormen and conductors.

It is rumored that I caused the strike so that the entire population of the city would be forced to walk, thereby wearing out their shoes so I could repair them.

This I absolutely deny—I am in no way responsible for this strike—I was not consulted before it took place by either the workmen concerned or officials of the street railway company.

I admit that I have publicly expressed my preference for walking (on the part of others), but when I did so I supposed it would be understood that it was to be in moderation and not a prolonged "hike."

Of course, while the strike lasts walking will continue to be a disagreeable necessity on the part of most of us. Shoes are bound to wear out, and I will appreciate it if you will bring them to the Shoe Service Shop for repairs.

As to my causing this strike, all rumors to that effect are false and the union officials or street railway officals will bear me out in this statement.

Yours for less walking,
JAY H. SKINNER.

AN ACCIDENTAL AD

Somebody hoisted a brick through one of the display windows of the W. W. Carter Co., Indianapolis, the other day and made off with some choice samples. The company placed this sign in the hole in the glass:

"Our shirts please window-smashers."

MUSIC HAS CHARMS TO SOOTHE THE SAVAGE SHOPPER

"Musical shopping" may not be anything particularly new, but as an aid to augmented holiday sales it's an accomplished fact.

At least that's the firm conviction of the William H. Hoskins Co., of Philadelphia, after trying out the idea for several seasons. The theory that people eat more while listening to the strains of pleasant music has been proved by restaurant owners. That it also applies to shopping, especially during the festive periods, has equally been demonstrated. It puts people in a recentive frame of mind, takes the dull, commercial edge off transactions and helps alleviate the ordeal of shopping.

Alertly mindful of all this, Hoskins each year about the first week in December begins to mail thousands of invitations to a selected list of women customers both in the city and suburbs. Coupled with daily newspaper advertisements announcing Saturday afternoon musicales from 2 to 5 o'clock, this never fails to attract hundreds of shoppers to the store to do their buying at leisure and be entertained at the same time.

Net results have been a doubling of business on Christmas cards, fine engraving and gifts of every description. All merchandise is of the higher grade, and the sales represent substantial amounts in virtually every instance. Even floor lamps at $75 are frequently sold during the afternoon.

DID THE SHOE MEN SING "LOVER OF MY SOLE"?

Groups of tradespeople who attended a revival meeting being held in Pratt, Kans., at a special business men's meeting, were invited to choose their own hymns, each group standing and singing its choice.

The grocers started off with "Help Somebody Today." Then followed:

"Think on Thy Way," by the automobile men;

"Sweeter and Dearer," by the restaurant, hotel and bakery folks;

"Yield Not to Temptation," by the lawyers;

"Wash Me Whiter Than the Snow" by the laundry men and dry cleaners;

"The Great Physician," by the doctors;

"Does it Pay?" by the bankers.

"The Home Over There," by the real estate dealers;

And the services closed with "I Love to Tell the Story," by the newspaper men present.

RETAILERS QUESTION WOMEN ABOUT SERVICE

To determine whether the service accorded by local stores is all that it should be, the Little Falls, N. Y. Chamber of Commerce is conducting a unique questionnaire campaign. Local housewives are receiving a set of questions, which include:

"Do you get courteous and satisfactory treatment in Little Falls?"

"Do the clerks serve you promptly and satisfactorily"

"Are the goods in the stores as complete, up to date and good as they should be?"

"Do the merchants secure for you promptly anything you may desire?"

The idea of this service is to endeavor to improve the stores and have them capable of rendering better service to the people of the city.

TWO CHRISTMAS DAYS.

Festival Observed Twice Yearly In Madagascar.

There is only one spot in the whole world where Christmas is celebrated twice each year and that is the island of Madagascar, off the eastern coast of the southern end of Africa, and which dominates that part of the Indian ocean.

Marco Polo, the great traveler, first made this island known to medieval Europe in 1298. It was nearly two hundred years later when a Portuguese traveler obtained the first authentic information about the island, in 1497. From that time on there were attempts by the Portuguese, French and English to settle the island, and they met with defeat at the hands of its wild and savage Hovas, who controlled the island, and many died from Malgasy fever in the lowlands of the country. On Christmas eve in 1672 all the Frenchmen at Fort Dauphin were murdered by the natives. In 1810 a Hovas chief, Radama I, a young man, allowed the Christian missionaries to teach their Bible doctrines in the island, and by 1820 Protestant Christianity was effectively introduced among the Hovas.

Radama died in 1828, and one of his wives became Queen Ranavalona I. She was bitter against the Christians, and persecuted them in many cruel ways, and she had her warriors from the interior mountains of the island massacre the native Christians, who would not renounce the Christian God and go back to the worship of idols. The cruel queen reigned until her death in 1861—a wicked record of 33 years. Then her son, Radama II, became king and although he was a great drunkard and led a wild life himself, he allowed the Chritsian missionaries to come into the island again. He was assassinated in the palace in 1863, and his widow, Rosoherina, was proclaimed queen. Upon her death in 1868, a niece of Ranavalona I, ascended the throne as Ranavalona II. When a girl, her gentle charities and sympathies with the Christians during their persecutions had won respect and love, and when she became queen it was understood that Madagascar had the first really Christian ruler on its throne. Between 1830 and 1835 the entire Bible had been printed in the Malagasy language, also an English-Malagasy dictionary. So on the day of her coronation the idol which had been prominent in similar occasions was banished by Ranavalona II, and a copy of the Malagasy Bible placed near the throne; while on the canopy above, in golden letters, were the words: "Glory to God in the Highest, peace on earth, good will to men." With one hand on the Bible, the queen addressed the people, expressing the hope that they would adopt the Christian faith, but added: "In this matter you shall not be compelled."

She ordered her own household idols and the chief national idol to be burned and gradually her example was followed by the general destruction of household idols among the Hovas. She married the prime minister the following year and made a public confession of her faith, and from that time on the Christian religion has been growing fast in the island.

The words over the canopy at her coronation, the queen knew to be spoken by the angels in the sky when the shepherds heard the noise of wings at the time the Christ was born in Bethlehem. Christmas is celebrated all over the island now. But the Hovas have a different way of computing time, and by their system, Christmas falls some time in November, and they celebrate it then. The Christian date of December 25 is also celebrated by the natives along with the missionaries.

But it is not a Christmas of snow and sleighbells. It is a tropical country and Christmas day is under a torrid sun, but the sky is brilliant and the magnificent flowering trees of many vivid colors are filled with many peculiar birds of brilliant plumage, while the ground beneath is bespeckled with wild blossoms of varied hues.

Two Notes.

The following story is told of Georges Carpentier, the French boxer, who recently defeated Beckett for the championship of Europe. Some years ago when Carpentier had established his record as a pugilist, he was presented with a very fine walking stick by some admirers. One night he went to a restaurant in Paris, taking the cane with him. During the course of the meal he had occasion to leave the place for a few minutes so he put the cane on the table and beside it a note which read: "This cane belongs to me. I am champion boxer of the world. I am coming back." When he returned the cane was gone and beside it was this note: "I have the cane. I am champion runner of the world. I am not coming back."

Enterprising Finland.

The Finnish Trans-Oceanic Trading Company, a co-operative institution representing about 90 per cent. of the manufacturing firms and merchants of Finland, is about to open a branch of its business in Australia. An option has been obtained by the company on a fleet of Finnish steamships and an effort will be made by the company to gain the Baltic trade with Australia previously held by Germany. The concern hopes to obtain the trade with Australia in paper, timber, turpentine and other goods that it had before the war through German agents, and with the elimination of German influence, will carry the products of Finland to Australia in a regular fleet of vessels running on a monthly schedule.

His Headache.

A TONIC FOR THE NERVES

THE ONLY REAL NERVE TONIC IS A GOOD SUPPLY OF RICH, RED BLOOD.

"If people would only attend to their blood, instead of worrying themselves ill," said an eminent nerve specialist, "we doctors would not see our consulting rooms crowded with nervous wrecks. More people suffer from worry than anything else."

The sort of thing which the specialist spoke of is the nervous rundown condition caused by overwork and the many anxieties of today. Sufferers find themselves tired, morose, low-spirited and unable to keep their minds on anything. Any sudden noise hurts like a blow. They are full of groundless fears, and do not sleep well at night. Headaches, neuritis and other nerve pains are part of the misery, and it all comes from starved nerves.

Doctoring the nerves with poisonous medicines is a terrible mistake. The only real nerve tonic is a good supply of rich, red blood. Therefore to cure nervousness and rundown health Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be taken. These pills actually make new, rich blood, which strengthens the nerves, improves the appetite, gives new strength and spirits, and makes hitherto despondent people bright and cheerful. If you are at all "out of sorts" you should begin curing yourself to-day by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Lilies of the Field.

The "lilies of the field," so often mentioned in the Bible, are thought to be the red and purple, particularly the red anemones with black centers. These anemones grow among the thorn hedges of the East, which accounts for the saying "lilies among thorns."

For some years he was teacher in theology at Dashisha College, but during the past four years he has toured his native country, preaching everywhere to large crowds, sometimes numbering nine and ten thousand. He is known as the "Moody of Japan," and has succeeded in winning over forty-eight thousand to the Christian religion. MARMORA FACTORIES APPROVE NEW COMPANY

OFFICERS AND SHAREHOLDERS DECIDE TO JOIN UNITED DAIRYMEN'S CO-OPERATIVE

At a meeting held in Marmora on Thursday, January 22nd, by representatives from the four cheese factories in the Township of Marmora to discuss the advisability of these factories becoming identified with the large co-operative dairy company, which it is proposed to organize in the Central Ontario District, considerable enthusiasm over the proposal was manifested. Mr. Hugh Maloney, of Marmora, the president of Cook's factory and a provisonal director of the United Dairymen Cooperative, Limited, which is to be the name of the new company, acted as chairman. After a long discussion resolution were passed approving of the appointment of local arbitrators to act in conjunction with arbitrators to be appointed by the Department of Agriculture and the central company in valuing the local factories. By resolution the presidents of the four local factories were selected as the local valuators.

The presidents of all four factories as well as numerous shareholders and directors were present at the meeting, which was largely attended. The principle speakers were Mr. H. B. Cowan, Edtor-in-Chief of Farm and Dairy, Peterboro, which has been active in promoting the central company and Mr. J. Scott, of Toronto, representing the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Mr. Scott is a past president of the Western Ontario Dairymen's Association. Mr. Jesse Williams, president of the Riverside factory, Mr. R. Laycock, president of the Silver Leaf Factory and Mr. Maloney, president of Cook's factory all spoke favorably of the proposed amalgamation, as did patrons of all the factories, who were called upon to express their opinions for or against the project. The meeting was overwhelmingly in favor of the proposal and pleasure was expressed that these four factories were likely to be among the first to become identified with the new company.

Kingston is having an Industrial Commissioner, who will also act as secretary of the Board of Trade, his salary to be $4,000.

The C.P.O.S. liner Montford, which sailed from St. John for Liverpool was compelled to return owing to propeller trouble.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

JUDGE HUYCKE DELIVERS

an elasticity about it whereby the individual receives more consideration. The two fundamental principles of our law—order and liberty—liberty in so far as it does not inflect injury on others.

Holding that the voice of the people speaking down through the ages is the voice of God, the speaker pointed out that this does not mean the ravings of a distracted mob, but rather the crystalized opinions of the thinking people of all time.

We have international law, private international law, and public international laws; private international law, the good will that exists among nations which will enforce the contract of people made in other countries.

The greatest exponent of public international law was a Hollander. One of the greatest men of all ages, he was at one time ostracized from his native home. However, having worked his way to fame and honor by sheer force of merit, he was welcomed back by his countrymen and was an acknowledged authority on questions of moment. As a tribute to the memory of this illustrious personality "The Hague" is chosen as the meeing place for any conference of importance.

Next Friday evening Judge Huycke will lecture on "Courts and Their Constitution."

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT.

Editor Review: It has been my humble wish to do what I could to aid the churches in their mighty effort to throw off materialism so prominently set forth at present in many ways. As a contribution to this determined attempt to rescue us from the new temptation, I ask you to publish the following for one week as an advertisement: "These five separate communions are of one mind as to their belief in God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth, and in Jesus Christ His Son our Lord. They now declare to their respective constituencies and also unitedly to the Canadian people that the Only Effective Method of Making Good Citizens is by urging men to a more faithful practice of Christianity by inculcating personal faith in Jesus Christ. They insist that there is no other dependable way of correcting evil tendencies in individual and national life. Signed by the United National Campaign representing the simultaneous but independent Forward Movement of the Anglican, Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian Communions of Canada."

Walked on Lava.

The temptation to walk on the thin crust over hot lava seems to be almost as strong as the longing which little boys feel for trying new ice. "Two young ladies," reports the Hilo Tribune, "stepped into a volcano crevice and were rescued somewhat bruised. Greater care is necessary in rambling through the Kilauea crater. Another Hilo lady was visiting the crater after nightfall with a party of friends and they were walking along a safe trail when she suddenly sank up to her armpits in a crack which opened beneath her feet."

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

MEDLEY ABOUT MEDALS.

Trafalgar Medal Was Refused by Sailors, Who Threw It in Sea.

The Trafalgar medal was struck in pewter for the lower deck. The seamen were annoyed at its shoddy appearance, and most of the recipients threw their decorations into the sea, says Tit-Bits.

The Soudan medal of 1896-7 has a ribbon in which yellow and black are separated by a narrow stripe of scarlet. These colors were chosen to symbolize the driving out of the black Dervishes from the yellow desert by the "thin red line."

Another ribbon which has an interesting significance is the yellow, blue and yellow suspender of the Khedive's Soudan medal. Here we have typified the blue Nile running through the sandy plains of Egypt.

The authorities have never been in a hrrry over issuing medals; there are two instances on record when those entitled to rewards have been called upon to wait fifty years for their decorations.

The Victoria Cross was designed by Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort. For a long while it was made of the bronze obtained from cannons captured in the Crimea. Now, the makers use cannon taken in the Boxer Rising.

For Jellalabad a very ugly medal was struck, and those who received it grumbled in no measured terms. A really artistic piece was then provided, and all who possessed the first were requested to exchange it for the second. Not one per cent. of the recipients applied for the better medal.

Until the year 1914 the long service ribbon for the army was similar to that for the Victoria Cross. The only difference was in width, the latter being a fraction of an inch wider. Such was official intelligence.

No less than eleven ribbons recognized by the authorities are entirely blue.

After Waterloo the chief engraver of the mint was commissioned to prepare a fitting medal for presentation to the leaders of the victorious armies. He did so, but took thirty years to complete the work.

The medal for Culloden was the first to be provided with a ribbon of definite pattern. Before then each wearer suspended his decoration with any sort of ribbon he pleased.

Lion's Head in Fountains.

The original reason for the choice of a lion's head in public fountains where the water comes out of a lion's mouth was, remarks an exchange, that among the ancient Egyptians the rising of the waters of the Nile, which was the most important event of the year, meaning life and prosperity to the whole nation, always took place when the sun was in the constellation of Leo. The lion's head on fountains is a symbol of the life giving waters of the Nile.

Stay In Bed to Grow.

How many people are aware that we are shorter when standing than when lying, and taller in the morning than in the evening? asks Tit-Bits.

An Englishman was the first to discover this, but afterwards Dr. Maraad, of the Royal Academy of France, made several experiments to prove the theory. He found after a year's trial that usually in the night he gained almost three-eights of an inch, and lost almost as much during the day. The cause of this is to be found in the different state or condition of the cartilages which go to make up the spine.

The joints of this part of our bodies are separated and yet joined by particular bony substances, everyone of which has a springy resilience. These are capable of yielding on all sides without bending the backbone or spine itself. Of course, the difference is scarcely perceptible in one joint alone, but the combined effect is appreciable. Naturally when the spine is supporting the weight of the head it is liable to be contracted, and we are taller after lying down for some time than after we have been walking about all day with our bodies in an upright position, with the spine supporting the weight of the head.

At night time, when we lie down in a more or less horizontal position, these top parts do not weigh so heavily, and the springy muscles being expanded, our spines consequently become longer.

Another proof of this is to be found in the increase of height sometimes experienced by invalids who have spent a long time in bed, and also in the fact that the most rest a young child has the taller he will grow.

King Gets Unexpected Gift.

King George has, it is said, recently received a most welcome gift from an unknown donor. It is a complete set of war stamps issued in the occupied parts of France and Belgium by the Germans and also a set of the stamps issued by the Bolshevik Government.

Stamp collecting has always been one of His Majesty's favorite hobbies, and his sets, artistically mounted by himself, are probably the finest in the world. He possesses the celebrated "Baden Powell" stamp, issued during the defence of Mafeking. This was given to the King when he was Duke of York by Queen Victoria (who received it from Baden-Powell) accompanied by the stiff memorandum: "Even the circumstances of the siege in no way justified the substituting of his head for ours."

Perpetual Motion.

The nearest approach to perpetual motion was a clock constructed in 1774, by James Cox, a jeweler of Shoe Lane, London, Eng. This clock kept the scientific world guessing for years. The energy that made it run was derived from the changes in atmospheric pressure — a barometer was the sole motive power. Ferguson, the scientist, saw this clock; said it unquestionably would run until its parts wore out. The last heard of it, it had been sent as a gift to the Chinese emperor, from whom it later was stolen.

Costly Salmon.

After paying a big sum for the use of the salmon river the English visitor was very unlucky, having got nothing for the first five days. On the last day, however, he killed a nice salmon. "Hamish," said the gentleman to the boatman, "do you know that fish has cost me about £50?" "Awheel, sir," quoth Hamish, "then it's a mercy ye didna catch any mair!"

Could Mourn for Himself.

Field Marshal Count Seiki Terauchi enjoyed the unusual experience of beholding the court mourning ordered for his own supposed death. After a long illness Terauchi was declared by physicians to be dead. The court expressed profound sorrow at the loss of its distinguished soldier and conferred posthumous honors on him. The whole of Japan joined in the condolences and newspapers wept at the news of his passing. Then the Count recovered from his heart attack and Japan was obliged to abandon all its funeral ceremonies, while the court hastily cancelled the honors it had conferred under the wholly mistaken impression that Terauchi was dead. Terauchi himself made no published comment on this Government action, but he did apologise to his wife for giving so much trouble. He lived ten days after his first supposed death and succumbed on November 3, 1919, when he experienced another seizure.

DODGE BROTHERS BUSINESS CAR

Not Increased in Price

NEARLY ALL OTHER CARS HAVE

And we are ready to accept orders for future delivery accordingly.

In the Opinion of the Engineering Profession

There is no car in its class which so completely satisfies the popular demands of the Public as the Dodge.

Go where you will, you seldom see a Dodge Brothers car in the Repair Shop. It has become a bye-word that "the Dodge Car keeps the garage man poor."

The Gasoline Consumption is Unusually Low. The Tire Mileage is Unusually High.

Dodge Brothers have concentrated on one car and one car only, in a determination to make it as good as a car can be made. For every part and every process that enters into it they have personally established a standard.

The work done and the materials used in each part and each process, in every car, must conform to that standard. Dodge Brothers will always give to their car that overcare which the public expects of them.

JOHN REDDEN SAYS HE WAS SURPRISED

AFTER SUFFERING FOR THREE YEARS WITH STOMACH TROUBLE HE TAKES TANLAC AND FEELS LIKE A NEW MAN.

"I have suffered from a severe stomach trouble for the past three years, and I hardly ate enough in one day to keep a small child alive, let alone a man, and even this small amount would sour, gas would form, and I would bloat so my clothes would become uncomfortable and my heart would palpitate so badly I had great difficulty in breathing. I had such pains in my stomach after every meal they would nearly draw me double. I also had intense pains in the small of my back which made it almost impossible for me to stoop over. I was also troubled a great deal from constipation and my head ached nearly all the time, and at times throbbed so bad it felt as if it would simply burst open. I was troubled a lot with dizzy spells, and at times I would have to grab hold of something to keep from falling. I could not sleep well and was so restless I would just roll and toss from one side of the bed to the other all night long, and get up completely tired out, and I always felt nauseated in the morning.

"Seeing where so many people were being benefited by Tanlac, I decided to try it, too, and I must say I was surprised at the improvement. I have just finished my sixth bottle and I feel like a different man. I am hungry all the time, and can eat anything I want now without suffering any bad after effects. I am never troubled with gas, bloating, palpitation of the heart, or trouble of any kind with my stomach, and have not been troubled with headaches or dizziness since right after I started on my first bottle of Tanlac and I am never bothered with constipation. The awful pains in my back are all gone, and I sleep like a log every night, and am entirely free of that nausea in the morning. I get up every morning feeling greatly refreshed and ready for my day's work. Tanlac has surely put me on my feet."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

A NEW STARTING POINT

(By Quintus.)

The most sensational and revolutionary change which has confronted the public since the war is not the farmers' movement or the rise in the cost of living, but the change in front of the Y.M.C.A.

The report of the National Convention of the Y.M.C.A. is in the Globe of January 22. The head lines are: "The Great War Gives Y.M.C.A. New Outlook on Humanity. Relation Between Association and Churches Discussed at Convention May Revise Membership on Service Basis."

The Y.M.C.A. began as a purely religous institution, but it soon developed a sporting side that dwarfed the religious side. It drew increased support of a benevolent or charitable character from the public, and if its basis had not become selfishness instead of service it would have become a great power in the land for public good and a great aid to those sources of spiritual strength, the churches. But, instead of that, the Y.M.C.A. took so much public money and exemptions that it gradually weakened the churches financially and deprived them of the largest share of the energies and activities of the young as well.

Seeing the need in the national life of a truer basis of public service than sport, although sport has its place, a new movement arose amongst the best men of the entire continent. The Rotary and the Kiwanis Associations found themselves on service. Their influence at once became vast and tended immediately to correct the wrong tendencies of the Y. M. C. A. The latter has now decided to change its whole objective to that of service. It is a tremendous tranformation, but one that was coming as a matter of necessity, and greatly furthered by the great war.

But a new question arises: "Why is it that the churches cannot do all this under their own wing, not as a part of spiritual work in the churches, which is a thing apart, but as a consequence of it?" Organizations outside the church bleed it. If men and women want to help the church they must derive their inspiration from it and under it, and that inspiration must lead to sacrifice, the great lesson of the Atonement, and nowhere else. Men and women are judged by what they are prepared to do for others, and the members of a Y.M.C.A. have not hitherto been able to claim any credit on that score. The man who collects funds for his own requirements is not a true product of Christianity. He is either a weakling or a self-seeker.

The outlook is now promising.

AN EXCELLENT MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

Babys' Own Tablets are an excellent medicine for little ones. They are a mild but thorough laxative which sweeten the stomach and regulate the bowels thus bringing relief in cases of constipation, indigestion, colic, colds and simple fevers. Concerning them Mrs. L. J. Chiasson, Paquetville, N.B., writes:—"I have found Baby's Own Tablets excellent for my young baby in the case of constipation and colic and it gives me great pleasure to recommend them to other mothers." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Wiliams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"I suffered for several years with inflammatory Rheumatism and could hardly get up or down stairs. My husband bought me a box of Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules, and almost immediately I felt relief. The swellings started to go down and the stiffness left my back. I might say that previously to using T.R.C.'s I had tried almost everything under the sun without success. I am a happier and wiser woman now, and I cannot thank you enough for the aid T.R.C.'s have given me."

It's the same story from hundreds of other Rheumatic sufferers. They tried T.R.C.'s and T.R.C.'s fixed them up. If you suffer, try them.

"WATCH YOUR STEP" AT THE GRAND WEDNESDAY

BRIGHTEST AND LIVELIEST MUSICAL COMEDY THAT HAS EVER COME TO THIS CITY

Of more than ordinary interest will be the appearance here of Irving Berlin's international syncopated musical success entitled "Watch Your Step," which comes to the Grand Opera House on Wednesday on its fourth annual tour.

With its wealth of soft melodies and plethora of dancing and laughter it will prove to be the brightest and liveliest musical comedy that has come to this city in many months. It is a riot of color, girls, gowns and gayety from the rise of the first curtain until the finale.

"Watch Your Step" is a musical comedy of frills and fashions, of spice and speed, of melody and maidens and of tunes and tangoes. There is activity and animation displayed at all times by the members of the company, who work with a snap and vim that put ginger into every moment of the performance.

The company will be found well balanced in all parts, the principals all clever and the chorus composed of a goodly number of pretty young women, who dance furiously, cyclonically or gracefully as the needs of the occasion require, and its work in the concerted numbers will be a surprise. The manner in which the ensembles and finales are rendered will attest to the care that has been taken in producing "Watch Your Step."

Prominent in the cast are Margaret Wood, Patricia Baker, Winifred Anglin, Charlotte Allen, Harry C. Green, Chas. Udell, Bobby Harrington, Vincent Moore and Arthur Sherman, and several other Broadway favorites.

SPLENDID SNOW SCENE LENDS CHARM TO FILM

HARRY T. MOREY PICTURE TO BE AT THE EMPIRE MONDAY

Splendid snow scenes with dog teams and snowshoes lend fascination to "Beauty Proof," the Harry T. Morey picture which will be shown in the Empire theatre on Monday. James Oliver Curwood wrote the swift moving romance, which rings true in every scene of the Northwest, and none of the rugged atmosphere of the story is lost in the screening.

Mr. Morey has a role of exceptional strength and appeal as Corporal Steele of the Canadian Mounted Police, who is embittered against womankind because he cannot forget a home wrecked years before, but who finally battles his way into the love of a mysterious girl of beauty he first met when sent to arrest her as the slayer of the man who wrecked his home.

Big scenes abound in the picture, physical combats in which the big Vitagraph star shows his physical as well as his dramatic power, and situations in which love interest dominate. The suspense is finely maintained to the end and there is at all times a strong element of mystery.

Paul Scardon directed the picture and in the supporting cast are Betty Blythe, George Majeroni, Denton Vane and Robert Gaillard.

ALL CANADIAN COMPANY TO PRESENT TYRONNE POWERS IN BIG REVIVAL

Noted Actor Will be Seen Again in Peterborough, at the Grand, March 8th, in Gripping Drama, "The Servant in the House.

Keen interest will doubtless be manifested by theatre-goers here in the announcement by Trans-Canada Theatres, Limited, the new All-Canadian syndicate which has established a chain of theatres from coast to coast throughout the Dominion, that they will present at the Grand Opera House, Peterborough, Monday, 8th March, the distinguished actor, Tyrone Power, and a specially selected company in a revival of the famous drama by Charles Rann Kennedy, "The Servant in the House."

Many people will doubtless recall the sensation created when this play was first produced in America in 1908, and the remarkable performance given by Mr. Power in the intensely dramatic role of Robert, the "Drainman." He will enact the same role in the forthcoming revival.

Associated with Mr. Power will also be another member of the original cast in the person of Mr. Galway Herbert, while the other artists are all well-known players of established reputation.

One of the most fascinating features about "The Servant in the House" is the unique character of the plot. As may be remembered, it is a story of three brothers, one an East Indian bishop, one a country clergyman, and the third a scavenger. The entire scene is laid in the breakfast-room of a vicarage, the residence of the clergyman. His wife, a worldly-minded woman, is devoted to him, and labors in her own way to promote his advancement. He, meanwhile, suffers from remorse for having neglected the physical and spiritual welfare of his younger brother, now a scavenger, who had taken to drink, disgraced himself in his relatives' eyes, and disappeared, leaving behind a motherless daughter, whom the repentant minister has adopted and carefully brought up.

The scavenger brother returns unexpectedly to see his daughter. His arrival coincides with that of the East Indian bishop, who assumes the guise of a butler, and enters into his brother's service under the name of Manson. This character is intended to represent, not the person, but the spirit of Christ, and is throughout impressive and reverent. The clergyman's brother-in-law, a worldly Bishop bent upon augumenting his own income, also turns up, and there develops a remarkable situation which eventually results in the regeneration of the "Drainman," who determines to risk his life by clearing out a vault beneath the church which has become a source of pollution. The husband and wife are also brought together, and the two brothers united. Only the worldly Bishop is left outside.

The play is half-drama, half-allegory, and in this fact lies half its power. The scenes are singularly dramatic, and as the play develops they grow in intensity. The role enacted by Mr. Power is one of the most gripping in modern drama as known to the American stage.

The supporting company have all been chosen for their special fitness in the interpretation of the rôles the play provides, and the production is unique in that it is the first made by the new Transcontinental Canadian Organization.

Japanese Pearl Farm.

There is an extensive salt water farm in Japan, where the gardeners encourage oysters to make pearls, according to an exchange. The farm has an area of about 50 square miles, and the water varies in depth from five to 15 fathoms. The pearl farmer selects spots where the oyster spawn is plentiful and plants small rocks and stones. As soon as they are covered with oyster spat he places them in special beds, where they lie undisturbed until the third year. It is said that an oyster will not produce a pearl unless a foreign substance irritates it. As soon as it feels the irritation it proceeds to cover the troublesome object with nacre, layer upon layer, until after a few years it has made a pearl. When the oysters are large enough the pearl farmer takes them from their beds and, carefully opening them, introduces into their bodies a tiny speck of some foreign substance. After that he replaces them in the sea. At the end of from three to five years the oyster has coated the foreign substance with nacre, and a pearl is the result.

Heat Bursts Gravel.

The bureau of standards has found that if the concrete is made with gravel, particularly siliceous gravel, there is a tendency for the stones to burst in extreme heat, which disintegrates the concrete. Accordingly it is recommended that gravel be avoided wherever possible, but if impossible the gravel concrete may be protected from extreme heat by coating it with an inch of cement, held in place by a wire mesh. Plasters may also be used in which asbestos is the principal constituent.

Admiral Wm. S. Sims Has Won Canadian Admiration As a Man and as a Sailor

ADMIRAL W. S. SIMS, of the United States navy, has created a sensation by his refusal to accept a D. S. medal from his Government. His reason is that the recommendations he made for honors were disregarded by Secretary of the Navy Daniels. Men who should have been decorated were passed over and men who had not their claim for reward were presented with medals, he says. Admiral Sims' action has produced a departmental storm which will not be settled until President Wilson makes a decision in the matter, and perhaps not then. Sims' career has always been of especial interest to Canadians because of the fact that he was born at Port Hope, Ont., although the son of American parents. His long-established admiration for Great Britain, his brilliant service in the war and his admirable published report on it have all combined to make Admiral Sims extremely popular both in Canada and in Great Britain. In the United States he is admired both for his professional qualities, which are second to none, and because of his habit of speaking out in meeting and ignoring precedent when he thinks the interests of the service he loves demand it. In any contest with Secretary Daniels he surely will have the popular support.

Sims came first into prominence in 1910, when he was visiting England as commander of the Minnesota. He was an invited guest at a Guildhall banquet and in the course of a speech he said, "If the time ever comes when the British Empire is seriously menaced by an external enemy it is my opinion that you may count on every man, every dollar and every drop of blood of your kindred across the seas." The remarks were applauded uproariously, not only by the Britishers present but by the eight hundred American sailors who were the guests of the Lord Mayor. But when a report of the speech reached Washington there was considerable dismay. Officialdom felt that Sims had gone too far; that he had no right to make remarks which might give offence to foreign countries and involve the American Government in disclaimers and explanations. So shortly afterwards Sims was publicly reprimanded by Admiral Schroeder, though it is not on record that he made any apology.

ADMIRAL W. S. SIMS.

The incident did not have any effect in checking his naval career, which is perhaps evidence that his superiors were not so gravely displeased with him as their official actions indicated. Indeed, by this time Sims was recognized as one of the most brilliant officers in the American navy. He had been Roosevelt's naval aide, and when inspector of target practice with the American Asiatic fleet he had made a report which resulted in revolutionizing American naval gunnery.

Partly because of his high standing and partly because of his intimate association with high officers in the British navy, Sims was chosen a short time before the United States entered the war to go to Britain and learn exactly what the situation was. The British Admiralty put its cards on the table and told him frankly that the German submarine peril remained a deadly threat to ultimate victory and made certain suggestions in the event of American co-operation. Sims made a strong report to his Government, recommending that what Great Britain suggested should be done. It was done, and the honor fell to Sims to do it.

One of the first orders he issued upon reaching British waters was that any of his officers who was heard criticizing the methods of any of the Allied navies would at once be shipped home. Whether the warning was needed we do not know, but it made for harmony and cheerful co-operation.

When the war ended Admiral Sims was offered a high decoration by King George, but he refused, although Gen. Pershing had accepted a similar honor. Upon his return to New York he was given a tremendous reception, and in the speeches he delivered in response to the welcomes that were extended to him he gave unreserved praise to the British navy and the British mercantile marine, declaring that they were the twin pillars upon which victory was reared.

Paying Toll for Neglect

Needless exposure to damp and cold frequently result in a derangement of the Kidneys and Bladder.

When these important organs fail to do their duty, various evils arise, such as rheumatism, swollen hands and ankles, stiff joints, lumbago, sciatic neuralgia, stone in the bladder or gravel, excruciating pains in the back and sides, constant headaches, dizziness, specks floating before the eyes, uneasiness of mind without reason, and general debility.

These are signs of serious kidney, and bladder trouble, which require immediate attention. The most dependable remedy is found in Gin Pills. They often prevent the operations which constant neglect may render necessary. Artemus Ward: the pen name under which the American humorist, Charles Farrar Browne, wrote, may have little in store for the present generation, but he made the United States and England laugh in his day. Of particular interest is his "A High-handed Outrage at Utica," which was associated with one of the greatest events in American history.

Secretary Stanton, of President Lincoln's cabinet, once told of a sudden and peremptory call to the White House made September 12th, 1862, to the War Cabinet. President Lincoln was absorbed in a little book, taking little notice of the cabinet members as they gathered in answer to the call. But finally he said: "Gentlemen, did you ever read anything from Artemus Ward? Let me read you a chapter that is very funny." When he was through not a member of the group did as much as smile.

Then the President read another chapter, and again he was the only one to laugh heartily. At last Lincoln laid the book down and said: "If I did not laugh I should die, and you need this medicine as much as I do." Then, putting his hand in his tall hat, he pulled out a paper, and, turning to the Cabinet, read to them the Emancipation Proclamation. The reading of selections from Artemus Ward thus served as a prelude to the issuing of one of the greatest American documents.

HAMILTON EXPECTS TO GET "BABE" DYE

TORONTO ATHLETE WILL LIKELY LINE UP WITH SHAUGHNESSY'S OUTFIT.

"Babe" Dye, the Toronto all-round athlete, didn't turn out with Frank Shaughnessy's Hamilton M-O team last year because he didn't like to desert the amateur ranks. He signed an agreement to go with "Shag," then changed his mind. This year however, he has no choice in the matter. The O. H. A. barred him from amateur hockey early in the present season, and if he wants to play baseball next summer he'll have to play with the professionals. Chances are that he will go to Hamilton if Shaughnessy is again at the wheel. "Babe" is strong for "Shag." He played for the big fellow's military team at Camp Petawawa when the war was raging, and he picked up a lot of knowledge from him. He believes that he can profit by spending a summer under "Shag's" management, and he has already intimated that he will come here for a try-out if "Shag" is boss. Whisperings from Toronto are to the effect that the Leafs are considering giving him a trial. However, when the spring training season comes around Jim McCaffery will probably forget the idea. It costs in the neighborhood of $500 to take a ball player south these days for even a short stay and as Dye would be an unknown quantity, the Leafs will think twice before spending that much on him.

DEMANDS MORE PAY

Neale of Cincinnati First of Champions to Return Unsigned Contract

Earle Neale, right fielder of the Cincinnati club, is a holdout. It was intimated by Garry Herrmann sometime ago that most of his players were inclined to balk at the terms offered them, but Neale is the first to frankly declare himself. A contract calling for 10 per cent. increase in the salary paid to him last season was sent to Neale a week ago, but he promptly returned it with a demand for a more substantial raise in pay. At the same time he informed his friends at Marietta, Ohio, where he is spending the winter, that if he didn't get the salary he wanted he would retire from baseball and enter business, etc., as baseball players always do in similar circumstances.

YANKEES LOST BECAUSE THEY BEAT THEMSELVES

FEAR OF WESTERN TRIP AGAIN SPELT DISASTER TO NEW YORK TEAM.

(By Billie Evans.)

Three times the New York American league club has been out in front around the Fourth of July. Then, just as the critics began giving them a chance to win the pennant, something would always happen. Injury, illness and other causes would rob the club of its punch, just when it seemed that victory was within its grasp. Last year the club seemed to have its one best chance to win, yet it flivvered badly. And, strangely enough, neither injuries or illness had a thing to do with the club's downfall. It was just one of those set-backs that happen every now and then in the best regulated ball clubs.

To my way of thinking, the psychology of the situation the club was facing just about wrecked the team's chances. I was umpiring in New York the day the club finished what had been a very prosperous stay at home. The Yankees left that evening for a trip that carried them through the west, and, if I am not mistaken, a series in Boston before their return home.

The team had a comfortable lead. Work and the club had been batting most timely. Bob Shawkey, ace of the Yankee staff, had won ten straight, and seemed to be at the top of his game. Roger Peckinpaugh who was leading the league in batting, had gone something like twenty-eight games without failing to get one or more hits, and was winning many a game with his bat.

I went west with the Yankees. The New York club was open in Cleveland, while I had been assigned to Detroit. At the station and on the train I talked with perhaps a half dozen of the veteran players. The approaching western trip seemed to have gotten all their goats. The very first thing each player would say would be, "Well, if we can get through this trip without any bad breaks we will have a pretty good chance." The players remembered two other seasons in which the trip west, immediately after the Fourth of July, had killed their hopes.

All the critics, in commenting on the club's chances, dwelled on that fact that the success or failure of the trip about to be made through the west would in a large manner determine their chances. That western trip had gotten on the players' nerves. They had a decided fear of it before the start.

What happened is now a matter of history. Cleveland beat Shawkey after his ten straight wins and started him on a losing streak. The Cleveland pitchers also stopped Peckinpaugh at the bat. These two things just about enabled Cleveland to take three out of four. That made the players believe the inevitable was to happen. The club next came to Detroit. The Tigers took four out of five games.

Losing seven out of the first nine games naturally had a most depressing effect on the club. It was unable to shake it off. The disastrous trip that was feared became a reality. The club never recovered, the old western trip had again killed them off. The club had actually beaten itself before the trip ever started.

C.G.E. TOOL ROOM CONTINUE WINNING

BELMONT CLUB GIVE THEM A SCARE BUT FADE IN THE LAST PERIOD

The C.G.E. tool room secured a strangle hold on the City League championship race last night by defeating the Belmont Club 8 to 5.

It was a battle royal all the way. The score stood to 2 to 0 at the end of the first period and 4 to 4 at the end of the second. Every player worked for all that was in him during the last period and the C. G. E squad finished strong, scoring 3 to their opponent's 1 in the final 20 minutes.

Darling, the goalie for the Belmonts, failed to put in an appearance and Holyman of baseball fame was substituted and played a stirling game, grabbing some very difficult shots.

The line-up:

Tool Room—Goal, G. Butcher; defence, Nelson and Dagan; centre, A Butcher; wings, Barrie and Bartlett.

Belmont Club—Goal, Holyman; defence, Head and Murray; centre, Gillespie; wings, Perry and Stewart.

In the opening fixture the Business College failed to hold the speedy Auburn bunch and went down to defeat 15 to 5.

LOCAL JUNIORS HOLD

measured his length on the ice. During his absence McEllerory shot from the side and the puck glanced in the corner off Sheehan's skate.

After a few minutes strenuous play Kelly grabbed a loose puck in front of the local net and put his team two up on the game and one on the round.

Then the Petes came to life and started pressing. Kelly was penalized and was shortly followed by Stoddard. Finally Jackson shot one from a difficult angle right at the goal post and it found its way into the net tieing the score in the round once more.

Before the period ended Foley tried a long shot from the wing. It was a beautiful shot and was in the upper right hand corner before McClary knew what had happened.

Second Fast and Furious.

The second period was fast and furious, from start to finish. It was the nicest exhibition of hockey seen in these parts in many a day.

The locals had the better of the play throughout. The work accomplished by that little forward line during those twenty minutes was amazing. Foley, Collins and Jackson or Thirnbeck, whichever happened to be on, simply dazed the large crowd with their combination. And when they lost the rubber they would swerve and tear after the man who took it from them and invariably catch him before he reached the defence.

But the play was not all Peterborough's. The Lindsay youngsters were just as earnest and displayed some very clever hockey. But try as they did they could not shake off those back-checkers.

Sheehan became over anxious and was chased for tripping. Green and Foley collided, both going to the ice. As the former rose, he apparently took a dizzy spell and was forced to leave the game for a few minutes. Mr. Ellerory was banished.

The puck was being carried from end to end at terrific speed, but neither team could find the net until a few minutes before the end of the period Kelly grabbed the puck and rushed it in out of a scrimmage.

McClary Hurt.

The pace they had been maintaining throughout began to tell on both teams in the third period. But they were game and soon settled down to break the tie on the round.

Foley lifted one from the wing and McClary stopped it with his face. After having it patched up he continued and received quite an ovation from his supporters.

Finally after a nice combination play Bell put his team one up on the round.

It looked for a minute as though Lindsay would score another, but the locals came to life and from that minute on never let up. Both teams were working like trojans to bring success to their colors.

Bell drew a penalty. Sheehan followed for chasing Kelly in a way that looked dangerous to the Lindsay player. Bell drew another penalty soon after returning and in his absence the locals claimed they scored. LeSeur stopped the play, but the goal umpire refused to count it.

Lindsay commenced to play for time, but the Peterborough forward line kept pressing the play and back checked furiously.

With one minute to go Lawson and Collins combined for their goal and a final game on neutral ice became necessary.

Joe Dwyer's pets deserve great credit for their showing last night and they will go into the final contest the favorites.

The line-up:

Referee—LeSeur.

Summary.

FIRST PERIOD.
Lindsay—McEllerory.
Lindsay—Kelly.
Peterborough—Jackson.

Tanks Were Not Wanted

By British War Office

An Amazing Story Told

THE more truth we learn about the management of the war the more miraculous does it seem that we were not beaten. Fortunately, as we know now, the management on the enemy's side was fumbling and blundersome also.

Sir Albert Stern makes some surprising revelations of British War Office mismanagement in his book "Tanks."

Hamilton Fyfe, writing in the London Mail says:

It is no exaggeration to say that if it had not been for the patience and persistence of two men, Sir Albert Stern and Sir Eustace Tennyson d'Eyncourt, we should never have had tanks at all. Do not think that Sir Albert claims any credit. He is modest and unassuming all through.

From the beginning they had a hard job to find any place to work in.

"No Government department would provide any office accommodation for us, so I took an office at my own expense. A controversy raged on this subject for six months between the Admiralty, the Ministry of Munitions and the Office of Works. The Admiralty referred to it as a troublesome case, and complained that Temporary Lieutenant Stern apparently did not understand the subtleties of the procedure in the Civil Service."

More than a year later Sir Albert on the point of leaving for France, where tanks had already arrived, was told by "a Civil Servant, an assistant secretary," that his offices were wanted and that all papers and drawings would be at once moved out.

"There was no time to argue; my train left in a few minutes. I told him that the department could not move, as it was concerned in matters of the greatest national importance and would require before long a very large building of its own. This had no effect on him, so I gave instructions to one of my officers in his presence to put an armed guard on my office while I was away and to resist any attack. Should he make an attempt he was to be arrested, taken to headquarters, tied to a stake for twenty-four hours, and the reason explained to all and sundry, especially newspaper reporters."

At one point "three military members of the Tank Committee, who a month before had never even seen a tank, laid down all rulings even with regard to design and production." Later Mr. Churchill, who at first had helped with energy and intelligence, weakened under pressure, as he said himself, "from generals at the War Office," and dismissed Sir Albert Stern, by this time lieutenant-colonel, appointing in his place Admiral Moore, who up to the date of his appointment had never set eyes upon a tank!

The strangest feature of the whole affair was that while the War Office demanded Sir Albert Stern's removal and tried to cut down the orders for tanks, G.H.Q. in France assured him of their support and gratitude, and wanted him to send more and more.

Twice the tanks came up against Sir William Robertson. "The first time was after the Army Council had cancelled an order for a thousand tanks in October, 1916.

"I immediately went to see Mr. Lloyd George, the Secretary of State for War. He said he had heard nothing of the instruction. I told him he could cancel my appointment, but he could not possibly get me to cancel the orders I had placed. Sir William Robertson then appeared and Mr. Lloyd George said he could not understand how this order could be cancelled without his knowledge, since he was President of the Army Council.

"The order for the production of 1,000 tanks was reinstated next day."

It was lucky that Sir Albert happened to be a banker, the son of a man very well known and with power in the city. He could stand up to the mandarins where a man without influence would have been "sunk without trace." It was lucky, too, that he was a man of resource and humor. When the War Office pressed him to let Russia have plans of our tanks in 1916 he opposed this strongly.

"I was convinced by the nature of the questions asked that the request really came from Germany. However, the Intelligence Department of the War Office, was very insistent, so it was decided to give the War Office a child's drawing and incorrect details. I am convinced they found their way into the hands of the German General Staff."

Deserved a Reward.

Lord Dunsverick questioned a sailor called Ginty about Andrew McMunn, with whom he was about to have dealings. Ginty answered: "I've no doubt in my own mind about where Andrew will go when his time comes." "You think you know him pretty well, then?" "Ay, I do. It would seem queer if I didn't, seeing that I've sailed his ships this ten year. Andrew McMunn will go to heaven." "Ah," said Lord Dunsverick, "he's a good man, then?" "I'll not go as far as to say precisely that," said Ginty, "but he's a man who never touches a drop of whiskey nor smokes a pipe of tobacco. It'll be very hard on him if he doesn't go to heaven after all he's missed in this world."

An Advance In Furs

DURING the past year we have maintained one price on every Fur article produced, based on the cost of skins from the trapper, and the work entailed in manufacturing. We believed it was good business to let our patrons have the benefit of all Fur Stock on hand at the lowest prices possible in keeping with their cost to us.

¶Many Fur Houses increased prices in ratio to the ever-advancing values of the raw fur market, so that as much as $100 to $150 increase on a garment was in evidence in the one item of Hudson Seal Garments alone.

¶We wish to announce that on and after February 15th all our Fur articles in Coon, Muskrat, Mink, Hudson Seal, Persian Lamb and Alaska Seal will be advanced according to the higher values now maintaining in these Furs; and all customers wishing to get Fur garments will have to purchase before February 15th to reap the benefit of the lower prevailing prices of this past season.

¶We deem it wise to let the public know of these coming advances, and still give them an opportunity to select from our present stock at present prices. However, in order to protect ourselves, we must limit this concession to a given time—February 15th—just about three weeks, after which prices will be advanced.

LAKEFIELD MEN AT CHURCH BANQUET HELD IN AID OF FORWARD MOVEMENT

Two Hundred and Twenty Listen to Music and Speeches by C. E. Sisson, Rev. A. J. Thomas, and Rev. R. P. McKay—To be Made Annual Affair.

(Special to The Review.)

Lakefield, Jan. 30.—The Forward Movement received a great impetus last night (Thursday, 29th) when over two hundred men of the Anglican, Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian churches attended a banquet in the Methodist Church, Lakefield. The hall was tastefully decorated with Forward Movement posters of the co-operative churches. W. H. Casement, Esq., was the efficient chairman and rousing addresses were given by Mr. C. E. Sissons, of Peterborough, and Revs. Amos J. Thomas, M.A., B.D., Peterborough, and Dr. R. P. Mackay, Toronto.

The speeches gripped the men as was evidenced by the resolution of J. A. Porter (Presbyterian), seconded by W. M. Graham (Anglican) and supported by Wm. Harper (Methodist) and Alex. MacDonald (Baptist), and enthusiastically carried by a standing vote, "That the laymen assembled here tonight believe that an inter-church men's banquet should be an annual affair here and we request the ministers to put it in their calendar."

Nuggets From the Speeches.

If you stand outside a movement you get tired of it—not so if you are in it.—R. P. Mackay.

The Movement is not the product of the human intellect—it is of God.—C. E. Sissons.

I wouldn't like to stand in the shoes of any man who, in any way, opposes the Forward Movement.—Amos J. Thomas.

Canadians have been compelled to handle big problems and to make sacrifices. Now we must see things in a big way religiously.—C. E. Sissons.

There is no intelligent man or woman who knows, who believes the Forward Movement is of man. It is of God and I believe it more and more.—Amos J. Thomas.

Recent years have given us new conceptions of philanthropy. Large contributions have been made for worthy patriotic purposes. We Canadians can do the unexpected.—R. P. Mackay.

We have new conceptions of democracy. An unintelligent democracy may mean Bolshevism as in Russia. There must be a right spirit within and that is the meaning of the Forward Movement.—R. P. Mackay.

The church has been thinking of small things and not attempting big things. This Forward Movement appeals to us as a big thing worth while.—Amos J. Thomas.

We needed the Forward Movement that we might get a firmer grasp of the things we believe.—C. E. Sissons.

This Forward Movement is the biggest thing in the world.—C. E. Sissons.

The Forward Movement is a spiritual undertaking with personal and financial objectives. It should lift the church to a higher, ore influential plane.—Amos J. Thomas.

The church has not been on its knees as much as it should have been.—Amos J. Thomas.

Every Presbytery from ocean to ocean has endorsed the Movement. Some individual ministers have failed and in some cases have been

EX-WARDEN BROWN HONORED BY COUNCIL

HAS 14 YEARS MEMBER OF TOWNSHIP COUNCIL AND FOR 8 YEARS, REEVE

A dinner was held in the Paris Cafe by the county councillors now in session to honor a retiring member who was for several years one of the most faithful and capable members of the body. It was ex-Warden Wm. Brown, of Asphodel.

Mr. Brown spent 14 years in his township council, eight years of which he was a member of the County Council. In 1917 he served as warden and the year was a marked success in county affairs, doing credit to the faithful and efficient services of Mr. Brown.

Last year he was chairman of the committee for the House of Refuge and it was while he was here submitting his report that his former colleagues did him honor at the banquet.

Reeve Scott, who succeeds Mr. Brown upon the latter's retirement, has been a life-long neighbor of the former and a very intimate friend.

NO PATRONAGE GOES TAKING NEXT CENSUS

MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT WILL HAVE NO SAY IN NAMING ENUMERATORS

Ottawa, Jan. 30.—The next decennial census enumeration takes place in June, 1921, and already the department is making preparations for it. In the last census 9,703 enumerators were employed, and next year the number will probably be greater.

Appointments to this work in the days of political patronage proved an easy way for members of Parliament to discharge political obligations, but hereafter it will probably be handled by the Civil Service Commission.

Those who object to the complete abolition of political patronage point to this as an example of how the new system often works cumbrously. While the member for the constituency would appear to be the most suitable person to whom to apply for information as to suitable men, that is now expressly forbidden by the Civil Service Commission Act, even though his recommendations should be non-partisan. The Commission must hunt out its own men without reference to the representative in Parliament.

The old rate of payment for the week varied according to local conditions, the general rule being that the enumerator got 5 cents per name with 25 cents for each farm, although where the country was sparsely populated he was usually paid by the day.

LETTISH ARMY HAS MADE BIG ADVANCE IN WEST RUSSIA

PENETRATES SIXTY-FOUR MILES ALONG A FRONT OF NINETY MILES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Jan. 30.—Difficulties of supply have probably stopped the advance of the Bolshevik troops along the Siberian railroad west of Irkutsk, according to advices to the War Office. All resistance to the Soviet army seems to have disappeared. Bolshevik detachments are reported to have reached the Chinese frontier southeast of Bisk. Latest reports seem to indicate that the relations between the Government established after the capture of Admiral Kolchak and the Czecho-Slovaks have become worse and that Bolshevism appears to be gaining ground as a result of Red agents working in front of the Bolshevik army. Encounters between General Semenoff's troops and Czech detachments are reported.

In South Russia the Bolsheviki have resumed the advance against Gen Denekine. On the western half of the front the main effort of Soviet troops appears to be directed southward against the Crimea and southwestward against the Kherson-Nikolaieff-Odessa area. On the eastern half of the front, a threatening Red advance along the western shores of the Caspian Sea has been checked and thrown back. Two reports concur in saying Denekine's retreat is being carried out in orderly manner. In Western Russia the Lettish advances along a ninety-mile front has attained a maximum penetration of about sixty-five miles.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 30.—Revised figures compiled by British statisticians on the contributions of various allied nations to the fighting forces during the war place Canada well in the lead of the overseas Dominions not employing native troops. The Dominion is credited with 640,886 effective, Australia coming next with 416,809. India's army composed largely of native troops, was 1,401,350.

The statement points out that the complete defeat and destruction of the Turkish army was effected by the British alone and a total of eighty-five thousand prisoners taken.

TORONTO MORALITY OFFICERS PROTEST AGAINST BETTING ON HORSE RACES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 30.—John Lumsden Ottawa, breeder of race horses in the United States, stated this morning before the Royal Commission investigating race tracks and betting that the closing up of race tracks in the Dominion had discouraged him from breeding thoroughbreds in Canada.

Another feature of the morning hearing was the view of Inspector McKinney, of the Toronto Morality Department, that race track betting was responsible for starting young men along the path of gambling. Quite a number of witnesses were heard and the general opinion appeared to be that racing was not to be discouraged.

Heriton Simonvitch was sentenced to twelve years in the penitentiary for manslaughter of John Repchinster at Hamilton.

CANADIAN LABOR DELEGATES FAIL TO SHOW UP AT CONFERÉNCE IN PARIS

Deputy Minister of Labor Acland and President Tom Moore are Reported Missing.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 30.—The Canadian dollar is worth 88.25 cents in New York today. Closing yesterday at discount of eleven per cent., Canadian exchange fell again this morning to a discount of 11⅛ to 11¾ per cent. Situation is causing much anxiety.

This morning there was a meeting of the Cabinet Council and the exchange question, it is understood, was discussed. It is felt, however that anything Canada could do at the present time would not be o. great effect. To ship more gold to New York would mean the depletion still further of the Canadian gold reserve and would not materially affect the situation.

PETERBORO INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION REQUESTS A $3,000 GRANT FROM COUNTY

Large Deputation Waits on County Council and Urge Them to Aid in the Erection of Much Needed Buildings

A large deputation from the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition waited on the County Council this afternoon and asked for a $3000 grant toward the erection of buildings on the grounds that would improve the Exhibition greatly.

President Roland Denne pointed out that a new cattle building was required. In fact, to make the Exhibition what is desired, many new improvements must be placed upon the grounds. He sincerely hoped the Council would see its way clear to grant $3000 toward this object.

Mr. H. G. Webber spoke of the great advertising value a good exhibition was to a whole community. He hoped the board of directors would receive the whole-hearted support of the County Council and that they would see fit to grant the society's request for $3000.

Mr. G. O. Cameron said that he considered the Peterborough Industrial Exhibtion was largely responsible for the people of this city and county being to such a large extent of one accord in the advancement of the community as a whole. He hoped that with the aid of the various organizations and grants from city and county, the Peterborough Exhibition could be made one of Dominion-wide reputation.

Wm. Stangegran said that they were all there for work, and it was up to the country and city people to push the Exhibition and make it one that will bring great benefit to all the citizins.

$18,000 Spent in Two Years

Mr. Reg. Turner made the startling announcement that in the last two years nearly $18,000 had been expended on improvements to the grounds and buildings. It was the intention of the board to tree the grounds and make it a comfortable picnic grounds for the country people when they came to the city.

He pointed out how much in earnest some of the people were toward advancing the interests of the Exhibition. When the grounds were to be levelled, volunteer labor was supplied by the county enthusiasts and a great deal of work accomplished in this way. And the manufacturers of the city had practicaly decided to erect a building for the display of their goods.

Warden Nichols assured the deputation that the Council felt they should assist in this work, and the question of the amount they felt they could grant would receive their earnest consideration.

BRITISH LABOR LEADER SAYS LLOYD GEORGE'S PLAN FINDS NO FAVOR

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 30.—Arthur Henderson, Labor leader, speaking on his return from Ireland, where he and his colleagues made a tour of inspection and inquiry, says the people there frankly declare for an independent republic. This spirit, he says, is not confined to Dublin resentment. It is universal in opposition to the Premier's scheme, his proposals being regarded with a feeling little short of contempt.

PROPOSES A REFERENDUM

As to State Taking Over the Coal Mines of Great Britain

London, Jan. 30.—Premier Lloyd George is about to offer miners a proposition that referendum of the twenty million electors of Great Britain be taken on the question of the nationalization of coal mines it is asserted by The Evening Globe today.

MORPHY FOR SOLICITOR-GEN'L.

Member for North Perth May Succeed Hon. Hugh Guthrie

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 30. — The appointment of Hon. Hugh Guthrie as Minister of Militia is likely to be followed by the appointment of a new Solicitor General. Temporarily, Mr. Guthrie is also acting as Solicitor General, but a successor in that office has, it is understood, been under consideration. The name of H. B. Morphy, North Perth, is suggested, but his appointment would necessitate a bye-election.

WAR VETERANS SEEK GRANT FROM COUNTY

ASK THE COUNTY COUNCIL TO PAY OFF THEIR $2,000 DEBT

His Honor Judge Huycke, Mr. G. N. Gordon, Mr. J. F. Strickland, Mr. Robert Muir and Mr. S. Whatley formed a deputation to the County Council this morning on behalf of the Great War Veterans' Association.

The judge called the attention of the Council to the fact that the City Council had willingly given $110,000 to the G.W.V.A. for the purchasing and fixing up of their club rooms and hall. After a great deal of labor, donated by veterans, the hall has been completed and efficiently equipped. There is, however, a $2,000 debt yet to be paid off and as the county have not as yet contributed anything toward the hall it was felt they might clear the veterans of all future obligations.

It was stated that 23 per cent. of the members of the local association were from the county. "Is it not your duty and your privilege to grant this $2,000 for the boys who had sacrificed so much.

Examples of Work.

Secretary Whatley explained that the work carried on by the association was not confined to the city nor to the members of the Great War Veterans. Provided a man has been a soldier he receives the benefits.

He told of a case at Keene where only recently five small children were left orphans. The local branch of the War Veterans had taken the case up and will see that the children are properly cared for. In many other ways the association is aiding the war veterans of the county and are anxious to do more if they are given the opportunity.

Warden Nicholls assured the deputation that the matter would receive the careful consideration of the Council.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 30, 1920.

EX-WARDEN BROWN.

IT IS SELDOM that a county official retires from office carrying with him the esteem and respect of his constituents and of those who have been associated with him in the discharge of his public duties, to the same degree as that enjoyed by ex-Warden Max Brown, who returned to private life with the close of last year, after a long and honorable term of service. Mr Brown was for fourteen years in the Asphodel township council, eight years as reeve, during which latter period he was recognized as one of the ablest legislators among the county legislators. He was especially interested in the care of the indigent of the county. In recognition of this fact he was made chairman of the House of Refuge committee, and this made it necessary for him to appear before the Council yesterday to present his report, a copy of which was published in the local press. The members of the Council seized the opportunity to entertain the ex-Warden at an informal dinner Wednesday night, and at this function many kind things were said of the veteran county legislator.

Mr. Brown was always devoted to the interests of the constituents that for fourteen years honored him with their confidence. In three years he secured for Asphodel the sum of $17,825 for the construction of bridges. He was elected Warden in 1917. Last year he decided to retire. His successor, Councillor Scott, is a lifelong neighbor of the ex-Warden. He is recognized as a good man and one who will be obliged to go some to equal the record of his predecessor.

NO REASON TO WORRY.

THE EXAMINER has been worrying itself lest the Drury Government decide to abandon the housing plan of its predecessors and that the proposed system cannot be put into operation in this city. The alarm of our contemporary has spread to the members of the Housing Commission, who have decided to find out for themselves.

There is really no cause to worry. The other day a deputation from Niagara Falls waited upon Provincial Secretary Nixon and asked for another loan of $500.000 Last year the municipality received and expended a loan of $200,000 in building houses for the workingmen, and the fact that they came again for over double that amount is the best evidence that the experiment has proved entirely satisfactory

Mr. Nixon went as far as he could when he promised consideration. He stated, however, that application was to be made to the Dominion Government for a portion of the fund set aside for this purpose. This is conclusive evidence that the Province itself will appropriate money for the housing plan, as this is one of the conditions that must be complied with before Federal aid is granted. All doubts should now be set at rest. The local Housing Commission can rest assured that their services will be required and that they will be given an opportunity to serve the city in the capacity for which they were appointed. It is unbelievable that any member of the City Council will offer any serious opposition to applying to the Legislature for a loan, as the plan has already passed beyond the experimental stage

THE DOMINION BANK.

IN ORDER THAT a banking institution may attain success it is necessary, speaking in general terms, that the management should on the one hand be characterized by caution and on the other hand by a spirit of enterprise, each being the complement of the other.

Among the Canadian banks which are noted for their strength in this two-fold respect is the Dominion Bank, as has been evidenced by the results obtained during 1919 and revealed in the annual statement presented to the shareholders at the annual meeting held in Toronto on Wednesday, January 28. The bank appears to have had the most satisfactory year in its long experience.

Net profits amounted to $1.169.703, an increase of $83,205 as compared with 1918. On the total capital and reserve these profits were equal to 9 per cent. against 8.35 per cent. for the previous twelve months

To the shareholders a bonus of one per cent. was paid in addition to the regular dividends amounting to twelve per cent for the year. The total amount carried forward to profit and loss account, after deducting $780,000 for dividend and bonus payments., $40.000 for contribution to pension, patriotic and other funds, and writing off $300,000 on bank premises, was $495,700, a sum greater than at the close of the previous year by approximately $50.000.

In respect to assets, the bank has very materially strengthened its position during the past twelve months In the total assets, which at December 31st last amounted to $143.500,000, there was a gain of no less than $10,000,000. But the particularly gratifying feature was the growth in the immediately available assets to $70,075,000, an increase for the year of $6,546,000, at which figure they are equal to 54 per cent. of the bank's liabilities to the public. Cash assets alone, which stand at $31,902,000, an increase of $3,405,000, amount to 24.59 per cent. of the public liabilities.

An indication of the bank's expansion during the year is found in the deposits and commercial loans. In the former there was an increase of $15,307,000, the total at December 31st being $111,414,000, a result which reflects increased confidence in the bank as well as the prosperity of the Canadian people.

Commercial loans at the end of 1919 stood at $66,400,000, an increase for the twelve months of $3,328,000.

The capital stock and reserve fund of the bank stand at $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 respectively, a total of $13,000,000.

AN OLD TIMER.

(Orillia Packet.)

TO AN OLD-TIMER, Readhead, the name of the gentleman spoken of as a candidate in Halton, is suggestive of the peripatetic phrenologist of from forty to sixty years ago. Generally he was a source of much entertainment in the smaller centres of population, where everybody knew everybody else, and public "readings" of the heads of well-known men could be checked by an intimate knowledge of their outstanding characteristics. The accuracy in delineation often, indeed generally, achieved by the cleverest of these phrenologists compelled at least a measure of belief in the science, but the extreme claims made on its behalf were so manifestly empirical that public interest gradually died out One strikingly clever exponent of phrenology who gave public demonstrations hereabouts sixty years ago and more, was a gifted Irishman named O'Leary. Not only was he a marvelous reader of character, but he had a ready tongue, a neat gift of phrasing, a liberal store of proverbial philosophy, and absolute fearlessness when it suited his purpose to be frank at the expense of the subject under his hands. One of O'Leary's sons was, years later, and for many years, police magistrate of Lindsay, and a daughter married the late E. D. Hand, the founder of the Lindsay Advocate, the Bobcaygeon Independent, and the Fenelon Falls Gazette.

War Proved Undoing of Many Women

Women are getting in everywhere says a Glasgow writer. Some into parliament. Some into disgrace.

It is a curious fact that while the war proved the making of many women, it proved the undoing of many others.

Thousands revealed by their extraordinary fine public service to what heights they could rise.

Others were, and are, carelessly bent on showing to what low and unsavory depths its is possible for a woman to sink

The reading of their unedifying prowess is a sad business. For the world expects, and always will do, so much from the women—those potential mothers of the race. "In whose loins," as someone finely put it, "all posterity slumbers." That is why we sigh to hear of them falling from grace into disgrace.

Take the case of the Manchester woman—though, why on earth they should call a woman of 29 a "pretty young girl" is past my understanding —did they wish to assure the public that her tender years were the best excuse for her disreputable crime?

She, it will be remembered, got a trifling sentence of twelve months for the defalcation of $110,000.

All of this she spent in fast and riotous living—mainly for clothes to her back, wines to offer her pals, fine furniture and surroundings to please the eye, and stakes to gamble with.

Certainly nice and suitable occupations for a "young and pretty girl."

When arrested she said: "I cannot lie. I had the money."

Observe the subtle distinction.

She might have said instead: "I could pinch $110,000, but it's against my principles to tell a fib."

"Romance," said one account of the proceedings, "still clings to her, for as soon as she comes out of prison an officer will marry her."

And, "On hearing the sentence she clasped her hands, swaying slightly backward. A wardress took her gently by the hand and led her away."

"There was no suggestion of immorality," said her counsel.

It all depends on what you call immorality. Personally, I should consider an "unfortunate", who plies her calling in many cases because she has never had a decent chance in life, a whiter person than the worldly, ambitious cashier who had nothing better to do with the money she stole than to satisfy her lust for clothes, excitement and fine living.

Cold-Blooded Caddishness.

For sheer, cold-blooded, heartless caddishness commend me to the statement of a wife in a recent Scottish divorce suit.

During the war the woman, having lost her taste for her husband, is alleged to have had this message sent him:

"That the only thing she thought he (the husband) could do, was to go away and get killed as soon as possible."

The husband, chivalrous man, said he didn't believe it.

So far, I have not read any denial of it.

There was that unsavory affair some days ago where a woman engaged in the gentle art of taking unto herself a lover while still a married woman, had the assistance of her own daughter in maintaining the deception.

Between the two of these gentle women, the elder's intrigue with a treacherous guest of the house continued right under the nose of the husband until, and properly, too, it ended in the wronged man getting a release from the company of his wife and step-daughter.

Imagine, if you can, the mentality of the mother who could drag her child down into the filthy mire of her illicit "carrying on."

Hard to Beat.

Here is another case.

It is true it is neither disgusting nor heinous as was the former, but in its way it is hard to beat.

A woman who, for some reason nobody particularly wants to fathom, has not exchanged speech with her husband for three years, blabs, via a newspaper serial, the whole dull and uninteresting history of her life to the public. Her relations with her "silent" husband, the absurd, pigheaded ways of both of them, revealed for anyone to read who has the necessary patience.

One feels rather sorry for the man in the case.

Here is a woman who is accepting the shelter of her husband's roof, who presumably share his money and comfort, who yet cooly takes everyone into her confidence about their personal relationship.

Words fail me when I come to the case of the blackguardly Willesden wife who brazenly introduced her blackguardly paramor into the home and spent the night with him while her lawful husband remained still in

COURTS AND THEIR CONSTITUTIONS

Judge Huycke Delivers Second of Series of Lectures at the Y. W. C. A.

Marked with an increasing interest was the second of a series of lectures by His Honor Judge Huycke, in the Y. W. C. A., last evening. In a brief and concise address entitled: "Courts and their Constitution," the speaker brought before his listeners some of the most vital elements in the study of laws. Dealing with this issue in a clear and understandable manner, which occasioned much appreciation, His Honor resumed the thread of his discourse where he had left off in his address of last week, touching on that period of history when the United States broke away from British rule, pointing out that they adopted our law and that the basis of their law and ours is the common law.

In 1792 our law in Ontario was made permanently a British law. It always had been a British law. Had it not been for this act we would all have been part and parcel of the United States. In 1994 they were granted the privilege of adhering to their own civil law. These independent states, after the revoluton were sized with the determination that all Canada would be part and parcel of them. However, the French people had found the British system of law very satisfactory, whereby they had been given many rights and privileges, and accordingly refused to join in this movement and strongly opposed its leader, General Arnold. Were it not for their keen appreciation of British justice, we would be differently situated from what we are today.

Continuing, the speaker touched on the rule of Kings, classifying them into two separate divisions. Those who do as they like; those who do as the people like or in other words the unconstitutional and the constitutional monarchy.

Our own is the constitutional. Our King must administer law in accordance with the desires of his subjects. Dwelling on the attitude of some individuals as regards law, His Honor, explained that law is not for the oppression of a subject—not for the repressing of a people, but for the protection of all. As explanatory of this, the speaker quoted an expression from the Magna Charter: "We will not sell, we will not deny, we will not make differences in law, and right to any person." For the protection of the personal rights of any subject, there is the remedial law whereby he may avenge those who do him injury and for the protection of the individual, we have what is called a "court." The original inforcer of the law was the king. Tracing back the derivation of this word "king", we find that it means "thinking man" "knowing man,', man who is wise, considerate, discreet and therefore qualified to adjust the differences between his people. Tracing the origin of the term "court,' we cull from ancient literature such sentences as the "king in his own court yard." All matters of legal importance were disposed of by the king in his own court yard, hence the word "court." But as time went on the differences among the people increased, as regards numbers, wealth, etc., rendering it impossible for the king to be present in person on all such occasions. He then appointed a deputy, and these deputies are judges. A judge is the kings representative He administers law in accordance with the king's will and justice in accordance with law. In every court room the king is present theoratically.

WIT AND WISDOM

Brown—Stout people, they say, are rarely guilty of meanness or crime.

Robinson— Well, you see, it's so dificult for them to stoop to anything low.

They Both Found Out

Bil — How did Blank lose the fingers of his right hand?

Dick— Put them in a horses mouth to see how many teeth he had.

Bill— And then what happened

Dick— The horse closed his mouth to see how many fingers Blank had.

Putting it Gently

Look here! Do you mean to say I stole the $5 bill you lost?"

"No, I don't say that.'

"Well, what do you say?"

"Well, I say that if you hadn't helped me look for it, I might have found it."

Not What She Expected

Lily— She refused him because she was sure he would propose again.

Milly—And did he?

Lily — Yes; but to another girl.

Misnomer

Mrs. Crabshaw— I often doubt if there is any such thing in this world as poetic justice.

Crabshaw— If there were my dear, something would surely be done to some of those fellows who write free verse.

Another "Dry" Vote

A grimy hand shot up from the back of the class.

"Please, teacher," came a small voice, "a washed child dreads the water.'

The Finishing Touch.

Richard— They say he gave you a black eye?

Robert—Thats the way people exaggerate. I had the eye already. He merely laid on the color.

OUR PHOTO GALLERY

Born in 1851, at a little Staffordshire village on the River Penk, in the Midlands of England, eldest son of the Walstanton estate, Penkhull, Sir Oliver Iodge took his university course at University College, London, not at either of the ancient universities of Oxford and Cambridge. He had great natural abilities in mathematics, and was a close observer of nature as a lad. At thirty he was Professor of Physics at Liverpool University, six years later was awarded the Rumford Medal of the Royal Society.

Then followed the recognition of his daring and eminent invasion of new fields of scientific research as president of the Mathematical and Physical section of the British Association; president of the Physical Siciety of London as well as president of the Society of Psychical Research.

Professor Lodge, about this time, came in personal contact with the late W. T. Stead, the well-known journalist and exponent of the psychic cult, and, although Lodge's investigations into the occult, which followed upon this acquaintanceship estranged him for a time from the professional friendship of many of his scientific confreres, the sincerity of the man, together with his immense labours in physical science, were held to be so important and original in their grasp of new possibilities for that particular science, that he was unanimously elected to the banner position in the scientific world, the presidency of the British Association, 1913-14.

For example, Sir Oliver predicted with an amplitude of data derived from daring experiments in streets and lanes, that it was only a question of time when London would be smokeles and fogless. His scientific work included investigations on lightning, the seat of the electromotive force in the voltaic cell, the speed of the ion wireless telegraphy, the motion of the aether near the earth, and the application of electricity to the disposal of dust.

Consequently, when this eminent scientist announced to the world that his investigations into the occultism supplied presumptive evidence of the maintenance of actual, active personality beyond the grave, the effect was world-wide and startling. Among the disciples of spiritism, and especially among the many fakirs whom Lodge denounces with scathing satire, a new impetus was given to the whole trend of psychical research and spiritualism.

Like Wallace, Crookes, and Myers, Professor Lodge treated the "evidences" at first as based upon the mysterious expression of sub-conscious phenomena, aided by imaginative minds. Once convinced, however, that what he had tested could not be entirely explained on this hypothesis, the scientist applied the principles of laboratorical analysis to the probe of seances, mediumistic messages, and so-caled spirit materialistation.

The final result was "Raymond' the biography of his son who fell in battle during the great war. The Family Herald and Weekly Star has already reviewed the pretensions of that work.

Canadians will probably soon hear and see this truly great man for themeslves. He brings to his platform work a striking personality, an engaging manner, a fertile store of knowledge bearing upon the literature of the subject, while he is an orator among orators. He is seventy years of age, and it is said of him as it was of Gladstone that he is "remarkably young for his years!"

The Brantford 50.000 Club, which last year was largely instrumental in having Bellview and Parkdale annexed, is at work now striving for the annexation of the Grandview district.

THE SECOND ANNUAL SALE OF THE PETERBORO SHORTHORNS ASSOCIATION

The second annual sale of the Peterborough Pure-bred Shorthorn Association was held yesterday afternoon in the yard of the Montgomery Hotel. The sale was very successful, and under the direction of Auctioneer George Jackson and son, of Port Perry, continued merrily throughout the afternoon.

At the conclusion of the sale Mr. Jackson complimented the association on its progress and the interest the farmers of the Peterborough district were evidently taking in good breeding. He recommended to the farmers that when they bring their stock for sale they put it in good condition because such an animal always brought a great deal more.

What Is a Billion?

In Great Britain and Germany a billion is a million millions (1,000,000,000,000). In Canada and the United States the French billion is used—one thousand millions (1,000,000,000). The French "milliard" and "billion" are of equal value. In France and America, the English billion is called a trillion, the English trillion a quintillion, the English quadrillion a septillion, and the English quintillion a nonillion, as shown by the following table, the first column of which gives the number of noughts that follow the figure "1," when the amounts are given in figures:

French.	English.
6 Million	Million
9 Billion	Thousand Million
12 Trillion	Billion
15 Quadrillion	Thousand Billion
18 Quintillion	Trillion
21 Sextillion	Thousand Trillion
24 Septillion	Quadrillion
27 Octillion	Thousand Quadrillion
30 Nonillion	Quintillion
33 Decillion	Thousand Quintillion

You will observe that in the French system each denomination is a thousand times the preceding one, while in the English system, the trillion is a million times a billion, a quadrillion a million times a trillion, etc. Hence the English quintillion is a million million times as much as the French quintillion.

His Request.

Mr. and Mrs. Newbride had at last obtained a villa in the suburbs, and Mr. Newbride was hanging the pictures. There was a certain photograph of his wife which he decided must be hung up, but which was too small to suspend from the rail by a cord. He thereupon got a substantial nail and hammered it into the wall. There came a knock at the door. "It's Mr. Nexdor," said his wife, running to the window. "Your hammering has disturbed him." Mr. Newbride hastened to apologize. "Oh, I don't mind the noise," replied Mr. Nexdor, cheerily, "I only came to ask if I might hang a picture on the other end of the nail."

Value of Study.

"No lesson you learn in the classroom is of much use unless you apply it in every day life," said a school superintendent addressing an incoming High School class. "Don't just learn that two and two make four for recitation purposes, but apply that knowledge whenever the occasion requires. Like the lad who was studying industrial economy—"Isn't it romantic sitting out here by the mellow light of the moon?" murmured the girl. 'Yes,' he answered, 'and besides your father can't kick about his electric light bill'."

Frogs and Cigarettes.

Cigarette smoking does not hurt frogs! So says the American Chemical society after experimenting to find the least injurious cigarette, cigar or pipe.

Suggested Change.

Jules, the head waiter, desires to submit an amendment or a reservation or something to change the old motto to "Eat, Drink, but Be Wary."

Immensity of Oceans.

So vast are the contents of the oceans that it would take 2,000,000 years for all the sea water in the world to flow over Niagara.

Hilarious Bride.

Because a London bride, aged forty-one, got drunk on her wedding day and kicked a police sergeant, she spent her honeymoon in jail.

On Catamount Road

By IZOLA FORRESTER

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Audrey listened anxiously. Surely there came the unaccustomed throb of a motor somewhere along the hill road. Didn't they know, she thought, that no cars ever used it, that it zigzagged along the edge of the ravine with a sheer drop of two hundred and eighty feet to the bottom of the river? She rose, the tin pint pails filled with huckleberries dangling from a rope around her waist, and pushed back her hair to shade her eyes.

"Say!" she called as loudly as she could. "Say! Look out for the road!"

She held her breath for an answer, but the hum of the motor drowned her voice, and as the low gray roadster swept around the bend, it hit a broken place in the road, and was gone crashing down into the tree tops before she could make a sound.

So adventure and excitement became unexpected guests in Catamount valley, and for weeks there lay in the Pendleton cabin a woman with wide, somber, dark eyes and silent lips, who groped her way back from the shadows almost regretfully.

The chauffeur and two men had been taken up to the hospital at Kingsley. Audrey heard that one of them died. Mrs. Stewart had not seemed interested when she told her this, nor had she even asked which one. Audrey hoped privately it wasn't the young one with the curly blond hair and little short-cropped mustache in the army uniform. There had been only two boys to go out from the valley to wear khaki, and she felt an added interest in this youngster who seemed to have escaped the perils of war to become acquainted with death in Catamount ravine.

Then one day, when she was helping Mrs. Stewart to slip into a negligee and try to sit up awhile, she turned over a folded leather case in her smaller suitcase. It opened and she saw a photograph of the same face, only younger, and this time its owner wore riding clothes. Mrs. Stewart glanced at her as she bent over it absorbedly.

"Was he the one?" she asked in a hushed tone, and her fingers twisted the knotted fringe of the white coverlid.

"Why, I don't know," Audrey answered eagerly. "I liked him best. The other man swore terribly when they were carrying him, and this one never said a thing and they had to get him up with ropes."

Mrs. Stewart shuddered. She tried to put from her the reality of that last [illegible] that was to have ended in a finality so different to the one that overtook them all. Ivan had been very silent. She had told him when they left Kingsley that she would give him his answer before they reached their destination. And Dick had sat with her in the back, talking and laughing all the way on the last stretch, never dreaming how, in his joy of youth he was turning her from the thought of marrying simply for money and the rest from eternal worry. They had passed mountain shacks along the way, and she had looked at them with curious eyes. Could women be happy in such places with only love?

It was the fourth week when he came, the young one, as Audrey always called him to herself. It had been the chauffeur who had died, he told them. Mr. Radinoff was doing well, in fact intended returning to New York on Monday and sailing the following week. Mrs. Stewart never even colored at his news, and Audrey wondered which one she cared for.

Then followed weeks of enchantment. Mrs. Stewart had insisted on making the journey back to the city for special treatment, she said, and while she was gone Dick Granger stayed at the cabin. Her father liked him. It roused him to have some one to talk to, and Dick liked to go over his collections with him and help him. It was such an old story to Audrey she never realized what a strange life they led up on the side of Shamokin mountain, she and the old scholarly naturalist.

"It's just always been this way," she told Dick. "I was born right here, and my mother died here. I love it all, and I've been away to school twice, but I always long to come back. It's so free, don't you know? Why, your car was the first that has ever come over our road. Everybody knew how dangerous it was. It's lucky you're alive."

"Isn't it?" Dick smiled down at her standing six feet two in his lieutenant uniform. "Do you know, I wish I could always stay here now. I haven't any real home. My people were New Yorkers, but my mother's married again, and I'm rather the odd gosling. I used to wish when we were coming back that I had some one who was waiting for me over here."

"Wasn't—" Audrey checked herself. Possibly Mrs. Stewart would not like to have her use her name. But Dick caught the inference and shook his head.

"She's never thought of me twice seriously. Radinoff can give her everything she wants in life. They're going to be married in Paris."

"They are?" Audrey leaned forward in amazement. "Why, I thought of course she was coming back here."

"Why?"

"For you" she said briefly, quite as if he had been some part of Mrs. Stewart's luggage which she left behind. "What on earth did you stay here so long for if you didn't expect her back?"

"I like it here," Dick told her firmly. "Maybe when I leave the army I'll take a slice of the mountain, too, and live near your father. I'm sick of noise and turmoil and everything like that. I want—well, just this."

He half closed his eyes and looked down at the panorama outspread below them. Hills breaking from the morning haze, acreage of green fields in little tilted squares down in the valley, with the river glittering like silver here and there, and back of them the mountains and green silences.

"I am coming back to stay here," he added. "Aren't you glad, Audrey?"

"I don't know," she frowned. "Father likes it, but he's old, and I like it, I guess because it's home, and I don't know any better, but you're a man, Dick. You don't have to stay away from people and things that are happening. I'd hate to think you'd lose your pace. I always think of you as a fighter. Maybe it would have been better if you had married Mrs. Stewart. I've seen her look at your picture, and I'm sure she would have cared for you if you'd only tried harder."

"I didn't want to," he answered. "I met them both in Paris while she was in war work there, and I was lonesome. She was mighty kind to me, and I suppose I was a bit sentimental, but, Audrey, that isn't love."

Audrey stood up suddenly and pointed down the valley. There was a fire in his eyes she could not meet.

"On clear days you can see way down to the little hill this side of Kingsley."

"Isn't that nice," laughed Dick. He reached over her shoulders, and took her hands in his, drawing them back to his lips. "Maybe we'll build our shack right here, Audrey. You can't send me away when I want to stay. I've fought all I want to. Now I want a home and you."

Romance in History.

It was in June, 1671, that the French took over the northern portion of the Province of Ontario. Most Canadians are still interested in the exploits of the coureur des bois, and in the adventures of Perrot, the most picturesque figure in the ceremony of June, 1671, when the Deputy Governor, "in the name of the High High, Most Powerful, and Most Redoubtable Monarch, Louis XIV, of name, most Christian King of France and Navarre," took possession of "Ste. Marie du Sault, as also Lakes Huron and Superior, the Island of Manitoulin, and of all the lands, rivers, lakes, and streams contiguous to and adjacent here as well discovered or to be discovered which are bounded on the one side by the seas of the north and on the other side by the seas of the south—in its whole length and breadth."

The Most High, Most Powerful, and Most Redoubtable Louis and his successors held the lands about the lakes for less than a century after their annexation, but among the men who carried the badge of Canada on the fields of France these last five years were hundreds who could have traced their descent directly from the hawk-eyed coureurs des bois who stood about Perrot on the day when a great province was added to New France.

Balloons to Raise Ships.

A Japanese inventor has patented a device employing balloons to help raise sunken vessels.

A "DEMOUNTABLE SHIP."

Strange Vessel Will Be Built of Its Own Cargo.

The brain of the well-known Canadian financier, John Arbuthnot, of Victoria, B.C., has conceived a new type of ship for the transportation of vast quantities of lumber. He has labelled it the "demountable ship" and it will be about the most weird craft that ever sailed the Seven Seas. In reality it will be nothing more than a huge raft, built up in the shape of a boat with the cargo itself. Two gasoline engines will propel the craft, aided by sails spread from four masts, stepped in the cargo.

The first ship of this novel type is now being constructed on the Pacific coast and is destined for Australia. Its voyage across the boisterous Pacific will be watched with great interest. If it proves a success other craft will follow, in which event the process of shipping lumber offshore will be revolutionised. The fact that Lloyd's has decided to take a risk and insure the craft seems to augur well for its success.

Mr. Arbuthnot designed the ship in order to overcome the shortage of tonnage and also the high freight rates, which are the bugbear of the lumber industry at the present time.

The first of Mr. Arbuthnot's demountable ships will be 250 feet long, with a beam of 60 feet, and a depth of 25 feet. It will contain 5,000,000 feet of lumber. It is the designer's ultimate hope that craft, 600 feet in length and containing 10,000,000 feet of lumber, will be constructed.

The vessel can be completely built in the water. With the first ship, however, Mr. Arbuthnot has decided to begin it on an improvised slip on a beach adjacent to a mill and after getting it shaped to launch it and carry on the construction. The ship will be flat-bottomed and will have three keels, the main keel running the entire length of the ship, and the other two keels about three quarters the length. On the keels large crosswise timbers will be bolted closely together. Then will follow eight layers of timbers running the entire length of the ship on top of which will come another layer of crosswise timbers. Iron rods will be run from the keels to this layer of cross timbers and other rods will be driven through the cargo from side to side. In this manner the rigidity of the craft will be obtained. By extending the length of the timbers beyond the perpendiculars the necessary overhang for the clipper bow and stern is obtained.

The two gasoline engines will develop about 1,500 horsepower, and it is expected that in favorable weather the ship will make about seven knots an hour.

As soon as the ship reaches her destination she will be taken to pieces. The lumber will be cut into marketable sizes. The engines, rigging, bolts, chains, rods and cabin fixtures will be sent back to the port where the ship was built for use in the construction of another craft.

Mr. Arbuthnot says that the loss of timber through the necessary borings made in the cargo will be only a fraction of one per cent. On the other hand, he says, that there will be an enormous saving in the cost of shipping lumber.

Two children of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Player, London, Ont., died within a few hours, after several days' illness from whooping cough.

Revisiting No Man's Land.

Many a Canadian who fought in the war is wondering what the front looks like now, a year and more after the last shot was fired.

A newspaper writer, who was recently over the ground, states that one actually sees much less change than would be expected. It is so easy to destroy, so difficult to restore.

From the Ypres-Bailleul road, from Hell Fire Corner, from the La Bassée-Lens road, from the Arras-Douai road, and from many other such points, one might almost imagine that the armies had withdrawn but yesterday from their lines.

Everything easily lifted has been picked up and carried away by the seekers of souvenirs, but the change that most impresses the soldier is the silence, the now vacant highways once crowded with war traffic. The noise of war is gone, and the color of khaki is seldom seen. You look out over regions that seem to be forever reduced to silence and sterility.

The restoration of France and Belgium is going to be a long job. Those know best how complete the destruction was who were present and saw it done.

Cold Feet In Advertising

Phone 189 and our Representive will Call and discuss Rates, etc., with you

It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.

Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.

National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.

Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms? Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.

ATTORNEY GENERAL TO PROBE PRICE FIXING

HAMILTON MERCHANTS' ORGANIZATION WILL BE INVESTIGATED IMMEDIATELY.

Toronto, Jan. 29.—That prompt action was being taken by his department to probe the activities of the proposed price-fixing organization of Hamilton retail groceries was admitted last night by Hon. W. E. Raney, Attorney-General. Hon. Mr. Raney, when questioned regarding a brief despatch from Hamilton that legal action was contemplated, made the following statement:

"I had not intended making an announcement just now, but following your direct question, I may say that action is being taken. My Department is making an application to the Board of Commerce with a view to having this matter looked into by that body. Complaints have been coming to us for quite a while and, as a result of injuries, Mr. A. W. Roebuck is leaving for Ottawa tonight, with orders from this department."

PREDICT GOOD CROPS

Farmers Are Rejoicing in Depth of This Winter's Snowfall.

Ingersoll, Jan 30.—Basing their opinion on the fact that the snowfall this year has been much heavier than ordinarily, many of the farmers of the surrounding districts are predicting good crops next season. They point out that the snow is of great value to the crops, especially the fall wheat, giving protection from the frost, and furnishing desirable moisture at the proper time. The fall wheat acreage has been materially increased during recent years as a result of the high prices which have prevailed. The depth of snow this season is greater than usual, and on some of the roads the drifts are several feet high.

WHEAT RUSHING TO U. S.

Ten to Twenty Cars a Day Leaving Calgary.

Calgary, Jan. 29.—From ten to twenty cars of wheat are daily leaving Calgary elevators for the United States, and shipments would be greatly increased if the railway company supplied its own cars. This it declines to do, owing to the difficulty in getting them back again; so only American cars are loaded. At present about 10000 bushels, valued at $325000, leave Calgary each week. The price being paid has not been announced, but an official of an elevator company stated that he was prepared to buy any amount of No 1 Northern at $3.25 a bushel.

He pointed out that the Ontario Government is negotiating with the Dominion Governments for an additional grant for housing.

Night Fly Fishing.

The question as to whether or not trout will rise to flies by moonlight is one that has long been discussed in the Adirondacks. A number of Adirondack guides have insisted that they have taken good catches of trout by moonlight fly fishing. Others of the woods brethren, however, have merely smiled when one speaks of snaring the speckled ones under the light of the June moon.

Some fishermen claim to have taken them that way, while others say it is merely a fish story. Apparently about the only way one can prove it to his own satisfaction is to go some moonlight night to waters where they know trout are and try it for themselves.

There is, however, no doubt regarding brown trout taking flies at night, at least not in some waters. Arthur Munall Malone recently secured seven fine brown trout from Salmon river, whose waters were bathed in moonlight at the time.—Saranac Lake Daily Item.

Honor for the Cowbell.

Never again can the cowbell be looked upon as something merely bucolic, commonplace and utilitarian, connoting at best for the city man memories of idling away a summer holiday in the country. What the cowbell has meant to the country boy in early rising to do stable chores, and tedious hunting through swampy bottom lands for the heifer who appears to have no homing instinct it is rather difficult to express politely. But now the despised cowbell has achieved its apotheosis, for thanks to the ingenuity of a California composer, a set of them, "covering a chromatic range of an octave and a half," was used in the symphonic music of this year's Bohemian Grove play. This, perhaps, in some small degree makes up for the fearful contemporary misuse of an honorable if lowly instrument by jazz heads.

CITIZENS OF THE COUNTY AND CITY TO PRESS FOR DEMONSTRATION FARM HERE

Mr. T. Tooms M. L. A. Asks for Co-Operation Between all Parties and Himself in the Interests of West Peterboro Deputation Will go to Toronto in the Near Future.

The committee that was appointed to work for the location of a demonstration farm near the City of Peterborough, are busy with this end in view. Yesterday afternoon they met with the County Council and Mr. Tooms, M. L. A., in the Board of Trade rooms.

It was reported that a message had been sent to Hon. Mr. Doherty, explaining the request and asking for an appointment with him when he visited Peterborough. This was signed by the President of the Board of Trade, the President of the Peterborough branch of the U. F. O., and the chairman of the Agricultural Society. No reply had been received and considerable discussion arose as to the best way of preventing their Menu to the Minister of Agriculture and the Premier.

Mr. Tooms' Position

Mr. Tooms explained his position with the following speech:

"I wish to thank Mr. Ritchie of the Board of Trade for his courtesy in requesting me to be present. As the member for West Peterborough, it would have been equally appreciated had it come from the Agricultural section of the community on the U. F. O., of which party I am a co-operative member of the Government. Oversight is something to be avoided and lack of courtesy to a member is apt to be looked upon a lack of courtesy to the Government. It is the one principle with the Provincial Government to conduct the business of any part of the Province through the elected member of that particular locality. And I can assure you the best interests of West Peterborough will be more readily obtained by working in conjunction with that member.

"My duty, I realize, is to serve the community as a whole, not particularly as a class and my judgment on matters is always united accordingly. Co-operation and not petty prejudice is the best way to accomplish things, and if there is any way that I can be of service to the wishes of the majority of this conference, I am at your service, gentlemen, use me.

"This subject particularly, effects the farmers and as their representative of West Peterborough, I am desirous of acting in and serving their interests so far as lies in my power in the Provincial House.

"Equal rights and equal opportunities are planks in the farmer platform. I claim that right for myself and all my constituents.

The conference expressed its appreciation of Mr. Tooms' attitudte and explained that in the original motion his co-operation had been requested, but only on account of the delay in making the appointment with the Minister on his expected visit here had he not been consulted.

A resolution, moved by Deputy Reeve, F. Wilson and seconded by Dr. E. Frederick, was adopted, appointing a delegation consisting of the Warden of the county, the president of the Industrial Exhibition, President of the Peterborough branch of the U. F. O., and Mr. G. A. Gillespie to accompany Mr. Tooms and Mr. McDonald M. L. A. of East Peterborough, to Toronto, to interview the Minister of Agriculture and also gain information regarding the establishment of the farms. Mr. Tooms was requested to make the appointment with Hon. Mr. Doherty and the Premier.

STARVING CHILDREN TRY EATING SOAP

HUNGER AND IGNORANCE LED THEM TO THINK IT WAS FOOD

Soap hasn't had a chance as yet to become even a luxury in many sections of war-stricken Europe; there are lands where its use is quite beyond the ken of little folks.

An incident that illustrates the tragic ignorance of the children with regard to this article ar daily usage and importance in Canada and which, at the same time, depicts more pathetically prehaps than words can tell, the extreme hunger of the innocent victims of the world war, was cited by Jacob Eashein, of the Joint District Committee Relief Unit, No. 14.

"I recall that this happened in Lodz," sair Mr. Bashein, to a representative of the Canadian Jewish War Relief Committee, "and the starving, ragged, unkempt children surely touched the sympathies of our whole staff, and particularly the women workers.

"For a long time we had trouble convincing them that we were there to feed and not to harm them. When we finally won them over and distributed food they ate ravenously. When we had given out the rations some of the women workers handed to each child a cake of soap. Their astonishment would have been laughable were it not so tragic. Something in the attitude of the children toward the soap aroused the suspicion of one or two of the women and they remained to discover what disposition the youngsters would make of it. And sure enough their suspicions were well founded. Hunger, and ignorance of what they had been given, led the little ones promptly to try to eat it. They supposed the soap was food!"

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

raceway along the river bank at the east end of Murray street. This system was afterwards discarded for the present magnetic arc system in use on the main street and incandescent system for the balance of the city. Just at the time when improvements were contemplated, the war came, and it was decided to defer the matter until a later period. After a short period of operation Mr. House resigned as engineer and Mr. Fiske was appointed in his place, and shortly afterwards Mr. Anderson died, and Mr. Henderson was appointed to fill the position as accountant, and under these two men the system has been carried on, developed and improved on rates less than one-half of those charged the citizens by the Peterborough Light and Power Company, and now the city is in possession of a first-class distribution system serving its citizens with light and power at rates that compare favorably with any point in Ontario, and all of this work has been accomplished without calling upon the taxpayer for anything but his guarantee. There has been nothing included in the taxes as payments to the light or water department excepting such amounts as are fair in connection with light supplied for the lighting of the streets and parks and the water supply for fire protection, street watering, sewer flushing, etc. In addition to these departments being self-supporting quite respectable amounts have been earned and set aside out of the profits for contingencies and future expenses.

I have thought that these few remarks on the activities of the Utilities Commission would be interesting. We have been extremely fortunate in having as civic officers such men as Mr. Armstrong, the present secretary, Mr. Felix Brownscombe and Mr. Frank Adams, former treasurers, and Mr. E. H. D. Hall as legal advisor. These men have steered the course of the commission through many anxious periods, and with the commission constituted as it now is with Mr. Fiske as manager and Mr. Dobbin as waterworks superintendent, I feel that it is in safe hands for after all success or failure of control by commission rests largely on the shoulders of the men chosen by the commission to actively operate the departments under their control. The city is very fortunate in having two able young men to look after the detailed operations of the departments.

I cannot refrain from commenting on the mayors and municipal councils that we have been in contact with during the past eighteen years. The following gentlemen have occupied the mayor's chair during the period which I have served:

T. H. G. Denne	1901-2
G. M. Roger	1903-4
Henry Best	1905-2
R. F. McWilliams	1907
H. Rush	1908-9
W. G. Morrow	1910-11
W. H. Bradburn	1912-13
William Buller	1914-15
J. J. Duffus	1916-17
Geo. H. Duncan	1917-19

The relations between the commission and the council have been most friendly at all times, and any matters that were brought before the council for their approval have been readily agreed to.

It is an event in one's life to move from one municipality to another, particularly after a period of residence of more than thirty years. I cannot feel that I am permanently away from Peterboorugh. The terrible world war brought about conditions that could not be foreseen. This war took from us those whom we hoped would assist in carrying on our businesses. The company whom I have the honor to represent here was particularly hard hit. If these young men were with us today, no doubt the reorganization such as my company has gone through would not have came about, however, all we can do is to carry on as they did and as they would have us do. The sacrifice of all these splendid young men made our homes and business safe, and altered conditions and prosperity are in in a large measure due to their splendid fortitude and sacrifice.

Right here I would like to transgress for a few minutes and refer to the industry with which I am connected, and which has been under criticism by men and newspapers who did not know. I am proud to say that this is one industry in Canada which lived up to its obligations, and did not hestate when called upon to perform large duties. The faillure of the Russian Army was largely attributed to the lack of food distribution. There was plenty of food in Russia and sufficient quantity of live stock to carry on for an almost unlimited period, but there was not sufficient medium between the producer and the army by which food products could be prepared and delivered, for instance—the Russian authorities undertook to take herds of live cattle to the army, the result being that as high as 80 per cent was lost in transit or through spoilage. The Canadian packer received the livestock from the farm, paid for it a price higher than in any other market outside of Europe, and delieverd the product to the army authorities in perfect condition. In fact the reputation of Canada has been greatly enhanced on this account, and there are now markets for Canadian products where Canadian products were not known prior to the war. Before our neighbors to the south of us saw fit to go into the war, their agencies endeavored and properly so, to provide provisions for the Germans and Central Power armies. This was actively prevented by the blockade instituted by the British and French fleets. At this time the Canadian packer went into the American market, and with the assistance of the Canadian banks purchased large quantities of food stuffs which were diverted to channels flowing toward the British and Allied armies. This was not altogether done as a patriotic move. There was an opportunity for doing business at a profit, and for this we were highly commended by the British authorities. As I said before, I am very proud of the fact that I am connected with an organization that did its best to help win the war in the most important matter of supplying foodstuffs.

I have now practically exhausted my subjects. While living here I have honestly endeavored to be a respectable citizen and to accept my share of the responsibilities in civic government and control, and it is indeed gratifying to know that I can step out of the office which I held for many years and leave the work in the hands of such splendid men as those who are in authority at the present time. I thank you most heartily for the splendid reception and many kind words that have been spoken.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Made Her Well, Strong and Vigorous

MADAME ARTHUR BEAUCHER

805 Cartier St., Montreal.

"I suffered terribly from Constipation and Dyspepsia for many years. I felt pains after eating and I had gas, constant headache, and was unable to sleep at night. I was getting so thin that I was frightened and saw several physicians who, however, did not seem able to help me.

At last a friend advised me to take 'Fruit-a-tives'. I did so and soon I felt some relief. I continued with 'Fruit-a-tives' and in a short time, the Constipation was banished, I felt no more pains or headache or the disagreeable sensations that follow dyspepsia. Now I am well, strong and vigorous."

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to flush Kidneys if Back hurts or Bladder bothers.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

WIT AND WISDOM

Merely a Suggestion.

Bridget—Do come and look at the beautiful sunset out av the kitchen winder, ma'am.

Mistress—That's nothing, Bridget. You ought to see it rise some morning.

Fooled Again.

Willie seemed deep in thought, says London Ideas. A puzzled frown marred his chubby face.

"I can't make it out!" he muttered.

"Make what out? asked his mother, who had been watching her little son with an amused smile.

"Why, everyone calls little brother a bouncing baby."

"Well, isn't he," smiled mother.

"No," said Willie. "When I dropped him this morning he didn't bounce a bit."

The Unexpected.

Mary—What did Jack say when you told him I was married?

Clara—Well, he seemed surprised.

Mary—Did he ask when it happened?

Clara—No, but he asked how it happened.

KEEP HEALTHY DURING WINTER

Colds and Diseases May Be Avoided If the Blood Is Kept Pure.

Do not let your blood get thin this winter. For people who have a tendency towards anaemia, or bloodlessness, winter is a trying season. Lack of exercise and fresh air and the more restricted diet are among the many things that combine to lower the tone of the body and deplete the blood.

As soon as you notice the tired feeling, lack of appetite, and shortness of breath, that are warning symptoms of thin blood, take a short course of treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Do not wait until the color has entirely left your cheeks, until your lips are white and your eyes dull. It is so much easier to correct thinning of the blood in the earlier stages than later. This is well illustrated in the case of Mrs. E. Williams, Elk Lake, Ont., who says: "I take great pleasure in letting you know the benefit I have found in the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I was in an anaemic condition and was very weak and run down. The least exertion would leave me breathless, and it was with difficulty that I could do household work. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after the use of four boxes I felt like a new person. In fact, my system seemed filled with new energy and new life. I strongly recommend this medicine to all who feel weak or run down."

The purpose of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is to build up the blood. They do this one thing and they do it well. They are for this reason an invaluable remedy in diseases arising from bad or deficient blood, or rheumatism, neuralgia, aftereffects of grip or fevers. The Pills are guaranteed to be free from opiates or any harmful drug and cannot injure the most delicate system.

You can procure Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or they will be sent you by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing direct to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Debt World Is Apt to Forget.

The growing good of the world is partly dependent on unhistoric acts; and that things are not so ill with you and me as they might have been, is half owing to the number who lived faithfully a hidden life, and rest in unvisited tombs.—George Eliot.

Tact.

Little Lydia had been given a ring as a Christmas present, but, much to her disappointment, no one of the guests at the Christmas dinner had noticed it. Finally, unable to withstand their obtuseness or indifference, she exclaimed: "O, dear, I'm so warm in my new ring!"

And Succeeding.

Most of the economic sorrow which a nation suffers arises from the greed of men trying to sneak selfish advantages over others for profit.

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD F. HOUSE
(Copyright.)

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

CLOSING THE ACCOUNT WITHOUT LOSING THE TRADE

Accounts undesirable to the retail merchant may be classified under four heads, according to Edward Thompson, credit manager for Saks & Co., who recently addressed the Associated Retail Credit Men of New York on the subject of closing out the account with an effort to hold the customer's trade. They are:

First. Accounts closed because of slow pay.

Second. Accounts closed because of unfavorable information.

Third. Accounts closed because of too many goods returned, or conditions affecting the profit on the account.

Fourth. Accounts closed because of disputes or unsatisfactory dealings.

The first classification, he said, embraces the majority of accounts closed, and perhaps requires the largest amount of consideration on the part of the credit man, his task being to determine whether the slowness is occasioned by carelessness or actual inability to meet the obligation. In cases where the usual notices remain unanswered, the following type of letter is recommended:

> Dear Madam—We find that bills are overdue on your account for June and July $134. We wish to point out that our charge account terms provide for settlement when bill is rendered and we therefore ask you to send at once payment for this amount, so that there may be no delay in sending goods as ordered.

Where the customer is making no current purchases the phrase "In order that there may be no delay in sending goods" is changed to read "in order that we may not be obliged to close the account on our books." The important thing in each case is to point out that if the customer does not take some action something will happen.

The following type of letter is recommended as an effort to retain the customer's good will coupled with notice that the account is closed:

> Dear Madam—It grieves us to be forced to write to you again in the matter of the delayed payments on your account.
>
> You have shown no inclination whatsoever to abide by our monthly settlement terms, established for all alike, and after careful consideration of the account we are obliged to withdraw credit privileges.
>
> We regret this probably more than you do, but our unalterable rule in this regard leaves us no alternative. You can understand that we did not in the least like to lose your account, and we sincerely trust that we may come to some agreeable understanding in the near future.

"RUG" WAS A BEAUTY, BUT IT ONLY COST $5

There is a carpet of sawdust dyed a rich purple, on the floor of the Smith Flower Shop in Hutchinson Kan. It gives a rich tone to the room.

"My, look at this beautiful purple velour rug," exclaimed one woman visitor.

"They surely can afford it the way flowers cost now," replied her companion.

As they admired the "velour rug" Harry Smith, manager of the shop, explained that the total cost was $5.20, mostly for dye.

KANSAS TO GIVE COURSE FOR MERCHANTS

Intensive study will be a feature of the Kansas merchants' short course, which will be held under the auspices of the University of Kansas in Lawrence, Kans. This course is paid for by the state, the last Legislature appropriating $1000 to be used in meeting the expenses of lecturers and merchandising experts who will be asked to give a series of lectures upon various phases of retailing.

G. Pryor Irwin, formerly instructor in salesmanship and store management at the University of Wisconsin, has been engaged to give a series of lectures during the course. In addition, several Kansas merchants who have made an unusual success of their businesses will tell how they did it.

The merchants' short course is designed to cover all phases of merchandising and salesmanship. Courses covering each phase of business will be arranged and the program so prepared that a retailer can map out a course of study which will strengthen him along certain lines. Much attention will be devoted to advertising, as it is realized the small-town merchants everywhere are more or less weak on this point.

Accounting is another thing to which much attention will be devoted. Systems of keeping books will be explained and demonstrated as well as plans for invoicing, keeping stock records and records of cash and credit sales. The best means of keeping track of stock so that short lines can be filled in promptly will be described.

Methods of lowering overhead costs, stimulating the sales force to redoubled efforts, the advisability of profit-sharing among employes, and various other questions of interest to retailers will be gone into. The course is intended to touch upon all phases of business and to do so in a way that will yield practical benefit, rather than theory, to those who attend the classes. "How the other fellow does it" will be the slogan of the short-course managers, and they will strive to get as much personal experience talk into the classes as they can.

This year is the first time the course has been supported by state aid and it is believed that it will mark the beginning of a course which will prove to be of great value to retailers.

TESTIMONIAL LETTERS MAKE EXCELLENT

Dontrich & Co., clothiers in Pottsville, Pa., who push their goods by newspaper publicity, have started the accumulation of an interesting file of letters from customers. Whenever the name of the purchaser of a suit or overcoat can be learned the firm writes to him asking if he is satisfied after several months of use of the garments.

Assurance is given that the name won't be used and quite a few respond. They are worked up for advertising copy most effectively by Dontrich & Co., who instruct the printers to set the letter in "typewriter" type to give it the atmosphere the firm wishes to convey.

The store keeps the letters handy so the doubting Thomases can be shown them if their authenticity is questioned.

Halifax, N. S., Jan. 31.—Disembarkation of the 3,000 coolies who were detained on the steamer Minnekahda because of suspected flu has been commenced, and the Chinamen will entrain for Vancouver. Two of the seven patients removed from the steamer died of pneumonia.

SANDERSON IS LIKE NEW MAN

DECLARES TANLAC PUT HIM ON HIS FEET WITH NEW LIFE, STRENGTH AND ENERGY.

"Yes, sir, I can recommend Tanlac because it has put me back on my feet with new life, strength and energy," said Samuel Sanderson of 1618 Retallack Street, Regina, Sask., a few days ago.

"A little over a year ago I had a severe attack of the 'flu' that was so bad it kept me off work for seven months," continued Mr. Sanderson. "I was in a weakened, miserable condition, couldn't get my strength and I was troubled with a chronic cough. My appetite went back on me and the little I did manage to force down did more harm than good and I could hardly retain a thing I had eaten. After I got back at work I would get so short of breath I would give out and have to stop and rest. At night I was very restless and would cough so bad that I couldn't sleep, and many a time I woke up all during the night.

"But things are exactly the opposite since I have begun taking Tanlac, and I have improved so much that I am feeling like a new man. I have a fine appetite now and what I eat does not bother me any more and I have no trouble retaining everything I eat. My cough is much better and I don't know what it is to lie awake for I can sleep like a log from the time I go to bed till time to get up. I can do my work without getting short of breath and I don't get tired except in a natural way. Tanlac has built me up in every way and I am gaining in strength right along and I think the change that has come over me is remarkable. I cannot say enough for Tanlac and it will always be a pleasure for me to recommend it highly."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by F. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

WAIT FOR OTHER GRANTS.

Ottawa Hasn't Made Up Its Mind to Contribute to Central Europe.

Ottawa, Jan. 31.—In reference to the report from Washington that Canada is expected to contribute $5,000,000 for relief purposes in Central Europe, Sir George Foster, acting Premier, stated that no definite decision had been come to. Canada, he said, was waiting to see what action would be taken by Britain and the United States before deciding on the size of its contribution.

PRUDENTIAL COMPANY WILL INSURE GROUPS

SYSTEM IN FORCE IN UNITED STATES TO BE TRIED IN CANADA

President Forrest F. Dryden, of the Prudential Insurance Company of America, has just announced that the company will insure the lives of groups of Canadian employes of fifty or more persons, at group rates, no examination being required.

Mr. Dryden, in making the announcement, says: "We believe that there can be no doubt that group insurance will meet with the same success in Canada as in the United States, where it is becoming increasingly popular and where it is looked upon as serving a double purpose—that of furnishing insurance where it is greatly needed, and aiding in establishing more cordial relations between the employe and the employer."

"What Shall I Do Then With Jesus, Who Is Called Christ?"

Pilate's Question Is Yours To-day

THE Church is not impersonal. It is a company of individuals, each of whom has expressed determination to acknowledge Jesus as Lord and God, to accept His teachings and follow His example.

The Active Christians

Those who persist in the Way find their lives radiant with hope. They have an object in living. They are not plunged into hopeless misery by bereavement. They develop character. They learn contentment. Being themselves men of hope and good-will, they are centres of hope and good-will in the world.

The Inactive Christians

Not all continue faithful. Many neglect to keep the Pattern before them. They cease to pray. They forego public worship. They become only nominal Christians. Their sympathies are on the side of Right, but they miss the full-orbed peace that comes from being obedient to the Heavenly vision.

Aiding the Enemy

Apart from their own loss, lukewarm Christians do positive harm to the Faith. Enemies never cite the lives of notable Christians as a proof of the inefficiency of the Church, or of the Gospel it proclaims. If, therefore, all lukewarmness should disappear the critics of Christianity would be confounded.

Where Do You Stand?

You are a Christian. Are you ardent or careless? Are you whole-hearted or half-hearted? Do you realize that the Church in Canada faces unprecedented responsibilities? You believe that the Gospel of Christ is a perfect solvent of selfishness and class-hostility. Will you do your part to give it free course?

A Great Possibility

"Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is the reproach of any people." If all the Church Members of Canada would begin today to follow earnestly the principles enunciated by their Divine Master; if they would acknowledge their stewardship in full measure, the name of Canada would ring around the world. Therefore the Question is to you:

"What shall I do then with Jesus, who is called Christ?"

TRIALS COME HIGH.

Winnipeg, Jan. 31. — Counsel fees, court and other expenses in connection with the trial of the strike leaders, as an aftermath of the Winnipeg general strike, cost the Manitoba Government $15,000 last year, the Provincial Secretary-Treasurer, Hon. Edward Brown, announced. It is believed that the expense of the trials will cost more than $100,000.

A first dividend in the failure of the Dominion Trust Co., of Vancouver, amounting to $300,000, will be paid March 1.

SPEND $10,000,000 ON ROADS.

Quebec's Road Plans Will Soon Be Announced.

Quebec, Jan. 31.—The new roads bills which Hon. J. A. Tessier, Roads Minister, is to bring down in the Legislature, is expected to provide for an expenditure of ten million dollars.

The money will be loaned to municipalities at a rate of three per cent. which means that the Government and the municipalities go fifty-fifty on road expenditure, since money must be reckoned at 6 per cent.

ONLY ONE COUNTRY TO BEAT.

Austria Alone Exceeds Canada in Living Costs.

Winnipeg, Jan. 31.—"The cost of living in Canada is the highest in the world outside Ausria-Hungary," declared R. B. Maxwell, vice-president of the Manitoba G. W. V. A. "The Government is to blame for present conditions. People are beginning to realize it, and I firmly believe we will see big changes at the next Dominion election."

URGE A NAVAL POLICY.

Quebec Navy League Brach Favors Dominion-Controlled Boats.

Montreal, Jan. 31. — The Navy League, Provincial and Montreal divisions, unanimously adopted a resolution that the Quebec division of the Navy League of Canada urge upon the Government an early and broad navy policy for Canada, and that the Dominion shall retain control of their ships.

OWEN MOORE VICTIM OF PRACTICAL PRANK

NEW SELZNICK STAR "SHIMMIES" AND SHIVERS WAY THROUGH TRYING SCENE

One of the scenes had to be "shot" with Owen in a bath-tub, so accordingly, the newest Spring effect in porcelains was rigged up in the studio and connected with the main water supply. Owen meanwhile had divested himself of his clothes and, it being a bleak, Fall morning, was standing wrapped in a thin silk robe, shivering as perfectly as ever did a disciple of the great god Shimmy. They then turned the water on and everything was fine except that the hot water refused to live up to its name.

Owen tested the contents of the tub and then began to stroll in the direction of his dressing-room. "Come here!' ' shrieked Director Wesley Ruggles. "This scene must be taken!" After a strenuous argument Owen was persuaded to step into the tub.

Then ensued a whispered conference, to the accompaniment of chuckles, between Director Ruggles and President Myron Selznick. As Owen was leaving the icy water, Ruggles stopped him. "I'm afraid we didn't get it," he explained. Then to the camera man: "Retake!" And the scene was gone through again. When finished, Owen leaped from the tub and said, "If there are any more retakes, we'll do 'em tomorrow when it's warmer." Then Director Ruggles laughingly explained that the first scene was satisfactory, but they wanted to see how long he could stand up under punishment.

Owen has a singularly keen sense of humor but it took him an hour to get the point of that one.

Beginning Another Chapter.

A woman was so fond of pets that when death overtook her 10-year-old cat she was not long in getting a young kitten to fill the place of puss. Whereupon her small neighbor gravely carried the news to his mother that the woman "was starting another cat."

Ancient Bell

The rectory of the village of East Haddam, in Connecticut, houses a very ancient bell, bearing the date A. D. 888. It is believed that this bell once belonged to a monastery in Spain, having been brought to the United States in some ship, as ballast.

COUNTY COUNCIL GRANTS PETERBORO INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION BOARD $2,000

County Clerk and Treasurer E. Elliott Receives Increase in Salary—Grant of $150 and $100 to Peterboro and Lakefield War Veterans.

After the deputation from the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition had been received by the County Council yesterday afternoon, the councillors resolved themselves into a Finance Committee to deal with the various grants that had been requested from them.

After considerable discussion it was decided to grant $2,000 to the Peterborough Exhibition, $500 to Norwood, $300 to Lakefield, $300 to Keene, and $100 to the Kinmount fair.

To G. W. V. A.

In discussing the requested grant to the Peterborough and Lakefield Veterans, it was thought that in the future there was the possibility of these associations gradually dwindling away and the property reverting to some other use. Some member asked as to the conduct of the association and Reeve Strickland of Lakefield assured that at that village at any rate the men were working earnestly and it was worthy of support.

On motion of Reeves McIntosh and Brown it was decided to grant $150 to the Peterborough Veterans with the understanding that this would be carried out each year by future councils, and $100 to the Lakefield club.

On motion of Reeve Easson and Deputy Reeve Wilson, $25 was granted to the Sick Children's Hospital.

The chairman of the auditors of the administration of justice will receive $10 for each quarterly sitting while each associate will receive $4.

Pigeon Creek Bridge.

Word was received from Victoria County that they were prepared to act in conjunction with the city and county of Peterborough to go to Ottawa and press upon the Government the necessity of them rebuilding the Pigeon Creek bridge immediately.

Raise for County Clerk.

Reeve Darling, of Dummer, in moving a raise in salary for the county clerk and treasurer, said that they considered their clerk was second to none. He moved and it was seconded by Reeve Strickland and carried unanimously that Mr. Elliott's salary be increased from $2,200 to $3,000.

Mr. Elliott thanked the council in a few suitable words and stated that his heart was in the work and he would do all he could for the interests of the county.

CITIZENS OF PETERBORO

among the workers of this city. And I join heartily in saying that Peterborough will feel the loss of his valuable services. But our loss will be some place else's gain, and it is with regret that we see him relegated to other fields of activity away from Peterborough.

Now, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I know you will expect me to join and return to Peterborough again." The judge here paid warm tribute to Mrs. Matthews and urged that all join heartily in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

"She was always first in kindly deeds and good works, and we know of her great services the last five years in aid of the boys at the front, in Red Cross and other patriotic activities." In conclusion, he asked Mr. Matthews to accept a loving cup from his Peterborough friends, who love and respect him more than he could find words to express.

Mr. W. R. Breyfogle here made the presentation.

See Him Smiling.

Mr. Matthews rose to respond amid the well-known fraternal refrain of "See Him Smiling, See Him Smiling Just Now." His graceful and heart-felt acknowledgement of his position of honor at this representative gathering will be found under another head.

Municipal Government.

This toast fell to capable hands those of Mr. W. H. Bradburn, who expressed pride in the City Trust, the Public Utilities and the Council. He characterized the Peterborough Utilities as one of this city's most valuable assets. Council, he said, should receive improved consideration from the people than almost unremitting adverse criticism. Fault-finders, were they elected to Council, would do no better themselves than those they are continuously knocking. Urging that more who are capable should assume their share of municipal activities, he contended it is manifestly unfair to load all the responsibility on a few. Every citizen who can ought to give a portion of his time to the interests of the city in which he lives. In conclusion, this speaker declared that if this city wants to secure more industries, it must have an up-to-date Board of Trade, a business council, and a city in which workingmen can get a sufficiency of good, clean and attractive recreation. This question of recreation for workingmen after their day's work is finished, he urged on this year's Council for action.

Mayor A. A. McIntyre.

His Worship said, "I wish to thank you, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, for the cordial manner in which you have honored the toast of the municipality of Peterborough. The management of this city has suffered a serious loss by the removal of Mr. Matthews to Toronto.

It is perhaps natural that men of his business capacity and business interests should move to the financial and business centre, but we cannot but regret that he has felt called upon to leave. What he has done for this municipality has been referred to, and it is appreciated by every resident of this city. Those who have taken part in the municipal government know the time it takes and the difficulties that have to be overcome, and while sorry, we shall lose the benefit of Mr. Matthews' services, we are glad that he was able to give so many years to the management of one of the most important public departments.

This year the City Council will have some very difficult problems to deal with. Some of these are in the minds of the people, and there are others of equal difficulty of which we are aware. The Council will have very important public works on its hands, industrial matters of first importance to the city, ond financial questions not easy to solve, but I can say this, that to all these subjects the Council will give their best attention and will deal with them so far as we are able in the interest of the city and of all the ratepayers.

We ask from you and from the citizens generally all the assistance you can give us, and I believe that the manner in which you have honored this toast is an evidence of the interest you take in the municipality and in all that affects its welfare.

Many Kind Words.

Utilities Commissioner Robt. Hicks had many kind words to say of his associations with the guest of honor, Mr. Matthews, as chairman of the board, and he spoke of the good work of Commissioner W. H. Moore, absent through ill health. He emphasized the fact of the commission being constituted in a sound and solid basis, and that its operations had been carried on during the war without any additional charges for light and water to consumers. Both the city and he, said Mr. Hicks, had benefitted largely by the business capacity and experience of Mr. Matthews. The speaker here entertained the guests to a relation of many humorous incidents which had occurred between Mr. Matthews and he in their public connection with each other, in illustration of the harmony and good will at all times existing in the Board of Utilities Commissoiners.

Civic Administration.

"Ald. G. N. Gordon declared the city's administrators have an elaborate system of municipal government for carrying out civic affairs and administrating public needs. There is a call for men of experience, of considerable mental ability, and of wide vision to interest themselves in civic administration, and such men should respond to the call. This city, he declared, is faced with greater responsibilities than ever before in its history, and for that reason it should have the service of its best citizenship. Why is Mr. Matthews our guest of honor tonight? asked Ald. Gordon. Because, in addition to his being a good citizen, he has always been public-spirited, and recognized his responsibilities to the community, and never failed to respond to those responsibilities.

Ald. Gordon here referred to Mr. Matthews as at all times having fostered a good feeling among all classes, and characterized him as one who at all times recognized his duties and obligations to those employed in the great firm over which he has had control.

The speaker again turned to the need for the co-operation of experience and ability in order to assure an efficient city council, and he urged such citizens to come forward in their turn and serve. He also invited citizens of weight and experience to come forward and give council the benefit of their knowledge and their assistance in solving problems which affect this community more closely even than those before the Dominion House of Commons or the Provincial Legislature.

Broad-Minded Man.

Mr. S. R. Armstrong, in an exceedingly neat and appropriate speech referred to Mr. Matthews as a broad minded man, having a sense of his responsibilities, and possessing great integrity of character and an irresistible kindness of heart—a citizen who enjoyed the respect and admiration of all with whom he came in contact. This occasion, Mr. Armstrong continued, reminded him of Dickens' Tom Pinch, who looked upon the stage coach as a monster which carried away his friends. Toronto is such a monster to Peterborough, in that she has carried away from this community many of its best friends, and of such the loss of none will be regretted more than the carrying away by Toronto of Mr. Matthews.

The employees of the Utilities Commission, Mr. Armstrong, secretary for the Board, said, in spite of the years of some of us, feel as though in the removal of Mr. Matthews they have last a father.

As to the City Council, during his long association with that board first as a newspaper man and then as clerk, Mr. Armstrong said he had always felt that as a whole each councillor and alderman had worked honestly and sincerely in what he conceived to be the best interests of this community.

Peterborough Institutions.

In proposing this toast, Rev. J. R. Webb touched on this city's efficient water, power and light systems, and referred in fitting terms to its industrial and commercial institutions, and to the greatest of all institutions, the church, which is, he declared, suitably united in doing honor to Mr. Matthews. Mr. Matthews would, the speaker felt assured, be first in admitting that he owes his success in life to that greatest of all institutions in this world the church. "He has been identified with the church of which I am the pastor, and the gathering tonight and its nature was suggested in Murray Street Baptist Church, where Mr. Matthews is loved in a wonderous way."

An Inspiration.

Mr. E. G. Patterson, in suitable words, eulogized Peterborough's manufactories, and said Mr. Matthews had been an inspiration to all heads of local manufacturing interests.

Mr. Roland Denne, chairman of the Board of Education, spoke of Mrs. Matthews' splendid patriotic work. He also urged the need of maintaining a high standard of education, the acquisition of the best civic government possible, moderate insurance rates, cheap light, heat, water and power, and good housing for workingmen.

'Tis All True.

Mr. J. J. Turner declared that everything complimentary said tonight of Mr. Matthews is true. He had always striven to live up to Mr. Matthews as his ideal of an exemplory citizen, and he hopes yet to reach the heights Mr. Matthews has in this respect. Talking of the Board of Trade, he characterized this organization as a live body, with a business council. "The Board of Trade has come to life with enlarged thought and widened vision, which it is putting into practice. And this community is now recognizing that fact. In closing, Mr. Turner invited increased membership on the Board of Trade and paid glowing tribute to Mr. Matthews' valued co-operation in that Board's work, and his generous financial support of its needs.

Cheers and a Tiger.

One of the most happy social functions in Peterborough's History, in which good citizenship and energetic service in the community's weal were fittingly recognized, closed with the National Anthem and three cheers and a tiger for the guest of honor, Mr. T. Frank Matthews.

The best way not to obtain praise is to ask for it.

Long-Standing Evil
Effective Measures Taken

Since childhood Mr. A. Cail was under the shadow of a great evil, which always menaced his comfort and safety. Read what he says:

"I was troubled with my kidneys since childhood and spent a large amount of money trying to get cured. Instead of getting better, I kept getting worse until a friend of mine advised me to try Gin Pills. I did so, and after taking one box, I was able to get out of bed and walk around. Two more boxes relieved me completely, and since then I have had no return of the trouble."

Many people have kidney and bladder trouble without knowing it. They think nothing of the backache, the pains in the sides, the constant headaches, the rheumatic, sciatic and neuralgic pains, the floating specks before the eyes, the swollen joints, the highly coloured urine—all signs of trouble—all signs which should receive immediate attention and treatment with Gin Pills, which are by far the most effective of all preparations, and which may help you to avoid a fatal operation. They quickly relieve pain and heal the congested tissues, bringing the organs back to normal. At druggists and dealers, 50c a box. Money back if no relief. Send for free sample.

OWEN MOORE IN ROLE OF A BEAU BRUMMEL

SEE FAMOUS SCREEN ACTOR IN "PICCADILLY JIM" AT EMPIRE MONDAY

Sometimes you hear it said of a certain woman: "She wears her clothes well." French women, for example, have established a tradition for chic,—they seem to possess the ability to wrap themselves in a burlap bag and still look ravishing. In a lesser degree the same thing may be said of certain men,—that 'they know how to wear their clothes. And the extraordinary part of it is that it is a knowledge that simply cannot be acquired,—either one has it or one hasn't it; it can't be learned. There are men who enlist the services of the best tailors, valets and other sartorial experts, and when they are all dressed and "prettied up" they look as though they were wearing somebody else's clothes. Then there is a man who can slip into a mail-order-catalogue suit, walk down Main Street and come home with a collection of feminine hearts dangling from his belt.

Such a man is Owen Moore. Not that Owen buys his clothes via the mail route. Far from it. It wouldn't be practical for a great many reasons. The point is this: What Owen wears he wears well, be it the latest creations from the Bond Street artists,—such clothes, for example, as are disclosed in "Piccadilly Jim," or the product of our own American tailors. No matter what he wears, Owen wears it well.

See for yourself. He's at the Empire Theatre, in "Piccadilly Jim," his first Selznick Picture, next Monday.

: : AT THE GRAND : :

Four good vaudeville acts, a feature picture, entitled "The Pagan God," in which L. B. Warner is starred, Mabel Normand comedy and the Pictorial Life were presented at the Grand yesterday and will be repeated today and tomorrow.

Sam K. Naoni, heralded as the world's greatest guitar player, is certainly all that is claimed of him. His guitar does everything but talk.

Frank Morrell, who has been seen here before, has a good act. Bud and Jessie Grey, in their act, entitled, "Brilliant Bits of Vaudeville," score a hit. Rialto and Lamont present an interesting act which seemed to go well with the audience.

The pictures were all that could be desired and the orchestra plays some very fine selections, making in all a splendid evening's entertainment.

LINDSAY MIDGETS CAPTURE DISTRICT HONORS AFTER AN EXCITING CONTEST

Peterborough Juniors Succumb After a Game Fight Extending Over Six Games Five of Which Were Won by Their Opponents.

By virtue of their 7 to 4 victory over the local Juniors last night, the Lindsay Midgets are champions of this district. The contest between these two teams has been very interesting throughout the first four games resulting in a 23 to 23 tie.

After everything is considered it must be admitted the better team won. The fact that Lindsay won five out of the six games played, is conclusive of this. But what the Peterborough squad lacked in experience and weight they made up in gameness and they carried many pleasant surprises to even their own supporters. The warning goes out; watch for these youngsters next season.

A Lindsay despatch says:

"By defeating Peterborough Juniors by the score of 7 to 4, the Midgets annexed the district honors by five goals. Tonight's game was fast and furious. Referee Whitehead being quite lenient. The Midgets used their weight effectively on the Peters. Lindsays led the score in every perod but the visitors battled hard in the first 40 minutes. Garnet, the husky defence man, was the star. Bell and Stoddart also doing well. Sheehan, on the Peterborough defence, was their best man. The line-up:

Referee: Lawson Whitehead.

ISLAND ONLY A MIRAGE.

Arctic Explorers Floated Directly Through Location.

Keenan Land, which is charted on maps of the Arctic region, it now appears, is no land at all, but just deep sea. According to the testimony of Storker Storkersen, second in command of Vilhjalmur Stefansson's Arctic expedition, organized by the Canadian Government, this so-called "land" is non-existent, the whalers who thought they had discovered it some fifty years ago having seen an illusive Arctic mirage.

As represented on the chart of the Arctic region, Keenan Land apparently is about fifty square miles in extent, but, while drifting on a huge ice floe and buffeted by variable winds, Storkersen and his comrades floated directly through the space whereon the mythical Keenan Land was supposed to be. "Evidently," said the explorer, "it was only a mirage, for instead of land there we found very deep water. We made soundings of 3,000 metres without finding bottom."

So Keenan Land must be banished from the maps, along with that other mythical place, Crocker Land, which Peary thought he had sighted in the north years ago, but which upon investigation by Donald MacMillan proved also to be merely a mirage, an illusion of the Far North which often baffles explorers and navigators in those frigid seas.

Storkersen and his associates were adrift eight months on their ice floe, which was about fifteen miles long by seven wide. Finally the ocean froze, permitting them to make a dash to the mainland across the virgin ice. During the time they were marooned on the huge raft of ice they made many soundings. "The greatest depths we found," said Storkersen, "were 4,500 metres, or about three miles. Because of the fact that we lost much of our sounding wire, most of our recorded soundings were 3,000 metres and no bottom."

Altogether, Storkersen says, he explored a region of about 45,000 miles while cruising on the giant ice cake, making, all told, for the Canadian Government Arctic expedition a record of exploration covering approximately 250,000 square miles. After drifting at the caprice of the shifting winds for six months the explorers found themselves fifty-five miles from their starting point on the Northern Alaska coast, north by east. "The drift of the ice," said Storkersen, "is governed by the direction of the wind, as proven by our adventure on the ice floe.

"Our object was to determine the currents in Beaufort Sea, to take a line of soundings and to try to discover uncharted land, if any existed. I consider that man happiest who conducts an uneventful expedition; because an adventurous trip is often a sign of incompetence. We had no thrills and we made our journey in comparative comfort and without hardship."

WARRIORS IN GAY UNIFORMS

Soldiers of Uncle Sam in Samoa Make Picturesque Appearance on Parade Ground

The Fita-Fitas, or native soldiers of American Samoa, are considered the most picturesque of all the American army. That country is under the control of the navy department and the naval officers of Pago Pago form the governing body of Tutilia and the ove other small islands. The yeomen among the bluejackets are valuable office assistants. The Fita-Fitas are the outside unit. Their duties are municipal as well as military. They act as policemen, and also as guards of honor for the governor on inspection tours.

The fatigue uniform consists of a sort of black kilt with a bright red stripe around the border. Above the waist and below the knees the uniform is of nature's own. A leather belt, carrying a dagger on the side, holds the kilt, or lava-lava, in place. The dress uniform consists of the fatigue uniform with the addition of a sleeveless white vest. The pretty, vivacious Samoan belles "fall" for this uniform as readily as their American sisters do for the khaki.

The principal feature of the Fita-Fita organization is a native brass band, which has mastered music so well that its repertoire includes a wide range of classical and popular airs. It plays on all the boats that stop at the harbor, while the passengers dance. The band also provides music for the dances at the naval station.

AND ALL DONE WITH HAIRPIN

Some Few Things That a Woman Can Do Successfully Without Elaborate Kit of Tools

With a hairpin all that is "doable" can be done. With a hairpin a woman can pick a lock, pull a cork, peel an apple, draw out a nail, beat an egg, see if a joint of meat is done, do up a baby, sharpen a pencil, dig out a sliver, fasten a door, hang up a plate or a picture, open a can, take up a carpet, repair a baby carriage, clean a lamp chimney, put up a curtain, rake a grate fire, cut a pie, make a fork, a fishhook, an awl, a gimlet or a chisel, a paper-cutter, a clothespin, regulate a range, tinker a sewing machine, stop a leak in a roof, turn a flapjack, caulk a hole in a pair of pants, reduce pressure in the gas meter, keep bills and receipts on file, cut patterns, tighten windows, clean watches, untie a knot, varnish floors, do practical plumbing, pry shirt studs into buttonholes too small for them, fix a horse's harness, restore damaged mechanical toys, wrestle with refractory bottle stoppers, improvise suspenders, shovel bonbons, inspect gas burners, saw cake, jab tramps, produce artificial buttons, hooks and eyes, sew, knit and darn, button gloves and shoes, put up awnings and doctor an automobile. In short, according to the Farm Journal, she can do what she wants to; she needs no other instrument. The hairpin is king.

Searchlight Telephone.

One of the latest inventions of talking through the air without the use of wires is the searchlight telephone developed by Dr. A. O. Rankine of London. By it conversation is transmitted by a beam of light.

The inventor said the apparatus had been tested over a distance of 1½ miles with much success. In an illustration he received clear and distinct messages in a building a considerable distance from the transmitter.

Only by the interception of the beam of light can the conversation be tapped, the new plan differing in this feature from wireless messages, which are scattered broadcast. Either artificial or natural light can be used.

Russian Villages Prey of Fire.

The Russian village is built principally of wood and roofed with wood, or with straw and stones. For this reason there are so many fires that, according to statistics, one-fifth of all the peasant cottages burn down every year, or putting it in another way, every house burns down after five years. This seems improbable, but it is reliable information.

Warts Are Contagious.

Warts are contagious, as is proved by experiments on their own fingers made by Drs. Udo J. Wile and Lyle B. Kingery of the University of Michigan Medical school. These physicians seem to have proved that warts are caused by some sort of a virus that passes easily through a filter and therefore through the sound human skin.

Natural Pillows.

The pollack tree provides the natives of British Honduras with splendid material for pillows and mattresses. It is common soft wood growth, with a large pear-shaped fruit, which has a hard shell, changing to almost black when ripe, and containing a short staple brown fluff or silk fiber.

Goodness of Apples.

Because we like apples we use them but apart from that we use them because they contain healthful acids needed minerals including iron, lime and sulphur, many calories of energy and some real nutrition. True, an apple is eighty-five per cent water, but so is milk, and the apple has thirteen per cent of sugar and starches.

Simple Diet.

The late pope is said to have lived on a very simple diet, as simple as that of the poorest tradesman. In the morning he drank a cupful of coffee, at noon he took a little soup and meat and for supper vegetables and meat. His favorite food was the Italian national dish, polenta.

COURTS AND THEIR

His power and consideration and justice is there, and so when institutions are gone their names and theories live after them. Other judges were assigned for the "court of the common pleas' and called "judges of the common pleas.'

In early days when the financial situation of the country was somewhat strained, revenues had to be collected from all sources and certain representatives were appointed to look after them. These persons used a table, laid out on the plan of a checker board for the counting of this money. Hence we have the "court of exchequer." We resort to this court whenever there is a question of money to be counted. There are two in Ottawa, whose sole duty it is to deal with the accounts of the state and the individual. However, any law, which the public conscience regards as unjust is subject to change b statute or otherwise. In due course of time these customs became so crystallized they wouldn't bend, and there was no elasticity to meet the individual case. "The letter of the law killeth, but the spirit giveth light." And so the law became so rigid that there were cases of hardships and the king was asked to intervene. His first appointments were always clergymen, and so it was called the "court of chancellors."

The word "chancellor', originates from the architectural structure of the old time church, in which the choir was walled off from the congregation by means of a lattice screen. And so this representative of the king was an eclessiastical and would not deign to associate with the common throng. This is the derivation of the "chancellor court" or the "court of equity." However, this arrangement aroused the ire and resentment of the common law judges. Lord Seldon was known to have said of this court that its rule was merely the whim of the chancellor. And there was some truth in this assertion. They were in some cases partial to friends. but the main idea was right and the British peoples main idea always had been right for the administration of justice. After a while the bottom bedrock principles of the equity system became just as rigid as the common law and for a time there were two laws. The law of trust was a pet of the Court of Chancellory. This court carried out the terms of trust Both these systems of law had their merits and demerits, and they finally and gradually merged into one. The courts all became merged about 50 years ago in the High Court of Justice for England, with the Kings Bench Chancellory and the admirality law. The High Court of Justice, with several divisions, the names of which like monuments, point out the meaning of institutions existing now. We did have in Ontario a High Court of Justice until two or three years ago, with the King's Bench, Court of Pleas, Chancellory, Exchequer Court, Court of Appeal, but now we have the "Supreme Court of Ontario."

Courts are constituted for the purpose of carrying out the law of the land and the centre for Ontario is Osgoode Hall. From this centre, with certain limitations cases may be taken to Ottawa and with still greater limitation to the Privy Council of England.

Continuing, His Honor said that the local judge, was to a great extent, a "beast of burden." Upon his shoulders rests the responsibility of matters both important and trivial. In the city of Peterborough is the local judge of the Supreme Court of Ontario. This Supreme Court has jurisdiction in civil cases. Twice a year, in June and December, at the jury session of the County Court — the general session of the peace, the magistrates have the privilege of occupying a seat on the bench with the judges, but they do not very often take advantage of this. Then there is another court which is called the Probate Court in England, and the Surrogate Court here. A surrogate was a substitute in the king's place, and in due course of time a surrogate judge was appointed. A probate court is a court which [illegible] the estates of deceased persons. A will must first be proved and presented to a judge before becoming valid. He is the legal owner of the property and representative of the person who is dead. In cases where no will is made the court comes in as protection and will appoint a proper person to look after the interests, will direct this administrator to administer the estate and divide the proceeds among the next of kin. All are Courts of Record. They are those courts whose judicial acts and proceedings are enrolled on parchment for perpetual memorial and testimony, and therefore of high and superimminent authority.

There is the Division Court, a minor court to deal with local disputes. It is without mouch formality and the amounts dealt with do not exceed $200.00. After this comes the Police Court, which is chiefly for criminal matters, and draws in the [illegible] Justice of the Peace. His duty is to ascertain whether or not there is a case and if so commit it for trial to a higher court.

Speaking of the Privy Council of Great Britain which is of constitutional importance, His Honor expressed displeasure at the critical attitude taken by certain periodicals over the idea of cases being taken from Ontario to this court for settlement. In his opinion not only from a political but also national standpoint, this action was desirable and highly commendable. It might prove a great calamity if certain cases were decided in our own country. This for various reasons. If the rights of the individual are valuable, then the Privy Council is most valuable. This is the fountain of justice for the whole empire. It is the lodestone in the centre of the empire and absolutely the greatest court in the world, with the most imminent judges, lawyers and philosophers of the Motherland. In this great tribunal the laws of each country are interpreted as administered in each particular place. It is the great mutual conscience of the Empire, and as such could not be done away with without great injury to the British people.

Concluding, His Honor defined law as "the absolute justice of the state enlightened by the perfect reason of the state—that is law."

NINE DIE OF INFLUENZA

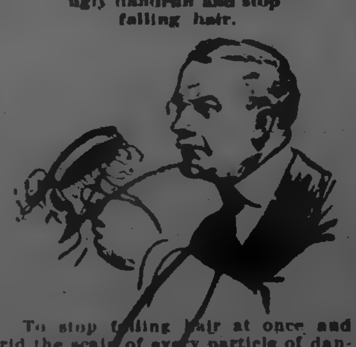
Windsor and Other Border Cities Are in Grasp of Epidemic

Windsor, Jan. 30. — Influenza cases caused nine deaths during the last twenty-four hours in border municipalities, and more than five hundred new cases were reported to the health authorities of the district, making the total number now under treatment close to 2,000.

Some factories reported yesterday that as many as 25 per cent of their employes were at home. Many of these men were compelled to stay at home to care for their families, it was stated.

LET "DANDERINE" SAVE YOUR HAIR

Get rid of every bit of that ugly dandruff and stop falling hair.



To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After several applications all dandruff usually goes and hair stops coming out. Every hair in your head soon shows new life, vigor, brightness, thickness and more color.

WILL HOLD REFERENDUM IN SASKATCHEWAN

TO DECIDE QUESTION OF IMPORTING LIQUOR FROM QUEBEC PROVINCE

Regina, Jan. 30.—In the Legislature Attorney-General Turgeon moved the second reading of the Saskatchewan Temperance Act, 1920. At the same time he moved that the Legislature petition the Dominion Government to take a referendum vote under the provisions of the Canada Temperance Act to determine whether the people of Saskatchewan want importation of liquor prohibited or not.

The new bill provides for the appointment of a commission of three members, with headquarters here, who will devote their full time to the administration of the act, aided by such inspectors as may be deemed necessary.

The commission is given control of imports of liquor in wholesale quantities for sale in the Province, and may require all persons handling to submit an inventory of all stocks on hand and under order, but not delivered. If the quantity should exceed the small maximum amount allowed to be kept the excess may be seized and disposed of or retained, as is deemed advisable.

WON REPUBLICAN FLAG

Crowds Cheer the New Sinn Fein Council in Dublin.

Dublin, Jan. 30.—When the new municipal council, composed mostly of Sinn Feiners, met for the first time today, it was greeted with the greatest enthusiasm by the crowds as the republican flag was hoisted on the City Hall.

Iron Pipe Makes Good Sprinkler.

Somebody attached to the Arroyo Seco library and playgrounds in Los Angeles had a bright idea. In order to sprinkle the rose hedges and vines in the grounds with little trouble, a three-fourths-inch pipe was perforated at intervals and placed on top of the fence. The pipe was then given water connection; and now, when the water is turned on, the entire hedge and border of flowers is sprinkled. Another length of perforated pipe takes care of the library terrace.—Popular Science Monthly.

The Past.

I have said that I deemed it a great thing for a nation, in all periods of its fortunes, to be able to look back to a race of founders and a principle of institution in which it might seem to see the realized idea of true heroism. That felicity, that pride, that help is ours. Our past, both its great eras, should announce, should compel, should spontaneously evolve us from a germ a wise moral and glorious future.—Henry Chorley.

Burdens That Overcome.

No man ever sunk under the burden of the day. It is when tomorrow's burden is added to the burden of today that the burden is more than a man can bear.

He Must Be in Livery.

One thing certain—if we ever get able to own a limousine car we will have a liveried driver if we have to dress that way ourself.—Dallas News.

Gets Its Own Drink.

A South American orchid lets down a tube and drinks when it needs water, then coils it on top of the plant when not in use.

Hens Produce Chalk.

It is estimated that a flock of 100 hens will produce 137 pounds of chalk annually in the shells of their eggs.

Typographically Put.

The laborer feels worthy of his higher.—Boston Herald.

Lame Sickness.

An investigation of the South African disease known as lamsiekte, or lame sickness, suggests that it is due to a special plant poison that is generated under abnormal conditions in grasses or other plants that are normally harmless. Its development seems to be associated with unusual weather and soil experiences of which summer drought is important. Through such conditions, wilting would favor the formation of the poison, and this explains the common belief that the disease results from eating wilted plants.

When Honey Bees Will Sting.

Dark colors seem to be more offensive to bees than light, and the person dressed in dark garments should show more caution when handling these useful insects. Offensive odors are also objectionable to them, and the person recently returning from working in the stable or whose perspiration has a distinct odor [illegible] show some discretion in making himself familiar around the [illegible].—[illegible] Gazette.

DRUMMER TOWNSHIP IS HIT HARD BY SMALLPOX

HAS HAD ELEVEN CASES THIS WINTER, PRONOUNCED RECORD SO FAR

The number of smallpox cases in the Province continues to increase, according to the weekly report of the Provincial Board of Health for the period ending last Saturday. Dummer township was hit the hardest of those municipalities visited by the disease for the first time this winter. It had 11 cases. Tweed was a close second with seven cases.

Last week the total number of new cases reported was 304, compared with 288 for the previous week, an increase of 16. There was one death from the disease last week. That was in Toronto. This city reported 142 cases last week.

Twenty-two municipalities report that the scourge made its appearance in their localities for the first time. They are: Saugeen, McClure, Tweed, Sidney, Elizabethtown, Bigwood and Delaware, Burwash Station, Pickering, Reach township, Scott E. Whitby township, Sundridge, Wallace, Vankleek Hill, Dummer township, Sophiasburg, Westmeath, Galt, Waterloo, Wellesley, Arthur township and Richmond Hill

Sleeping Sickness Spreads.

The records of the board show that sleeping sickness has made its appearance in all sections of the Province. It cannot be classed as an epidemic, being more sporadic in its appearance. For the four weeks of January ending last Saturday 18 cases were reported and eight deaths. While these figures are sufficient to cause uneasiness, particularly because no means is known of checking its spread, there may still be more cases in the Province. It is necessary that the municipal B. of Health shall report to the Provincial Department, and the figures secured are obtained from information by doctors.

During the four weeks there were two deaths from the disease in Yarmouth township, and one in each of the following places: Ottawa, St. Thomas, Tuckersmith, London township, E. Hawkesbury and McNab township.

There are single cases in each of the following municipalities: Goderich, Hullet township, Oxford township, Tilbury E. township, Adolphustown, Woodstock, E. Oxford township, Listowel, Picton and Iroquois.

Edward Flannery, aged 83, who for more than 60 years was employed by the Grand Trunk Railway, is dead at London, Ont.

Emily Kirkwood, aged 16, an employe of the Dominion Textile Company at Kingston, had her foot drawn into a roller on a machine and suffered a fracture between the ankle and the knee.

A bill introduced in New York Legislature provides that Thanksgiving Day shall be observed in that state on Nov. 11, armistice day.

MEMBER-ELECT, TOOMS IS NOT A RADICAL

MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE PUBLISHES A MODIFICATION OF A PREVIOUS ARTICLE

In a recent issue of Maclean's magazine there appeared an article, "The Birth of a Labor Party," in which certain incorrect and misleading statements were made concerning T. Tooms, M.P.P. for West Peterborough. Mr. Tooms sent a letter of protest to the magazine and in the February issue the following correction appears:

A letter from Thomas Tooms, member-elect for West Peterborough in the Ontario House, calls in question some statements relative to his career and opinions that appeared in an article, Thee Birth of a Labor Party," published in the January issue of Maclean's magazine. The account was based on information secured from sources that there was every reason to believe were thoroughly reliable. In justice to Mr. Tooms, however, the following summary supplied by Mr. Tooms is appended.

Mr. Tooms is a native of Ireland, where he married and where all but one of his children were born. He is a carpenter and joiner by trade with indentures of apprenticeship, and has been in business as a contractor under the name of Tooms and Harper. Mr. Tooms stated in the article in question, he has never worked for the Peterborough or in fact any other municipal corporation, that he is secretary of the local branch of the Independent Labor Party, and represented an International union at the 35th Trades and Labor Congress at Hamilton, and has acted as the business agent of the Building Trades Council of Peterborough, and a member of the Trades and Labor Council, which implies affiliation with the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. Tooms emphatically denies that he holds or ever has held views that could be described as radical, and adduces as evidence articles appearing in the Peterborough papers, which certainly do not suggest any such opinions. This resume of Mr. Tooms' life is published because he feels that the original article did him an injustice, in which view the editors now join.

Bird of Marked Peculiarities.

The yellow-breasted chat is an eccentric bird both when it is singing and in flying. When these birds sing their musical effort seems to require a great deal of flirting of the tail and twisting of the head; and even when they are flying their tail jerks up and down, giving them a strange appearance. The song of this bird is scarcely worthy of the name, having been called a "series of grotesque syllables."

First Opera in England.

In 1656 there was produced "The Siege of Rhodes Made a Representation by the Art of Perspectives in Scenes and the story sung in recitative Musick," which a writer in the Dictionary of National Biography characterized as "in some respects the most epoch-making play in the language." It was virtually the first opera produced in England.

MARATHON LODGE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

RE-ORGANIZED AFTER WAR WITH SUBSTANTIAL MEMBERSHIP. INSTALLATION

Marathon Lodge No. 39, Knights of Pythias, was re-organized last night in the S. O. E. hall under the most encouraging auspices. In 1915 so many local "Knights" volunteered for overseas service that Marathon Lodge found it imperative that the organization be disbanded for lack of home members to carry on the order's fraternal obligations. But with the return of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, local Knights decided to renew their charter, which renewal was consummated last evening in the resuscitated lodge's installation of officers. Practically all of Peterborough's Knights who engaged in the war and survived are now re-instated.

Officers Installed.

C. Commander—V. Hamilton.
V. Chancellor—H. J. Staunton.
Prelate—Wesley Rose.
Master of Finance—C. Gould.
Master of Works—R. G. Sturgeon.
Keeper Records and Seals—H. Routly.
Master of Exchequer — F. R. Clarke.
Master of Arms—P. J. Hislop.
Inner Guard—J. Garrett.
Outer Guard—H. Graham.

Deputy Grand Chancellor Jas. G. Wilson, of Toronto, is credited with splendid work as Installing Master last night. He very acceptably assisted by Grand Keeper of Records and Seals A. Coulter, also of Toronto, and by local Knights.

Marathon Lodge renews its charter with a membership of strength and character, which, coupled with substantial financial standing, promises rapid growth in this city.

This lodge will now meet regularly in the S. O. E. Hall, Hunter street, every second and fourth Thursday each month.

OSTEOPATHY AND THE MILK DIET

Dear Doctor Marshal,—

Anyone with poor blood and not too much of it can't beat this treatment, if they want to get well. For a year and a half previous I've spent several hundred dollars on drug treatment from several doctors and lost more than I gained. The thirty-dollars spent for treatments and thirty dollars spent in milk have been the best investment I ever made. I have gained twenty-one and a half pounds in four and a half weeks and am more than satisfied.

Gratefully,
E. R. O.

To Whom it May Concern:

I will be glad to tell you of other chronic conditions successfully treated by this method during the past four years.

Moore, who for many years has taken a deep interest in the musical service and work of the Choir in St. Paul's Church. Over forty sat down to the luncheon provided. At the close a social hour was spent consisting of impromptu speeches, solos and a recitation by Mr. W. A. Logan, the veteran member of the choir. Mr. Moore, in responding to the words of thanks and appreciation spoken by Mr. Tattersall, the organist, congratulated the choir on its present strength and the work they were doing under Mr. Tattersall's leadership. They had the numbers and the balance in the parts, and the leader to do as fine work as had ever been done in the past by the choir to make the service of praise in the church all that it ought to be.

We might as well face the facts: I love the church but it has been on too low a plane. I love her so much I want to see her lifted to a higher plane.—Amos J. Thomas.

In Lakefield and Peterborough and all over our land men are going down to destruction. These thousands challenge us. It is time the church awakened.—Amos J. Thomas.

It would have been a calamity if the Forward Movement had not been launched. It will be a disaster if the personal and financial objectives are not attained.—Amos J. Thomas.

The boss was tickled the other day when that Havelock man came back with two of his friends to have them also get some of our good remedies. That's the right kind of testimonial isn't it? Tell your dealer to stock these remedies or you will deal somewhere else.

EX-MAYOR DUNCAN ELECTED CHAIRMAN OF CITY DEVELOPMENT COMMISSION

City Council to be Asked for Appropriation to Carry on Work in View.

Ex-Mayor George H. Duncan was elected a member and permanent chairman of the City Development Commission at a full meeting of that evening in the Board of Trade rooms.

Mr. Duncan had been elected a member of the Commission to fill the vacancy caused by the inability of Mr. W. R. Breyfogle to attend regularly and especially the coming sessions. The Commission, however, is assured of the sympathetic and cordial interest and influence of Mr. Breyfogle who is keenly interested in its work and in a bigger and more beautiful Peterborough.

The acting chairman, Ryerson Ritchie, after calling the meeting to order, asked Mr. John Edgar to take the chair. He then nominated Mr. Duncan to be permanent chairman saying that the ex-Mayor was the ideal man for the place. Mr. Ritchie said Mr. Duncan's long and continuous public service to the city, especially as mayor during the past two years, had ftted him for work for work as the head of the new and important Commision. Mr. Duncan knew the people of the city and had their respect and he could be of great value in the work of city development, so directly of advantage to the whole community.

There was objection on Mr. Duncans' part but Mr. Ritchie's proposal was so sincere and cordial he won the approval of all members and when the vote for Mr. Duncan was made it was unanimous.

Appreciation From Mr. Adams

Letters from Mr. Thomas Adams, the Government City Planning Advisor, expressed his pleasure that the people had voted in favor of the Ashburnham Park and that the outlook was promising for making Peterborough one of the most progressive and most attractive cities in all Canada. He said he hoped to begin his studies of the city early in the spring.

EX-MAYOR DUNCAN

Mr. Adams inadvertantly helped to crytalize a long-felt want by all of the departments of the city, by asking for a general topographical map. Peterborough is behind most cities for such a map as Mr. Adams suggests, has never yet been made.

Goad's plan of forty years ago and Cameron's map of twenty-five years ago are the nearest the city has come toward having a comprehensive city map.

The report of the Commission to the Mayor and Aldermen will probably recommend an appropriation to meet the need of a modern and progressive city.

SIBERIA ALARMED OVER PROSPECTS OF AN UPRISING

ENTENTE TROOPS OF OCCUPATION HAVE SO FAR FAILED TO RENDER AID

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Jan. 31.— A special dispatch to the Vossiche Zeitung reports that Kottokitz in Silesia is alarmed over the prospects of a Polish uprising in view of the failure of the Entente troops of occupation to arrive and relieve the German forces. Kottowitz will be policed Sunday by security guards. Civil and military authorities, says the dispatch, report that they have not been informed with respect to the movement of the Entente forces of occupation and as a result the populace is disturbed in view of the gathering of Polish bands of the frontier. It is asserted that the demands of the Entente for quarters for the administrative staffs are unusually excessive. In Eppelin alone, it is said 250 dwellings have been requisitioned in addition to room acquired for the official bureau.

RUSSIAN SOLDIERS ARREST OFFICERS

OPEN REVOLT FINALLY PUT DOWN BY TROOPS OF THE GOVERNMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vladivostock, Jan. 31.— Three hundred Russian Government troops revolted here Monday, arrested their officers and refused to take orders from the Government authorities. It was not until this morning that the men were forced to surrender. After the revolutionary [illegible] against against the authority of Governor General Rozanov and General Semenoff had begun, the insurgent troops established themselves in a school building where the prisoners taken during the Gaida uprisings were housed. After remaining quietly in this stronghold throughout the night they refused to surrender. Artillery and machine guns were brought to bear on the building and finally the men surrendered. No one was killed during the fighting.

DISCUSSES STAND OF UNITED STATES ON PEACE LEAGUE

VISCOUNT GREY HAS TWO COLUMN LETTER IN LONDON TIMES TODAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 31.— Viscount Grey occupies two columns of the Times today with a letter on the attitude of the United States on the League of Nations. He carefully explains he is writing simply as a private individual making an earnest attempt to foster the friendliness of two democracies by explaining to Englishmen certain aspects of American hesitation to accept the League, which is not due to hostility to the principle but to constitutional questions and the possible effects which compel caution. The reservation respecting six British votes in the Assembly of the League, Viscount Grey thinks must give rise to dificulty, but neither Dominion nor Great Britain, he says, can admit qualification here. It must not be supposed, he says that in the United States there is any tendency to grudge the act that Canada and other Dominions have votes but, it is easy to realize that a feeling has been created by the statement that the British Empire has six votes and the United States one. Viscount Grey does not discuss the adjustment of this problem which, though a powerful factor in sentiment, will not be important in practice.

CITIZENS OF PETERBOROUGH HONOR MR. T. FRANK MATTHEWS AT A BRILLIANT SOCIAL FUNCTION

Presented With Beautiful Silver Loving Cup in Testimony of High Esteem and Respect in Which He is Held by This Community—Prominent Public Men Bid God Speed to Departing Citizen in Many Happy Words Denoting True Friendships and Admiration.

Some hundred and twenty-five citizens gathered at the banquet board in the Empress Hotel last night to do honor to Mr. T. Frank Matthews, eighteen years a Utilities Commissioner, an exemplory citizen of Peterborough, and an ideal employer of labor, whose position as president and general manager of the Canadian Packing Company has called for his removal to Toronto, a change of residence generally regretted in this community.

The assembly was representative of all Peterborough's interests — church, state, professional, educational, civic administration, manufacture, business commerce and labor in the person of Mr. Thomas Tooms, M.L.A.—all gathered together to convey to the guest of honor generous expressions of esteem and even affection, all of which was emphasized in the presentation of Mr and Mrs. Matthews of a beautiful silver loving cup suitably inscribed.

Although naturally not present at this gathering of men, Mrs. Matthews was not forgotten in the many happy after-dinner speeches, and that lady's splendid patriotic work in this city during the war, coupled with her kindly and charitable disposition and deep interest in Peterborough's weal, were frequently referred to in glowing terms.

Mine host, Mr. Chris. Graham, excelled himself in the tasty dinner provided, and the service generally could not have been more acceptable.

The whole program was one which reflects considerable credit on all concerned in its preparation, and the evening was of a happy and joyous nature, which will leave in the minds of all present very pleasant memories indeed.

The toast list was interspersed with three vocal solos by Mr. Douglas Carlisle and one by Mr. Asa Huycke, all rendered in commendable voice to piano accompaniment by Mr. John Crane, a popular favorite in this art at such functions.

Honorary Members Committee.

Those in charge of the function were: W. G. Morrow (chairman), W. H. Bradburn (vice-chairman), J. J. Turner (secretary), His Honor Judge Huycke, His Worship Mayor McIntyre, J. H. Burnham, M.P., T Tooms, M.P.P., W. H. Moore, K.C., Robt. Hicks, E. G. Patterson, R. R. Hall, J. Edgar Worth, C. C. Abbott G. N. Gordon, A. H Stratton, W. H Hill W. G Ferguson, E. H. D. Hall, R. M. Glover, W. R Breyfogle, J. J. Duffus, R. Denne, Jas. Hamilton, Dr. Scott, J. E. L. Goodwill, A. E. Coulthard, Geo. A. MacDonald, H. Phelan, Robt. Harstone.

Influence for Good.

Mr. R. R Hall, after the toast to the King, proposed that to the Dominion Parliament and the Provincial Legislature. In happy terms he referred to the boyhood day of Mr. Matthews and himself in Lindsay, and while regretting Mr. Matthews' removal to Toronto, still he rejoiced that his honored guest is moving to a wider sphere of usefulness, where his inherent talents and attractive influence will make for greater good. He was pleased to wish God-speed to Mr. and Mrs. Matthews. In eulogizing Mr. Matthews' splendid work on the Utilities Commission the speaker declared that in retiring from that body he is leaving behind him one of Peterborough's finest institutions as a monument to his genius, thrift and enterprise as chairman and member of that Commission.

As to the House of Commons Mr. Hall suggested that the result of co-operation or union has been the death of political parties and even good government, and, he said, "Let us hope the same result will not await our provincial friends in Toronto." Admitting that the Dominion had been faced with great and complex problems the past four or five years, problems with which we are not yet done, he did not know of any body of men requiring stouter hearts to accomplish their tasks than those responsible for the government of the Dominion. "Let us rise," he said, "to drink to the good healths of the members of the Dominion House of Commons, for good health they need."

A Ray of Hope.

Mr. Burnham, in replying to the the toast of the Federal Parliament, said that he was pleased to be present to do honor to Mr. Matthews, of whom everybody spoke well. He could speak of him as a neighbor, and could testify that the guest of the evening enjoyed the highest esteem of his neighbors, and surely that was no mean tribute to his standing in the community. The toast itself was a much more difficult one than it used to be. It was difficult in the changes from day to day in the personnel of the Government. It was difficult to say what the Government was, and as for its policy, that was largely a matter of conjecture. The speaker [illegible] the country must always come first to every true Canadian, and he was sorry to say that at present the opinion of people seemed to be that Federal power was open to be seized by those who rushed in first. If any one class had a right to seize the reins of power and take the country under its wing, so had any other class, and no doubt this would be the outcome.

It used to be considered that in the last analysis there were only two sides to every question, the "yes" side and the "no" side. Hence there were two great parties. But the day of reasoning had passed, the rights of minorities were ignored, the old fundamental truths were scrapped, and the force of a majority substituted. This meant the reign of force and terror. It is bringing disaster upon the world. Prices were rising and as Labor had as much right to boost its prices as anybody else. It was doing so. The genral balance or harmony of all classes, which should be the first consideration of a government, was ignored, and the people were going to solve the difficulty for themselves. This in the last analysis meant crying havoc and letting loose the dogs of war. In the grand scramble spirituality had been pushed into the background, hence the attempt to rescue it in the Forward Movement. The next move will be to discard the spiritual attributes such as sympathy, chastity, the spirit of justice, kindness, honor, etc., and to substitute for them "the drive." System or the business method in human life and affairs will then be complete and the life of man transformed into a machine. We will have to stop pretty soon and think what we are doing or the triumph of Bolshevism will await us. Mr. Drury's new educational policy gives a ray of hope, and Mr. Tooms has made a brilliant beginning by his service as a reconciler. We may expect great things from him in the future.

Man of Activities.

Mr. Thos. Tooms, Labor member of the Legislature, said:

It is with pleasure that I stand before you this evening to respond to the toast of Legislative Assembly of the Province.

I have never had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Matthews in any capacity but I have often heard of his many activities, not only in the city, but elsewhere.

I may say that as a Labor member I have heard nothing but the best of reports of Mr. Matthews as an employer, which is highly appreciated say a few words in regard to what I look upon as my mission in that body to which West Peterborough has done me the honor to elect me.

T. FRANK MATTHEWS
Citizen's Guest of Honor Last Night

I may say that I do not think my Peterborough friends elected me to act as a sort of frenzied Bolshevist to run full tilt at imaginary grievences. Gentlemen, I conceive my work to lie in a very different direction.

Labor, I may tell you, will have the first place in my heart. Becouse Labor in the past and still has many grievences to be adjusted And I look at the Labor question more as a question of humanity affecting the souls of men, and I believe a regeneration of that soul to be the main solution of present difficulties. Any methods that I may employ will be those of recognized usage, and I hope of moderation and friendliness.

The dawn of a new era is with us, and its achievements can be best accomplished by the smooth running course of evolution, not by petty party antagonism. We have no cause to fear of an erratic government or revolution so long as our legislation is based on the broad lines of equity.

But the day has gone by when we could sit down and wait for the millenum to dawn.

Like other political parties, we shall have to be alive and see that justice according to the light afforded us is administered to all alike. This, in short, Mr. Chairman, will be my one endeavor: To be a true friend to the interests of Peterborough County and city alike, irrespective of class or creed, and to prove myself so in the most sane and impartial manner possible.

I may add that I have great admiration for Premier Drury and his colleagues in the Government, who are now going through their initiate degree. And I believe some people are trying to make it uncomfortable for them as possible, which I think, at the present time, is a crime to the best interests of Ontario and its people.

One thing, gentlemen I can assure you: That every subject affecting our social and industrial life, will be met with in the spirit of honesty courage and common sense, which will make our Province the province from which all good things do come.

True Friendship.

In proposing the toast to our guest, Judge Huycke thought it had been more fitting had this task been assigned to someone of the many present who had been associated with Mr. Matthews all their lives in affairs affecting the interests of this community. Still after an association of ten years' standing with Mr. Matthews, he had acquired great admiration for his sterling qualities of character generally. Mr. Matthews had been prominent in public activities and a leader in every enterprise in this city's interests. He had always been ready to help the suffering and needy, and this community owes him a debt of gratitude for his public services. The speaker here characterized Mr Matthews as the friend of those present and as friends, he said, they were sorry to see him leave. We think of him with respect, admiration and high affection and would be delighted were he to reconsider his decis-

CANADIAN PACKING COMPANIES LIVED UP TO OBLIGATIONS IN WAR

Mr. T. Frank Matthews' Speech in Full at Banquet Given in His Honor by Peterborough Citizens Last Night Extolls Merits of This City.

In responding to the toast to himself at the Citizens' Banquet in his honor, at the Empress Hotel last night, Mr. Matthews said:

"Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: —

I desire to acknowledge with a full heart the honor done me this day in tendering this splendid banquet, and giving me an opportunity of what might be termed of officially saying goodbye' to Peterborough. But I am not very far removed from this important centre, and I assure you that after a residence among you for more than thirty years, my interest in this city will continue, not only because there are so many here whom I am proud to believe are my friends. This city has an enviable record to maintain, its products are found in many parts of the world. You can travel in a Peterborough canoe in the Arctic circle, in Egypt and South Africa, and you can sleep in a Turner tent in almost every country. Its electrical products and food products and other manufactured goods are widely distributed. In fact, Peterborough is well known everywhere, and for this fact all citizens are justly proud. The sons of this city are everywhere, many of them filling important positions in finance, education and industry, the product of Peterborough schools, which have always in my time at least, been controlled by a most efficient Board of Education. I could go on and further extoll the merits of this city, its advantages as a residential and manufacturing city, but you are all familiar with any particular points that I could name.

I feel strongly that this gathering is not a tribute to me personally, but a tribute to the Commission of which I have had the honor to be chairman during the past eighteen years, and I assure you it is extremely gratifying to know that the affairs of the city under its control, have been managed in such a manner as to merit the approval of the citizens. And I desire at this point to say that during the entire period of eighteen years there was complete harmony in the Board, and every decision arrived at was unanimous in the judgment of the Commissioners, and the operations under our control were looked after with the same interest as if our personal funds were invested, and I have yet to learn when one cent was wrongly applied. This does not mean that our judgment was always of the best, had some of the work to be done over again, different methods would no doubt now be adopted.

I will not attempt to review the growth of the Waterworks and Hydro Electric systems from its purchase for the present time. This has recently been dealt with in a letter published about a month ago written by Ryerson Ritchie, but I would remind you that we, as citizens, are under obligation to those who in years gone by had faith in this city, and who brought about the purchase of the Waterworks from the Peterboro Water Company. I refer to Mr. T. H. G. Denne, Mayor in 1901-1902 and the Council of those years. I also desire to pay tribute to those men who invested their money originally in the Peterborough Water Company, and waited for years for dividends, but who had faith in the future of this city. I refer to the late John Burnham R. A Morrow, Dr. Boucher, Chas. Stapleton, G. W. Hatton, W. H. Hill, E. H. D. Hall and others These men had a vision of Peterborough's future greatness, and just when the investment was on a good paying basis the city exercised its opinion through a clause in the Water Company's franchise, and purchased its rights and property and proceeded to operate it on account of and for the benefit of its citizens

I was persuaded by the late Pete Hamilton, J. R. Stratton and others to accept the nomination as candidate for the office of Water Commissioner and with Mr. W. H. Hill was elected. We two with Mayor T. H. G. Denne constituted the Board I was named as chairman, largely I think because Mr Denne was Mayor. Mr. Hill was chairman of the School Board, and these two men wished the civic honors to be equally divided, and I continued to fill that position until I resigned in December last.

During the years following 1902 we were faced with many problems, the pump house and machinery of the works were in first-class condition but the dam which controlled the head of water necessary to operate the pumps was an old type timber dam with wide sleuce-ways to permit of the passage through it of square timber cribs. These openings were wide and difficult to maintain. On more than one occasion we were in serious [illegible] but I would just mention one particular trouble. In the Spring of 1905, when the water was at its highest, the stop logs in the sleuce-way at the east end of the dam were carried away. The flow of water through the opening caused an eddy on the down stream side which rapidly eat away the bank and threatened the existence of the dam and therefore the supply of water to the city. Fortunately for us the contractor for the Quaker Oats dam at London street was here completing his work and had it not been for John O'Toole and his men the consequences would have been very serious. He immediately undertook the work of stopping the flow, and after forty-eight hours of continuous effort this was accomplished.

It was decided shortly afterwards to build a new concrete dam, and after obtaining the advice of several engineers, including the late T. A Hay, we undertook to build a new dam and power house about 700 feet down stream. This was accomplished in 1909-10 and I unhesitatingly say that the equipment of the water department of this city is equal, if not better than any city in the country of similar size or up to a population of 50,000. Since that time improvements and developments have been made. Duplicate force mains have been laid, an auxiliary steam pumping unit has been installed, and other work carried out, to ensure a continuity of service for the domestic and manufacturing needs of this city together with an ample supply for fire purposes.

The carrying on of this work was possible only because the Commission had efficient men and were well advised. Many of you remember Mr. Wilson Henderson, the engineer in charge, a man of sterling integrity and sound judgment. We are under obligation to him for the manner in which the work was performed. He was seconded by Mr. Dick Mertin and others, and at this point I desire to testify to the ability and sound judgment of Mr. William Kennedy, junior of Montreal, the consulting engineer, on whom we relied with increasing confdence over a period of many years.

I have dwelt so far on waterworks matters only. This was my first civic study, and to a layman, more easily understood than is the distribution of electrical energy, but I now wish to deal with the Hydro Electric portion of the city's investment. When in 1914 it was decided by the Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario to take over the power plants of the Trent Valley Waterway and to sell to Peterborough that portion of its property within the city, it was decided by the council to place the control of it in the hands of a commissioner and for this purpose the Utilities Commission was formed. The personnel of the Utilities Commission remained the same as the Waterworks Commission, and it was immediately decided to open up a joint office for both the Hydro and Waterworks Departments. We were fortunate in securing Mr. C. E. House as engineer, and Mr. J C Anderson, for many years accountant for the William Hamilton Company, as accountant for the commission These two men evolved the system under which the operations of the electrical departments have been controlled. We were handicapped on the start because of the fact that we had no access to the records of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, and I assure you that it was no easy task to take over and operate the system without any previous knowledge of its lines, customers and connections. At that time the street lighting was done by an antiquated carbon arc lamp system with power developed for its purpose on the old

SATURDAY, JANUARY 31, 1920.

A FORMER RESIDENT HONORED.

MR. T. F. MATTHEWS has won the respect of the people of Peterborough as a business man, as a private citizen, and as a public official. During his residence in Peterborough he took an active part in every move designed to promote the interests of the city. He was instrumental in building up one of the city's leading industries and making the name of Peterborough known in every section of the business world. It is his advancement in this business that has deprived Peterborough of the advantage which his residence and activities here always meant, as his new duties have rendered it necessary for him to make his home in Toronto.

Mr. Matthews will always be remembered for his public service as a long time member of the Water Board and later, under a new order, of the Utilities Commission. His administration has been marked by the same acumen and energy that made him successful in the control of his private affairs, and his work in this connection will always stand as a testimony to his ability. The banquet tendered him last night by his former fellow citizens was a graceful and well-merited expression of appreciation for all that he accomplished on behalf of the city during his long years of residence here.

GRANTS BY THE COUNTY COUNCIL.

IN THE PRESENT temper of the people of Peterborough, city and county, when there is a co-operative movement stronger than any ever previously noted, to extend and further develop the Industrial Exhibition, the action of the County Council in voting the Fair directors a grant of $2000 cannot fail to meet with general approval. The Fair is one of the best assets, not only of the county but of the entire Central Ontario district. Successful as it has been in the past, the enterprise is still really in its infancy. Its best days are yet ahead, and it is such help as that extended to it by the County Council yesterday that is required to bring it up to the highest possible standard. One of the directors told the county councillors yesterday that the spacious grounds are to be planted with trees and so fitted up as to make a suitable place for the holding of picnics. Upon this promise the councillors can rely, and the present generation will live to see the day that the Fair grounds will be a pleasure resort not for the few days that the Fair is held, but for every day in the year, winter pastimes, too, being provided. Its location, serving as it will a growing section of the city, is ideal in every respect for this purpose.

One of the members of the County Council, when the matter of a grant to the War Veterans was taken up expressed the opinion that in a few years at the most the association would dwindle away and that the buildings now occupied by the returned soldiers will be diverted to other uses. There is little likelihood of anything of the kind taking place. It will be many a long year before, in the natural order of things, the ranks of the Veterans will be completely decimated. Even then a new organization, the Sons of Veterans, is likely to arise, just as it has in the United States, and that the young fellows of the future will follow in the footsteps and perpetuate the memory of their heroic sires. The objects of the organization, the basis of the association, are such as to warrant the belief that the G. W. V. A. will for long years to come remain a force in the community. Any organization the creed of which is the cultivation of a spirit of fraternity, the object of which is to render aid to the needy, can hardly fail of success. The County Council could have extended a still more generous measure of help to the Veterans and kept well within the lines of public duty.

It was no empty compliment paid to County Clerk E. M. Elliott when one of the councillors asserted, when moving that his salary be increased, that as a public official he was second to none. Mr. Elliott's world is the county of Peterborough, and its affairs are his chief concern. He is a walking encyclopaedia on everything that pertains to the interests of the municipality, and an authority on all public questions, especially anything relating to the welfare of the rural communities. In these days, when the tendency of the times everywhere in city, county, province and Dominion, is to increase the compensation of public servants, it was only a matter of justice for the councillors to raise the pay of the County Clerk. There has never been a question as to either his efficiency or his devotion to duty.

THE SCHEMING TEUTON.

IT IS SIGNIFICANT that no sooner was Germany granted permission by the Allies to resume diplomatic relations with the others powers than she availed herself of the opportunity offered, and that the first nation with whom she renewed pre-war relations was Japan. The German representative who goes to that country will soon have all the prerogatives of an ambassador. It is announced that one of his aims will be to prevent a renewal of the Anglo-Japanes treaty, which expires within the year, and this announcement is sufficient to give the rest of the civilized world cause for uneasiness.

Back in 1902 England and Japan entered into a friendly agreement, which three years later was developed into an offensive and defensive alliance. In the event of war the two powers were to be allies. They were to mutually resist any attempt by other powers to encroach upon the British possessions in India or to interfere with the foreign policy of Japan. In 1907 France and Russia entered into a similar compact with Japan, so that the recognition of the latter as a world power was complete.

In the late war Japan faithfully adhered to every term of her compact with her allies, and as a result the German hold on China was broken, and India's safety from attack was assured with Japan doing police duty in that quarter of the world. The Japanese may be backward in civilization and in need of the offices of the Christian missionary from America, but there is certainly an integrity about the national character which holds the Jap faithful to every trust which he assumes.

But territorial expansion is essential to the future of Japan. The race must have more room in which to develop. This has always been one of the problems that has engaged the gravest consideration of the statesmen of all civilized countries. Immigration of the Japanese except to a well-defined limited extent, is prohibited by Britain, Canada included, and by the United States. The relations of the latter country and the Japanese Government have been strained for years. More than once the two powers have been on the verge of war. The American occupation of the Philippine Islands has offered an easy point of attack for the Japanese in the event of actual hostilities. China, Russia, and, most of all, India are fields for exploitation by the Mikado's subjects. A German-Japanese alliance would mean a new and a grave menace to the future peace of the world.

THE MODERN NEWSPAPER.

J. ELLISON YOUNG, managing editor of the Border Cities Star, published in Windsor, delivered an address before the Rotary Club of that city in which he gave his ideas as to what a modern newspaper should be. Mr. Young, although he holds a position of so much importance, the directing spirit of what is really a metropolitan paper, even though it be published in one of our smaller cities, is still in his twenties, and can be taken as a fair representative of the younger newspapermen of the day, men of vision and with professional enthusiasm, that best of all inspirations for efficient effort. He received his early training on a St. Thomas paper that was partisan to the core, but evidently his experience in the railway city has not warped his judgment. He sees the signs of the times and realizes that the day of the rabid party paper is over. There must be some independence of thought in the modern newspaper. Unjustifiable attacks upon a party, especially if that party be in power, are no longer tolerated. All through Ontario today there are newspapers that have adopted this policy, as a matter of business, we believe, rather than from principle. Part of Mr. Young's address was as follows:

"I cannot put it too emphatically in saying that no self-respecting paper allows its editorial opinions to be influenced by personal business considerations. The newspaper that supports this or condemns that for its own financial gain may prosper for a while, but the people will eventually find it out, and then will come a revulsion of feeling that will force the owners to the conclusion that there are some things the public will not tolerate.

"Newspaper success is founded on service to the public—high-minded, disinterested service that stands for courteous treatment and the gospel of the square deal. It is generally admitted that the day of the intensely partisan newspaper has ended, that is, the paper that was gotten up solely with the idea that one political party or group of industries represented all the virtue, brains and patriotism in the country. There was a time when a paper built on those lines was popular, when it could succeed. But party lines are no longer so closely drawn and people have come to think for themselves instead of leaping at the crack of the party whip. The newspaper that serve all classes of the people, that treats every class as well as the others, that present all sides of public questions, that condemns the wrong and upholds the right, is the newspaper that succeeds today. A newspaper may be bright and attractive, print all the news that's fit to print, and yet fail to 'go over' because the people know that it is being printed to grind the political axe of so-and-so, or to bring about certain things in which the owner and his friends are interested. It is plain, therefore, that first and foremost the successful newspaper must have the confidence of the public. Service, honesty, fairness and absence of prejudice, coupled, of course, with the ability to secure the news and present it attractively and accurately, are the keynotes of newspaper success.

"The newspaper occupies a larger place in the scheme of modern life than probably any other single institution. It is, for instance, the cheapest thing you buy, and is therefore, available to the poorest man and the poorest woman. If you paid for newspapers on the same basis that you pay for everything else in these days of ever increasing prices, your subscription price would be all the way from twenty-five to fifty dollars a year. And ask yourselves if there is anything you buy from which you get nearly as much value. Newspaper costs have jumped tremendously, and the end is not yet. In addition, there is the present inability to secure white paper, a subject in itself sufficient to fill a volume. You have read of several Western newspapers being forced to suspend publication on this account. Conditons are not quite as serious in the East, but they are bad nevertheless, and the immediate prospects are far from satisfying. The only solution is smaller newspapers and increased rates, else many publishers will be forced out of business."

Reminiscences of an Editor

(By A. McG.)

My acquaintance with American politics dates from 1885, the first year of the administration of President Cleveland, who was the first president that the Democrats had succeeded in electing since before the war. My earliest recollection in this regard is of a vast country still divided over the issues that were fought out on many a battlefield in the South. There were two vast parties in the country, called respectively Republicans and Democrats, but they might more aptly have been styled the Northern and Southern factions. The wounds that each side had suffered in the war were still bleeding. The old fighting spirit was still rampant. The South was beaten, it is true, but by no means vanquished. The victorious North was disposed to vaunt its virtue and sacrifice in saving the Union.

Politics is pretty much the same game, just as is baseball or cricket, wherever it is staged. In the United States, at the time referred to, the loyalty cry was the chief stock in trade of many a politician in the North, just as the same cry has been employed to a similar end in this country on more than one noted occasion. Patriotism as the term was generally understood was supposed to be the national characteristic of the Republican party. The Democrat, if he lived in the North, was a copperhead; if in the South, a traitor, according to the Republican political code. Loyalty and the tariff question were the main issues in every election, state county or federal, just as the same issues had thrown the people into one of the fiercest wars in history, a war now called a rebellion, but which by a narrow margin only failed to attain the proportions of a revolution. Waving the "bloody short" was a feature of every Republican political campaign. The old spirit that sent two sections of a great republic into armed conflict was kept at the flaming point by semaphore orators and cracker barrel politicians. Every base passion in human nature was appealed to. The war veterans of the North were placed on a pedestal and coddled and petted before every election, cajoled with promises of increased pensions and easy places in the public service.

I lived in the United States long enough to see all this changed, to see the animosity between the North and South die out to a great extent and elections for the presidency fought on the merits of the real issues before the country, rather than by appeals to the sordid passions of the voters. Cleveland did much to heal the breach between the two sections and to quell the resentment of the one party and the ungenerous triumph of the other. Cleveland's part in American affairs is of too recent date to be properly weighed by the public, but American history will give him a place among the greatest of the chief executives ever chosen by that nation. If he was not a statesman, he certainly was not a politician in any sense of the latter term. He pugnaciously followed out any policy which he regarded as the right. He was swayed only by his own personal convictions and was alike indifferent to the praise or the criticism of political friends or foes. He exercised the presidential prerogative of the veto to an extent never known before or since. He regarded the South as part of the Republic rather than as a newly conquered section, the population of which were to be disciplined for their sins. He blocked pension legislation that was nothing more nor less than raids made on the treasury for the unification of the Republican party. He vetoed a tariff bill that was really a compromise between the high protectionists and the free traders because his personal conviction was that free trade was the only logical national policy, and in his plans compromises on any question found no consideration. Cleveland did all this, too, in the face of another impending presidential election, at which he was to be again a candidate. He knew that he held office by a narrow margin, that his party was really in the minority, so far at least as the popular vote was concerned, but here was a man who in very truth would rather be right, as it was given to him to see the right, than to be president of the United States. He was overwhelmingly defeated in 1888, but he retired to private life without an apparent regret and never so much as hinted an apology for the policy that proved so disastrous.

But Cleveland lived to be president for another term, and so received from the American nation the greatest tribute ever accorded a public man in that country. They were constrained in the end to admit his political righteousness. He was called from the political tomb in 1892 and given another chance. His renomination and re-election in that year was more phenomenal, more of a compliment to his previous administration, ten times over, than would have been his success in 1888. The man who in his administration gave practical exemplification of the principle: "A public office is a public trust," was eventually vindicated. In Cleveland's case it was proved to a demonstration that political honesty is, after all, the best policy.

The presidential election of 1888 was the first in which I took part as a newspaper man, and I will never forget the experience, conducted as it was on a scale the like of which I had never witnessed. The Republicans moved heaven and earth to regain national control. There was a chance that Michigan would go Democrat, and that its fourteen electoral votes would be cast for Cleveland, a Detroit man being in the Cabinet at the time as Postmaster-General. Like every doubtful state, Michigan was made a storm centre in the contest. The cities and the country districts were fairly flooded with campaign literature, and Republican spellbinders, the most noted in the party, made the atmosphere fairly sizzle with their oratory. The hue of everything, even to the faith of the populace, took on a crimson tinge from the waving of the bloody shirt. The late James G. Blaine, the greatest stump speaker of them all, made a tour of the State. It is little wonder if a young man, whose political opinions were in the formative stage, thrown into such a vortex, should imbibe the principles that he heard enunciated with so much fervor, and became as devout a Republican as any of them.

When after his abdication as German Emperor William Hohenzollern fled to Holland as a place of refuge from the war that he and the junkers had made and lost, it was certain that before the end was reached he would be the cause of trouble to Holland. The trouble has been long coming but it has arrived. The Supreme Council of the Allies has asked the Government of the Netherlands, or Holland as the little kingdom is more commonly known, to surrender William in order that he may be tried with other war criminals, according to the provisions of the Treaty of Versailles. The Government of Holland has now to make a decision. At the head of that Government is Queen Wilhelmina, who succeeded to the throne at the age of ten, but who now is a woman of forty years. Her husband is a German, Prince Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, but she is sole sovereign.

Queen Wilhelmina rules through a responsible ministry that is answerable to an elective Parliament.

It will be this ministry that will answer the demand of the Allies respecting the surrender of the ex-Kaiser.

From childhood Queen Wilhelmina has been greatly beloved by the people of Holland, and she has always taken a deep interest in their welfare. She is an enthusiastic farmer. A dairy in connection with the Royal Castle at Loo is conducted on sound business lines. Large quantities of milk and butter are sold, and the dairy is not only self-supporting but yields a handsome profit for its royal owner.

An increase in salary—
But are you better off?

"The more I make the more I spend," has been a young man's cry for generations.

When many a man's salary is $15 a week he lives up to every cent of it, putting off the time to start a savings account until his wages are increased to $20.

But when the $5 a week increase comes, does it go into the bank? Not very often.

Make that salary increase do something for you if it is to be of any benefit. Deposit it in The Bank of Toronto each week.

With the interest it earns, you will find at the end of the year that you have a lump sum with which you can do material things.

PETERBORO INTERMEDIATES DEFEAT LINDSAY 8 TO 6 AND TIE DISTRICT

Brock Street Rink Jammed With Immense Crowd to See One of the Best Games Ever Seen on Local Ice Replete With Spectacular Plays

There was nothing left undone that might be desired at the hockey match between Peterborough and Lindsay intermediates at Brock street rink last night. A huge crowd was in attendance, the ice was in good condition, the home team won, and every player in the game gave everything he had during the full sixty minutes of play.

The stars of the night were the rival goal tenders and the rival captains. Murray and O'Loughlin made many spectacular stops and were as steady as a rock. Captain Lorney Rose was the fastest man on the ice and his rushes were of the spectacular order throughout, he working until he could literally do no more.

Coombs worked like a Trojan for his team, but the road grew pretty rough as the game proceeded and he took too many hard falls to keep up his enthusiasm to the end of the play.

The changed lineup of the Petes was the best balanced one seen in action this season. Ray Rose was sent to centre, and combined very nicely with his brother and Harry Thornton. Ray is a good centre player and should be left at that position. Harry Thornton at right wing turned in the game of his life. He seemed to add about fifty per cent. to his speed and stickhandling ability,' and combined nicely with the Rose brothers.

The Line Up

Lindsay—Goal, O'Loughlin, defence, Lipsett and Flavelle; centre, McElroy; right wing, Coombs; left wing, Carew. Subs., McFee and Mills.

WOMAN'S RIGHT TO PROPOSE

British Girl Claims That Conditions Following War Have Made Old Ideas Look Foolish.

Among the last rights of women to be fought is the right to propose.

It is the inevitable consequence of the vote and of the war. The position of woman with regard to marriage has entirely changed, and the sooner it is recognized the better. Up till now nice women have properly not proposed, because it meant virtually: "Will you keep me?"

Now that a woman can be as independent as a man she need have no scruples on that score, "A Girl From the War" writes in the continental edition of the London Mail.

In every other direction the position of men and women, with regard to marriage, is equal. It is quite ridiculous that it should be an honorable thing in a man to love a woman who does not return his affection, and yet be a disgrace to a woman to love unasked. A proposal from the man clears the air, and it would be the same with one from the woman.

In the present condition of things a woman often wastes the best years of her life on a hope. It would be much better if she could say in the beginning: "I like you, and if you like me as much as I like you, let us spend our lives together." It would be quite simple for the man to reply, if he were of a different mind: "I am sorry. Of course, I like you, but I do not feel like going into partnership."

The woman would then put him out of her mind and go about her business. Broken hearts heal in time, and it is possible that hearts would never get beyond the wounded stage if this plan were adopted.

There is a serious reason why it should be adopted. Some badly wounded men are feeling much as if they had changed places with the women. They do not have to say, "Will you keep me?" when they propose, but what to them is almost as bad, "Will you keep yourself?"

It would be a great relief to many a crippled man in love if proposals were taken out of men's hands.

In the present circumstances no nice girl could bring herself to propose, however willing she is to keep herself, however much she loves the man.

There is no need to fear that the new right would give added license to the other kind of girl. She proposes now, although not in so many words.

Chinese Salvation Army.

A new element has been added to the night life of Peking and Tien-tsin, strange and yet familiar to occasional sightseers from western countries. The "Chiou Shih Chun," or "Save-World Army," is conducting its open air meetings on the street corners of the Chinese cities, and the spectacle reproduces in China a scene that was equally strange in the great cities of England and America when the Salvation army first came into existence. For "Chiou Shih Chun" is Chinese for "Salvation army" in a land where the language has no exact verbal equivalent for "salvation" and must do its best by the combination "save-world."

Less than three years ago the Salvation army made its start in China, and a party of forty officers from the West tackled the job of mastering enough of the language to begin operations. At present there are five corps of the "Chiou Shih Chun" in Peking, two corps in Tien-tsin, and fourteen scattered throughout the country as far north as the border of Mongolia. In organization the "Chiou Shih Chun" is identical with the Salvation army elsewhere and the Chinese salvation soldier lives under the same rules of discipline.—Christian Science Monitor.

:-: THE BUSINESS GIRL :-:

(By Lillian Leveridge.)

With steady pauseless feet she hastes
Along the crowded street,
That echoes, morn and noon and eve,
The clamor and the beat
Of grinding wheels and vendors cries
And tramp of hurrying feet.

Her eyes are bright, her step alert,
Her spirit joys to know
Herself a wave of the life-tide
That surges to and fro;
Her own allotted task a work
No hand but hers may do.

The flaunting shows of wealth and pride
Are passed unheeded by;
No art is there to swerve her steps
Or win one anxious sigh.
But lo, a window full of flowers
Has caught her ardent eye.

Today wild asters of the wood
The place of honor hold
They bring a glimpse of heaven's own blue
And sunlight's peerless gold,
And memories of far-off things
Their petals fair enfold

Of wind swept hills and perfumed vales
Where dreaming sunbeams lie
Upon a myriad swaying blooms
That almost seem to vie
In color and in loveliness
With yon low bending sky

Of forest stillness that enfolds
In warm and close embrace,
A thousand little loves that know
The smile on nature's face,
And find within her sheltering arms
A blest abiding place

The business girl amid the toil,
The hurry and the din,
Feels that the wild has opened wide
Its arms to take her in;
She knows that all true things and sweet
Are still her own to win.

Dr. McPherson On The Well Babies' Clinic

At the close of the annual meeting of the Local Council of Women held last week, Dr. McPherson spoke briefly on the subject of the Well Babies' Clinic.

Dr. McPherson's address was interesting and timely, for, although everybody seems interested in the new work which is about to open up, still there are many things not well understood by all.

Dr. McPherson first outlined the reasons for beginning this work. He showed that the death rate among very young children in this, as in other cities, is alarming. This must mean that many children are born in an unhealthy condition or that they are not properly fed and cared for during the early years of their life. At any rate, it has been found in other cities that when work of the kind proposed to be done by the Well Babies' Clinic has been taken up, the mortality among children has been considerably lowered.

The doctor referred also to the large number of physical defects found among the men presenting themselves for military service during the war, and showed that a great many of these defects could have been remedied if taken care of in childhood.

The organization of the work has already been fairly well developed. A strong committee of women under the convenorship of Dr. Birnie has been formed; the medical men of the city have volunteered their services, and already have their plans drawn up for the work; the city is at the present time being canvassed to secure the names and addresses of all children under four years of age; rooms have been secured in the G. W. V. A. building, and a number of trained nurses and V. A. D.'s have offered their services. Besides this, a sum of money sufficient to begin the work has been subscribed by several of the leading women's organizations.

Dr. McPherson stated that the clinic would be open two afternoons of each week with two doctors and several trained nurses and assistants in attendance.

Talks and demonstrations on the general care and feeding of children will be given, and each child will be examined by the doctors in attendance. Those in need of medical care will be referred to their family physician, and records will be kept of each child attending the clinic. Where necessary the home will be visited and the mothers assisted in every way possible.

Dr. McPherson urged the co-operation of all in this work, pointing out that it was for everybody, rich and poor, and all tended to raise the standard of health for the babies of our community.

This will be followed by the sacramental service at 11 a.m. There will also be a reception service for new members. It is expected that a goodly number will unite.

The pastor will preach at the evening service giving the first of a special series of sermons. The subject will be "The Man Who Was Taught a Great Fact in a Strange Way." A welcome is extended to all.

Y.W.C.A.

Girls and women all over the city will be glad to hear that the swimming pool of the Young Women's Christian Association is to be re-opened the first of March, both for general swimming and for instruction. Miss Muriel Payne, of Toronto, who is to be the swimming instructor, holds the honorary instructor's certificate of the Royal Life Saving Society and has passed for both the bronze medallion and the award of merit. Classes for all ages will be formed both in swimming and in life-saving.

Brilliant Function by Belmont Club

An event which will be recorded in the social calendar of this city as the most brilliant and generally successful of the season took place last night in the Belmont Club dance, which was held in the G.W.V.A. hall. This well equipped and spacious hall which lends itself admirably for such an occasion, was the scene of much gaiety when the elite of Peterborough assembled there to trip the light fantastic. A program of excellent music was supplied by the noted Strathdee's Orchestra of Toronto. This group of musicians, always among the best, were never heard to better advantage than last evening, and their beautiful numbers were in themselves an inspiration to dance. Great credit is due those in charge for the efficient manner in which the affair was conducted, especially the stewards, Messrs. J. A. McNabb, O. A. Moore, W. E. Tanning, F. H. Jobbitt, J. H. Kemp and F. Skinner, who are largely responsible for the splendid success it proved to be. Also special mention should be made of the good will and courteous interest of the patronesses and the introductory committee.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S PLAN FOR THE U. S.

HOPED TO MAKE HIS COUNTRY COMMERCIAL LEADER OF THE UNIVERSE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rome, Jan. 31.—The publication of the activities of the late Count Macchi Di Cellere, former Italian Ambassador at Washington, has been begun by Giornale D'Italia, which in today's issue takes up the relations between the late Ambassador and President Wilson. Count Colere is quoted as making the following statement: "President Wilson, from the beginning of the conflict felt it would give him an opportunity to transform the United States from an industrail to a commercial power, and to shape the European markets with a view to securing control of them. He thought to attain this conquest by imposing peace on the belligerents, but Germany, with her obstinate provocations dragged him into the war, wth the hope the the United States might become the arbiter when peace finally came."

THE FORWARD CAMPAIGN

Will Methodists of the historic Bay of Quinte Conference be able to raise the $360,000 set as "minimum objective" in the National Campaign?

Superficial comparison with the marks set for other conferences makes the task seem camparatively easy. The Toronto Conference is to raise $1,100,000. But the city of Toronto, with its millionaires has been assigned $350,000 of that amount, leaving only $150,000 for a region comparable in area to the "Bay" Conference.

London Conference with a $550,000 objective and Hamilton with $600,000 provide fairer comparisons in area but not in population. The provincial total is to be $2,800,000 before the drive closes on February 14th.

Each conference has its peculiar advantages. London has the inspiration of Brownsville, the first circuit in eastern Canada to surpass its objective. Against this the Bay of Quinte can set Tamworth, a semi-rural circuit which "took its objective like a trout takes a fly" according to its pastor.

In the Hamilton Conference, there is a minister, it is learned, is giving $300, although his salary, now $1,200 a year has averaged only $900 during the past quarter century. Toronto's first eleven subscriptions total $435,000.

The Bay of Quinte is the only conference to have its own publicity bureau.

OSTEOPATHY AND THE MILK DIET

Here is a note received this morning. It speaks for itself:

Dear Doctor Marshal,—

Anyone with poor blood and not too much of it can't beat this treatment if they want to get well. For a year and a half previous I've spent several hundred dollars in drug treatment from several doctors and lost more than I gained. The thirty dollars spent for treatments and thirty dollars spent in milk have been the best investment I ever made. I have gained twenty-one and a half pounds in four and a half weeks and am more than satisfied.

Gratefully,

To Whom It May Concern:

I will be glad to tell you of other chronic conditions successfully treated by this method during the past four years.

SOME BOOKS THAT ARE WORTH READING

(By F. M. Dela Fosse.)

One of the things that strike librarians with dismay is the fact that so many hundreds of books well worth reading lie neglected on the shelves.

In order to determine to what extent this neglect affects our own library a survey was recently made of twelve shelves, comprising in all about 140 volumes. These were works of fiction. An examination showed that no less than 60 out of the 140 were books by authors whose names are still well-known but whose popularity has waned in the light of later stars that have appeared in the literary firmament. Harrison Ainsworth, Grant Allen, Miss Austen, Frank Anstey, Edwin L. Arnold, Cuthbert Bede, Besant & Rice, are among those who are being fast relegated to oblivion but whose works compare favorably with the best in their respective lines that our present day authors seem capable of producing.

CHANGE IS HEALTHFUL

The excuse has been made that as times change so do tastes and that what was esteemed excellent lietrary fair by our fathers and mothers is looked upon in these days as intolerably slow and stilted. The words of warning that have been uttered by scores of well-meaning and authoritative men and women that there is danger in trying to assimilate so much of the present day products of the pen seem to fall on deaf ears. Yet, would it not be well to listen to them and to hark back occasionally to the older writers if only to obtain a glimpse of the changes that have taken place in the manners and customs of our people? And there is another reason why anu occasional change in one's reading is essential to healthfulness of mind. This is a day of unexampled celerity in all lines of business. It is the quick lunch era. It is well to bear in mind that continual addiction to a quick lunch in literature is as bad for the mental organism as the usual quick lunch in a restaurant is for one's digestion. Many of the fiction writers of the day are feverishly engaged in writing pot-boilers, turning out one or two novels every year, not caring very much what dishes they concoct, knowing that they will find a sale in catering to the baser instincts of man's nature.

A Neglected Author.

Harrison Ainsworth's books were very extensively read forty years ago. Today they are hardly opened. Among them are such novels as Rookwood which deals with the adventures of Dick Turpin; Windsor Forest, with its legends of Herne the Hunter; The Tower of London; Old St. Paul's, which, if memory serves me aright presents one of the best accounts of the Great Plague that has ever been penned; The Admirable Crichton, which relates in semi-fictional form the doings of one of one of the most astonishing and versatile men of genius that the British Isles ever produced. There are many other books to Ainsworth's credit, but in passing them by we must not forget Boscobel, which deals with the tribulations of Charles the Second and his escape from England. Ainsworth died in 1882. A year before his death a big banquet was given in his honor in his native city of Manchester. The surprising statement was made at that banquet that in the course of one year in that city his books had been read no less than 7660 times. Not forgetting that Manchester is one of the big cities of England, it may be noted that in Peterborough the total circulaton of Ainsworth's books has been 118 in six years.

A Canadian Author.

Grant Allen, a Canadian who made a name for himself in fiction as well as in Natural Science, also seems to have fallen on evil days in regard to his writings. We have several works by him. He died in 1899 in England. Alfred Russel Wallace esteemed his powers highly. Today his books are never asked for. Miss Austen wrote several books, and two of them, Pride and Prejudice and Sense and Sensibility, are deemed classics and are sharing the fate of many classics in never being read.

Frank Anstey has not written very many books but he has written one or two that are very humorous. The Tinted Venus and Vice Versa. They bubble over with humor and are well worth reading.

Edwin Lester Arnold

Edwin Lester Arnold, a son of Sir Edwin Arnold wrote one book which was very highly thought of, Phra the Phoenician. We have it in the library and those who are interested in Metempsychosis, will enjoy its contents It deals with the adventures of a young Phoenician who prior to the Roman conquest reached the Cassiterides, the "tin-islands," and whose soul pased in successive transmigrations into several people, preserving at the same time the distinctive characteristics of his own individuality. The story ends in the days of Queen Elizabeth. It is a very interesting tale

"Verdant Green."

Cuthbert Bede, otherwise the Rev. Edward Bradley, was the author of a book published about 1833, entitled The Adventures of Mr. Verdant Green, detailing the humorous side of life at Oxford University at that time. Our fathers and mothers used to laugh over it and there are some amongst us who have never read it who might enjoy the book also, which is filled with illustrations in keeping with the letterpress

"The Peoples' Palace"

Messrs. Besant and Rice wrote many books in collaboration. Perhaps their best known one is "The Chaplain of the Fleet; which sets forth the life of the unfortunate debtors who languished in the old Fleet Prison in London. After Rice's death Besant worked on alone and in one book, All Sorts and Conditions of Men he was instrumental in bringing forward the erection of the People's Palace. The public were so stirred by the description of the squalid misery of the dwellers in the East end of London that they contributed willingly to the erection of a building that would provide rest and recreation at a cheap rate to the submerged tenth. The Draper's Company at various times gave large sums for its upkeep, and so widely did its interests develop that it is now a recognised branch of London University

CHILDHOOD CONSTIPATION

Constipation — that disordered state of the digestive tract which is nearly always caused by improper feeding—can be readily regulated by the use of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative. They are easy to take and are absolutely free from injurious drugs. Concerning them Mrs. Joseph Dion, Ste. Perpetue, Que., writes: "I have nothing but praise for Baby's Own Tablets. When my baby was three months old he was terribly constipated, but the Tablets soon set him right, and now at the age of fifteen months he is a big healthy boy and this good health I attribute entirely to the use of the Tablets." They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LOCAL MAN ACCUSED OF DRINKING LIQUOR IN AN UNLAWFUL PLACE

Judgment Hinges on Truth of the Evidence of the Accused and of a Witness Who Was Twenty Feet Distant When the Alleged Offence Was Committed.

The clerk and bartender of a hotel on George street was charged in police court this morning with drinking liquor in an improper place, namely, the hotel in which he works. After the hearing of the evidence judgment was reserved until tomorrow.

The first witness called was the proprietor of the hotel. He swore that last Thursday night about 8 o'clock he saw a stranger standing talking to the bartender at the end of the bar. The man bought a bottle of sanitaris, and put some in one glass and some in another. He thought it rather peculiar that they should be splitting a glass of sanitaris, and so watched them. The stranger poured some liquor into one glass from a medicine bottle and pushed one over to the bartender.

The latter drank his, but as the latter was about to pour liquor into the other glass the proprietor rushed from the sitting room and jumped on to a shelf behind the bar and tapped him on the head, demanding to know what he was doing.

The stranger threw the contents of the glass into a cuspidor and also threw the whole bottle into it. Witness recovered the bottle, which was produced in court, and phoned for Inspector Stewart.

Man Was a Stranger.

Inspector Stewart entered the witness box and swore that when the bartender was asked who the stranger was he had replied that he did not know him at all. Mr. Stewart tasted the liquid in the bottle and swore positively that it was liquor, and that he thought it was brandy.

Story of Accused.

The accused told his version of the affair, which varied materially from that of his employer. The man, whom he did not know, came into the bar and asked him if he would like a little medicine. He replied that neither of them could drink any in the house. They split a glass of sanitaris and he put some salt in his. He was called to the phone, and on his return drank the mineral water.

"Was there any liquor in your drink?"

"No, there was not."

He swore that he never saw the bottle of liquor until the proprietor removed it from the cuspidor.

In his argument, Mr. Joseph Wearing for the prosecution pointed out that the case rested upon the decision of the magistrate as to who was to be believed, the hotel proprietor or the accused. He could see no reason why the former should desire to mislead the court, while there would be a decided reason for the accused doing so.

Mr. Gordon for the defence maintained that the proprietor from his position twenty or more feet away could not see what was going on. He heard no conversation, apparently, and was not in a position to say whether or not the bartender had refused the drink of brandy or whatever it was.

COUNCIL OF AMBASSADORS AT MEETING TAKE UP KAISER'S CASE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 26.—The reply to the refusal of the Dutch Government to comply with the demand of the Allies for the surrender of former Emperor Wilhelm was the first subject taken up with the initial meeting this morning of the Council of Ambassadors created to carry on the unfinished routine work of the Supreme Council, which disbanded last week. It was decided that French legal experts should go into all the aspects of the case and prepare a reply which will probably be submitted for the approval of the Council at the beginning of next week.

There were sixty-nine deaths from influenza and sixty-three from pneumonia in Chicago. Health Commissioner Robertson is confident, however, that the epidemic in that city is on the wane.

Secord, of Galt, that the Justice Department had granted a reprieve of one month. Ivan Petcoff, his companion at the time of the murder, recently had his sentence commuted to life imprisonment. The cause of the stay of execution has not been divulged, but it is understood that further information has been secured by Mr. Secord, who had a prolonged interview with the prisoner on Saturday, during which Boyeff is believed to have given out new facts previously withheld.

HON. HUGH GUTHRIE FOR MINISTER OF MILITIA

SWORN IN TO OCCUPY POSITION VACATED BY HON. S. C. MEWBURN

Ottawa, Jan. 26. — Another step in Cabinet reconstruction was accomplished on Saturday when Hon Hugh Guthrie, who has been Solicitor-General in the Union Government since its formation, was sworn in as Minister of Militia, to succeed Hon. S. C. Mewburn, who relinquished that post some ten days ago. It is stated that Mr. Guthrie will, at the same time, retain the portfolio of Solicitor-General.

With the departure of Hon. J. D. Reid for Florida on Friday night, Hon. J. A. Calder, who had been Acting Minister of Militia, became Acting Minister of Railways. The name of Hon. A. K. Maclean had been mentioned as the likely appointee of Militia, and Mr. Guthrie's transfer to that department came as somewhat of a surprise.

ENGLISH LABOR PARTY OPPOSED TO HOME RULE

ADVOCATE CHANGE OF SOCIAL RATHER THAN POLITICAL CONDITIONS IN IRELAND

London, Jan. 26.—One positive result of the English Parliamentary Laborite delegation to Ireland will be decided opposition by the English Labor party to the Government's present plan for Home Rule in Ireland, according to The Daily Mail's correspondent who is accompanying the delegation.

"No party in Ireland will say thank you' for it," the correspondent adds. "The delegation's own assurances of its devotion to Home Rule were received without gratitude and the Mayor and Labor representatives of Limerick greeted them with derisive smiles and angry sneers, saying that they wanted nothing from the British except their absence and nothing for themselves but an absolutely free Irish Republic."

EIGHT KILLED AND THIRTEEN INJURED IN WRECK ON THE CANADIAN PACIFIC

One Train That Became Stalled Eleven Miles From North Bay Was Telescoped by Another Following Close Behind—Injured are Removed to Hospital

(Canadian Press Despatch)

North Bay, Jan. 26.—Officials here place the number of killed in the wreck yesterday on the Canadian Pacific Railway near Corbeil at eight, but no list of names will be available until this afternoon. The injured number thirteen. Three men, two women and two children were killed when the collision took place, and one other man died before the relief train reached here.

Coroner D. A. Campbell opened an inquest at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The victims were all travelling in the last two standard sleepers of the first section. Passengers in the second section escaped with shakings and bruises. It is understood that the crew of the first section placed the customary torpedoes on the track behind their stalled train, but the crew of the second section claim they did not hear the signals and did not see the stalled train until their engine had rounded the curve a short distance away. Most of the victims, it is said, are westerners, who were returning to their homes after visiting in Eastern Canada.

Cause of Accident.

No. 1 Canadian Pacific Express for Vancouver, due here at 10 a.m., was running in two sections. No. 1 section became stalled owing to the failure of the engine to make steam under the severe frost obtaining, and No. 2 section came round a curve on it, the locomotive of No. 2 section telescoping the rear sleeper of No. 1 section. It is stated that torpedoes had been placed and other precautions taken by the crew of the stalled train, but it is too early and there is as yet too much confusion existing to be certain on this point.

The two sections, it is stated, were running very close together. Eight passengers on the stalled train were killed outright. At the hospital it is reported that none of the injured are fatally hurt. So far as known all the casualties are immigrants for Western Canada or residents of the west on the way home from Europe. Of those killed, the only names known are those of Mrs. Peden and her two young sons, who were on their way to Calgary. The two boys were killed outright; Mrs. Peden died after removal from the wreck. Miss McLaughlin, a niece of Mrs. Peden, also on her way to Calgary, is in the hotspital suffering from shock and injuries to her hands. Others in hospital here include: Miss Dorothy Kean, injuries to back; Mr. and Mrs. Klemme, and Mrs. Klemme, Sr., and a bride and groom, names not yet learned.

Statement by C.P.R.

Montreal, Jan. 26.—A. D. MacTier, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Eastern Lines, issued the following official statement in connection with the railway collision yesterday near North Bay:

"The second section of Train No. 1 struck the rear of the first section of Train No. 1 one mile and a half east of Corbeil, at 11:15 a.m. Sunday. First No. 1 had stopped on account of engine trouble, and a flagman had been sent out to protect the rear, but it has not yet been established whether this was performed according to rules. Relief train with doctors and nurses was at once dispatched, and everything possible done to relieve the injured, who were promptly moved to North Bay, and the serious cases placed in the hospital there.

J. G. LETHBRIDGE WILL NOT VACATE HIS SEAT

FORMER MEMBER WAS TURNED DOWN BECAUSE HE WAS A LAWYER

London, Ont., Jan. 26. — "I have given my answer. I am not going to vacate," J. G. Lethbridge of Glencoe the U. F. O. member of the riding told the press. Mr. Lethbridge stated that no meeting of his executive had been held to consider the matter, but his personal contact with his constituents made it clear to him that they did not desire a representative from afar.

The collapse of the plan results from the fact that J. C. Elliott, the Glencoe lawyer, who was the former member, was thrust aside because of his profession, and erstwhile Liberals who are in strength in the U. F. O. ranks cannot consistently bring in a Toronto barrister to take his seat.

CITY OFFICIALS SALARIES

Chatham Increase Pa of Firemen by Twenty Per Cent.

Chatham, Jan. 26.—At a special meeting of the City Council it was decided to give a general raise to the city officials. The increases in the salasies total over $5,000. A 20 per cent. increase was given to the men of the Fire Department, and not a single official was overlooked in the generosity displayed by the Council. It was shown that the city officials were underpaid in comparison with the other cities of the same size and that they received too little in view of the importance of their duties and also the high cost of living. It is stated that the revenues will be increased at a proportionate rate in order to assist in making up for the extra money paid to the city's servants.

"Judicious diet and exercise will frequently improve a man's opinion of his neighbors.

PRAISES WORK DONE BY FIRE CHIEF GRANGE

FIRE MARSHAL HEATON COMMENDS ADMINISTRATION AS SHOWN BY REPORT.

Chief Grange of the Fire Department has received the following letter from Fire Marshal Heaton:

Geo. Grange, Esq.,
Chief of the Fire Department,
Peterborough, Ontario.

Dear Chief Grange:

I have received a copy of your annual report to the Mayor and Council of your city, with the various statements attached, which I have read with great interest. The report is very satisfactory and complete in all its aspects and I would not only congratulate you upon being able to present such a report, but to thank you for placing a copy of it in my possession.

I think paragraph No. 4 relating to your work in inspection and fire prevention should be emphasized and should be commendable to the Mayor and Council as evidencing a high type of duty to the citizens. Your actions are on a line with very modern practice and must inevitably lead to the saving of many thousands of dollars to your people.

Examples such as you show by your action and in your report are entitled to publicity, and I propose quoting from it in the next issue of the Public Service Bulletin, which will be out about February 15th, and of which you will, of course, get a copy.

I congratulate you most heartily upon your showing and wish you success throughout the year.

With kind regards, I am,
Yours very truly,
E. P. HEATON,
Fire Marshal.

CONDEMNS HEAVY DRAPINGS

Coroner Says Too Many Fires Have Been Caused by Custom.

Quebec, Jan. 26.—After a verdict of accidental death had been rendered [illegible] by the jury in the inquest into the fatal St. Raymond fire in which four lives were lost, Coroner Jolicoeur was very emphatic in his condemnation of the practise of heavily draping mortuary chapels and adorning them with lighted candles. He said that this custom had already been the cause of too many fires, and should be abandoned.

EX-PREMIER ASQUITH OPENS HIS CAMPAIGN

OPINION DIVIDED AS TO RUNNING UNIONIST AGAINST HIM IN PAISLEY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 26.—Former Premier Asquith arrives in Paisley today to open his political campaign. The contest will last three weeks. While the opinion is clearly divided over running a Unionist against him, there are signs of a split among the democratic section, J. M. Biggar, the Labor candidate, apparently not holding strong enough views to suit the extreme Socialists, who threaten to bring out another man.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE PROBLEM

Quebec, Too, Has Same Question as Ontario

Quebec, Jan. 26.—Expenditures for the maintenance of Spencerwood, the home of the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, was under fire in the Legislature, when Mr. Sauve, leader of the Opposition, asked a number of questions concerning an item of $45,000 for the upkeep of the mansion. Mr. Sauve wanted to know why the painting of fences and other things had cost $1157, since only a year before the place had been completely renovated. He was told the work had been necessary.

An item of $200 for eggs bought from the Dominion Fathers was next; it appeared that these eggs had been brought from Oka for incubator purposes. Here arose quite a discussion on the Gubernatorial barnyard and the chickens and the hens. Repairing a harness at a cost of $197 puzzled Mr. Sauve, but it appeared that the last two governors had used automobiles and not horses whereas Sir Charles Fitzpatrick used horses only, and the harness, from not being in use for so long, had been sadly in need of repairs. Mr. Sauve stated that he had no intention of criticizing the Lieutenant-Governor.

SOFT COAL MINERS TO SUBMIT DATA ON WAGES

Washington, Jan. 26.—The operators of the Central Competitive Coal Fields announced that they will present o President Wilson's coal commission during the week records and data never before revealed, touching upon the wage issue, and various features of work in the mines.

There will be figures, they assert, showing actual wages received by the miners and the number of days worked by them. Information also will be presented relative to working conditions to show the facts pertaining to the miner's occupation.

The operators say this data will disprove the claim of the miners that the miner has been wretchedly paid and that working and living conditions are intolerable.

OVER ONE HUNDRED VICTIMS OF DISEASE ON WAY HOME FROM INDIA.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Jan. 26;—A London cable to the Montreal Gazette says a tragic story of the outbreak of disease was told on the arrival at Plymouth of the transport Melita bringing from India officers, with 800 men of various regiments, besides women and children. The epidemic broke out when the ship was between Bombay and the Red Sea, and altogether 100 to 150 men were stricken. In the Red Sea, Major-General Healey succumbed. Four soldiers and one woman passenger also died, and after the vessel came to anchor in Plymouth Sound, Col. Douglas Clark, in command of a West Kent regiment, died after a few days' illness

BIG REWARD OFFERED TO SAVE POWHATAN

U. S. SHIPPING BOARD MADE GOOD $150,000 FOR BRINGING HER TO PORT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, Jan. 26. — The United States Shipping Board reported last night that a reward of $150,000 would be given to any vessel bringing in the Powhatan, which is still adrift, approximately 150 miles from here. A radiogram from the vessel last night stated that water was gaining slowly, and that further delay might make it necessary to take off the crew except volunteers.

SCANDINAVIAN LABOR DECRIES BOLSHEVISM

NO CONTEST IN HALTON

It Now Looks as if Premier is to Have Walkover

Milton, Jan. 26.—It looks like an acclamation for Premier Drury in Halton county. The leaders of a large group of Liberals who during the past few days have been hot for an election, stated that after consideration they believed the proper course would be to give the premier the seat without opposition. Leaders in both parties, upon whom the responsibility of opposition would fall, are declaring that to nominate a candidate against the Premier would be bad policy. Prominent party men make no secret of the fact that they personally would like to see an election, and that they feel that the combination of the two parties would defeat the Premier. However, they seem confident that the best way to oppose the U. F. O. is through opposition on the floor of the House.

W. D. Gregory, Toronto lawyer, formerly a Liberal and now a strong supporter of the U. F. O., and Premier Drury arrived here on Saturday and at once got into communication with several local Liberals. Mr. Gregory is exerting his influence to secure an acclamation for the premier.

THE DAY THAT SCOTCHMEN CELEBRATE.

"I see amid the hills of Ayr
A plowman, who in foul and fair,
Sings at his task;
So sweet we know not which it is,
The laverock's song we hear or his,
Nor care to ask."—Longfellow.

THE DESCENDANTS of the Scotch who followed Wallace to victory on many a bloody field, whom Bruce so often led in battle, will meet at the Empress Hotel tonight to celebrate the anniversary of the natal day of Scotland's national poet, Robert Burns, who was born in a clay built cabin January 25th, 1759, and whose songs are sung today in all quarters of the civilized world. The jollification is one in which the poet himself while in life would have gloried in, less the brew of the "peck o' maut," celebrated in one of the finest bacchanalian songs in the English language, but over-indulgence in which clouded heaven-born genius and caused the gowans to bloom untimely over the grave of the author.

There is something of characteristic racial significance in such a celebration as will be held tonight. In every corner of the world where the English language is spoken the Scottish accent is heard. The Scotch are about the only race on earth who can adapt themselves to any conditions of society, who can fall in with the customs of any country which they adopt as their home and yet at the same time retain all their national characteristics and remain devoted to the parent land without giving offence to their neighbors. Sturdiness of character, unswerving integrity are among their leading traits. Their religious faith was nurtured on the battlefield when the devoted Covenanters of old gathered on the heather-clad hills to worship as their conscience dictated and who, as they prayed with the Bible in their hands and their weapons near, kept one eye open for Claverhouse and his avenging dragoons. It is little wonder that with such an origin that religion today shines the brightest in adversity.

There is no poet in history, not even the gifted Shakespeare, whose memory is so revered as is that of the man who enriched the English language with his gems and who elevated the Scottish life in the estimation of all the nations of earth. He taught his people the highest precepts of patriotism. He ennobled the existence of the lowly Scottish peasant, calling his family around him for worship. He scarified every form of injustice and snobbery, and laid at the feet of Righteousness the wreaths woven by his matchless genius. There was nothing narrow in his offerings. He was equally at home on all topics, drawing inspiration alike from the flowers in the field and from the star that lingers in the firmament with lessening ray to welcome the dawn of morning. He sang with equal power of the tender passion and of the achievements of his countrymen on the field of death. In a word, he is entitled to be regarded as the national poet of a race who never submitted to conquest, and who, with their prowess asserted, entered into a peace union with their former enemies, themselves dictating the terms of an alliance that has existed with mutual satisfaction and advantage for over two centuries.

Tonight's celebration will be one worthy of him in whose honor it is held, a credit to those who have planned it and to those who take part. It will be in every sense a Burns celebration, all of the songs selected being taken from the works of the man who has written odes so sublime that their equals are to be found nowhere outside of the minstrelsy of Holy Writ.

W. H. PRETTY ON THE FUEL PROBLEM.

IN HIS ADDRESS delivered the other night at a meeting of the members of the Board of Trade, Mr. W. H. Pretty, the well-known engineer, dealt with the matters under discussion in a manner which fully justified Chairman Barrie's apt characterization of Mr. Pretty's speech as "the studied contribution of the engineer specialist which was intended to arouse our interest in the fundamental principles which should govern in the city's development."

Mr. Pretty dealt extensively with one question of absorbing interest at present—the fuel problem of Canada. He recognizes the almost helpless dependence of this country upon the United States for its supply of coal. He suggests a remedy, but his best substitute for coal is not electricity. While he recognizes the utility of electricity for domestic purposes in a small way, he contends that to use it extensively for heating purposes, leaving the question of cost out of the consideration altogether, would tend to cripple industry by limiting the supply of power.

One of Mr. Pretty's practical suggestions is the substitution of alcohol for gasoline. Canada is dependent upon the United States for a supply of the latter, just as it is for coal, and is required to pay any price that the Americans choose to ask for it. The alcohol which he has in mind as a substitute can be manufactured at home. It is all a question of comparative cost, and there is little doubt that if the manufacture of alcohol is undertaken on a large scale the odds can be turned in favor of the Canadian product. There may be in the minds of a majority of the people of the present day a feeling opposed to the manufacture and extended use of alcohol for any purpose, but this is merely a sentimental objection that would not be difficult to overcome. The alcohol that would be used for heating purposes would resemble the tabooed brand in name only, and a change in this regard, the selection of a new designating term, is easily possible.

How long will the people of Canada be willing to depend upon the United States for coal and gasoline? How long will they consent to pay the prices asked for these products? In the case of coal, at least, every ton consumed means the payment by the Canadian user of from fifty cents to one dollar of the tax of the State in which the coal is mined. Canada's taxes are sufficiently heavy for domestic purposes without this additional levy by a foreign nation.

Alcohol for heating purposes and as a substitute for gasoline, can be manufactured from material that is now going to waste, such as sawdust and the like. This has been demonstrated to a practical conclusion. Enterprise alone is what is required to relieve a situation both as to American coal and gasoline which is becoming more tense year by year. The extensive use into which the automobile is coming makes it imperative that something be done. It is not the original cost of the auto that prevents so many people from owning a car. The upkeep is what gives them pause, and in that consideration the price of gasoline is the deciding factor.

MORE ANTI-PATRONAGE BUNK.

> The Drury Government is finding out that patronage is a difficult subject to deal with, and it has apparently some supporters of the system among its own followers. It was an amusing description of patronage given by one of them the other day, that it was patronage to turn a man out of a position so as to put a supporter into it, but it was not patronage to put a supporter into a vacant position. This evidently left out of consideration the fitness of the supporter for the position; the one necessary qualification apparently being that he was and would be a supporter; his ability to serve the public would be a matter which deserved no thought. Kingston Standard.

EVIDENTLY the risibilities of our Kingston contemporary are easily excited. The definition of patronage given by a supporter of the Drury Government, and which amuses the Standard, is a practical expression of a self-evident truth. It is always the party in the minority that develops these paroxysms of virtue on the patronage question. The object of such contentions is apparent. The idea which inspires them is that the so-called spoils of office be still left in the hands of those who have forfeited all claims upon them by the verdict of the voters.

A man's political affiliation is no guarantee of his fitness for any office, neither should it be taken as an indication that he is not competent to discharge the duties of the position. There is no man in public office today, no matter how efficient he may be, for whom worthy successors could not be found by the dozen, successors who would in a short time master the routine duties of the position and bring new ideas into the work. The man continued indefinitely at the head of affairs eventually drops into a rut and his policy becomes one of eternal sameness. Progress is attained only by the introduction of new blood. The anti-patronage devotees if given their way, would eventually build up in this country an aristocracy of office, one of the most dangerous and tyrannical of the class which the late war was supposed to abolish.

No manager of a private business concern would retain as the heads of departments men who were conniving at his overthrow. No premier of a province or of the Dominion should be expected to choose as members of his staff men who from the very nature of the present political system were intent on nothing quite so much as accomplishing his defeat. There must be harmony of relations in the public as well as in private business.

The late Alexander Mackenzie, when Premier of Canada, had certain exalted notions on the question of patronage. He retained in positions of trust men who worked against him. Everything in the nature of a State secret was carried to the camp of the Opposition. Public servants became so many spies on the Administration. Still, the political righteousness that everyone now believes Premier Mackenzie sincerely upheld served him no purpose except help drive him into exile.

IS THE RURAL STORE PASSING?

SOME CITY DWELLERS may never have had personal experience with the crossroads store, but even they are at least familiar with it through time-worn jokes about the rural institution. Interest must be rather widespread, therefore, in reports that the country store is passing, says the Buffalo Courier.

A merchant of Ontario is authority for the statement that three-fourths of the residents of the average country community in that Province now do their shopping in town or city stores. The increased use of the automobile is said to have brought about the change. In their cars farmers can comfortably ride thirty or forty miles, make their purchases, and be back home about as quickly as they formerly could when they had to depend on old Dobbin and buggy or cutter for transportation to the crossroads emporium.

The country store has been an important part of rural life. It has figured in fiction and on the stage. About its stove on winter days the wise-acres have discussed community and national problems, while small boys hung round the edges of the circle drinking in wisdom. It has been the country club. But with the auto carrying former patrons to urban stores, the report that the rural store will soon be a memory seems wholly likely. If the auto continues, we shall soon have no country but merely suburbs.

SOCIALISTS VERSUS BOLSHEVISTS

(Ottawa Journal.)

A curious conflict is going on at Albany, where the Legislature of the state of New York is denying seats to five elected representatives who call themselves Socialists. The ground of objection is that the utterances of opinions of these men are seditious, in other words aim at upsetting the present plan of government of the United States.

The temper of the Legislature does not commend itself to everybody outside the Socialists. Some of the leading newspapers of the state condemn it, and so does the New York bar, which has sent a committee to Albany to protest, headed by Charles E. Hughes, one of the leading lawyers of the country, and once the candidate of the Republican party for President.

In The Journal's view the Legislature is entirely wrong, and its critics entirely right. The opponent of any government on earth is entirely within the right of proper free speech in saying so, provided that he advocates change by peaceful means, and is not slanderous or obscene in his arguments. The New York Legislature is confusing two very different things, namely, advocacy of change and advocacy of violence. Sharing in and misled by the just fury of American patriotism at the "Reds" who aim to attack American institutions and their American neighbors by brute force, the Legislature is acting unjustly towards Americans who have been proved guilty of no worse offence than legitimate free speech. Other things equal, a law-abiding Socialist is as good a citizen of any free country as any other kind of citizen, and has as perfect a right to speak, write and agitate for a change to a Socialist form of government from some other kind as any other citizen has to speak, write or work for a Conservative Government or a Liberal Government, or a Farmer Government, or for a monarchical rule, or for republican rule, or for Soviet rule. The evil, if any, is not in the advocacy of the principle, but in the manner in which an advocate calls upon his fellows to promote it. No one is wrong who proclaims merely that he wants change by means of the ballot box. Anyone is wrong who proclaims that he wants change by murder.

Those who call themselves Socialists on this continent are mostly very decent people and very good citizens. The more the public hears from such, the better. A free country should no more tolerate interference with the right of such to share equally in everything we have, including free speech and legislative representation, than it should tolerate advocacy of brute force among us by "Reds" or aliens or any other kind of actual or prospective lawbreaker.

ARMENIANS WHO KEPT GERMANS FROM INDIA NOW SEEK HELP FROM AMERICA

They Are a People Who Sacrificed Millions of Lives to Aid the Allies—Ask That Their Republic Be Recognized

(By Missak Turjaujian.)

All Armenia seeks is everlasting liberation. Whether this comes directly it matters not, only so full justice is received.

Turkey has long since recognized the Armenian Republic. Is it not time, therefore, that so civilized a country, as America did likewise in order that Armenia may rise, Phoenix like, from the ashes of her burned villages and ravaged cities to once more the great nation she was destined to be?

Armenia has dwindled from a prosperous nation of 33,000,000 to 3,000,000, shedding seas of blood in her terrible extermination. Because of her Christian faith she has been betrayed into the hands of her Moslem enemies, and every inch of land in Armenia is drenched with the blood of her martyrs.

Despite all these vicissitudes the spirit of Armenia has remained unconquerable and by the price of her superhuman sacrifice she has constituted an independent republic in the Caucasus which has maintained its existence for nearly two years, with a standing army and all the equipment of a well ordered government.

Had it not been for Armenians during the war the Turks and Germans would have entered India. This would have precluded the possibility of victory. Armenians never shirk a duty. Thanks to their valiant fighting the day was saved for the Allies so far as the entrance of the Turks and Germans into India was concerned.

From the ranks of Armenia have been drawn, many diplomats who have gone to Egypt, India, Austria, Turkey, etc. In the Caucasus alone today there are 20,000 Armenian college and university graduates ready and eager to help in the reconstruction of their country.

Armenia is a land literally "flowing with milk and honey." Nature has been lavish in her gifts from the day when she was the Garden of Eden. Her minerals are numerous — gold, silver, copper, alabaster, salt, lead, marble, sulphur, naphtha, petroleum and coal. Unfortunately, Armenians have been too oppressed by their murderous enemies ever to have time to develop these mines. Now, if given a chance, Armenia can soon become a rich country through its mines alone. There are also opportunities for rich capitalists.

The spirit of a Lincoln is needed, a man whose creed is to help the oppressed and suppressed at any cost. Here is the opportunity for another Lincoln to rise and succor Armenia before it is too late. If we are to keep fatih with the pledge of the Allies immediate action is urgently needed.

Representatives of the Armenian Republic are now in our midst to urge the American Givernment to officially recognize the Armenian Government. President Wilson has already taken the initial step toward this recognition and permitted the sale of 35,000 tons of flour to the Armenian Republic, accepting its obligation.

In asmuch as Armenia has been the worst sufferer in the war and has made the greatest sacrifices in her struggles for Christianity, democracy and civilization for more than two thousand years, she surely is entitled to some consideration from the Allies shoulder to shoulder with whom she fought with unswerving loyalty.

It is to be hoped that the voice of the seventh ally will find an echo in the hearts of the other allied countries, America in particular, and that aid may be given her cause at this the most critical time in Armenian history. Surely, there must be some way to help save to civilization the oldest race of people on earth and the first one to embrace Christianity.

May the torch of Liberty be lighted by the Candle of Peace and permitted to glow in the land of Armenia.

Reginald De Koven, most popular of American composers of light opera, died recently at the age of 58. There was no reason to doubt that he had many years of successful work before him. In deed his most ambitious composition, "Rip Van Winkle," is about to be produced in Chicago. Mr. De Koven looked forward to it with the keenest interest, since he hoped and expected that the success of "Rip Van Winkle" would cause critics to revise their earlier opinion that he was incapable of writing grand opera, his previous efforts in that line having been unsuccessful. It may be that De Koven could not write grand opera. Not many people can, but he was undoubtedly a melodist, and with the exception of Victor Herbert, was probably the author of more tuneful pieces than any other American composer. It will naturally be for what he could do than for what he could not do that he will be remembered. Certainly a nation that largely depends on its Cohans, its Irving Berlin and its Pete Wendlings for its music can ill-afford the loss of a composer of the rank of Reginald De Koven.

A Brilliant Student.

He was born in Connecticut, his father being a prominent clergyman, who took up his residence abroad, when Reginald was a boy and who prepared his son for Oxford. On both sides Reginald De Koven came of cultured stock, and it was no surprise that early in his career he gave promise of unusual musical gifts. In 1879 when De Koven graduated from St. John's he was the youngest B. A., of his year. Previous to his Oxford career he had studied the piano at Stuggart, and thither he returned after graduating for piano and composition. Later on he went to Frankfort and studied harmony and counterpoint, after which he went to Florence where he studied singing under a competent teacher. It will be observed that De Koven differs from his popular rivals of today in that he believed it was necessary that one should study music before trying to compose. This prejudice continues to persist in some quarters, but it is generally recognized that it is rather a handicap to have studied music if one aims to produce a popular success.

MRS. MAY COULD NOT WORK

Made Well and Strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Columbia, Pa.—"I was very weak and run down and had dragging-down pains and pains in my back. I could not get around to do my work and had to sit down and rest often during the day. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the papers and read the testimonials, so I thought I would try it. Now I am healthier than I ever was in my life, and can recommend it to any woman who suffers as I did." —Mrs. ELIZABETH MAY, R.F.D. No. 1, Columbia, Pa.

The reason Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so successful in overcoming woman's ills is because it contains the tonic, strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, which act on the female organism. Women from all parts of the country are continually testifying to its strengthening, curative influence, and the letters which we are constantly publishing from women in every section of this country prove beyond question the merit of this famous root and herb medicine.

Singular Funerals.

An Abyssinian funeral is a very singular affair, says Tit-Bits. When a new-born infant dies it is almost immediately buried under the floor. After the demise of an adult, the body is washed in water, sweetened with honey, wrapped in a shroud, sewed up in a mat of braided straw, and laid upon a litter made of boughs cut from trees.

The lamentations of the relatives resound among the cliffs, and the news is rapidly communicated to all the people of the neighborhood, who at once set out to condole with the mourners.

As soon as they catch sight of the funeral procession, they begin to weep and cry aloud. When they join it the men range themselves on one side of the bier, the women on the other, and chant. When the religious ceremony is over the corpse is buried in the churchyard.

An Electric Divining Rod.

As the "dowser" of old went about hunting water with his forked witch-hazel stick, scientists now are traversing the shell-marked fields of Northern France with electrical divining rods that have power to locate buried metal. Mysterious as the new instrument appears, it is simply a modern application of the induction balance. The coils are wound on two large wood rings, held parallel with the ground and a few feet apart by a carrying frame. The observer wears a head telephone receiver, and an assistant carries the battery and current interrupter in a box. A buried shell, grenade, or other metal, near either of the coils, sounds its buzzing danger signal, and the workers then proceed to make that patch of ground safe for the farmer.

A "Nailless" Village.

In Alberta there exists a village where no nails have been used in the construction of the houses. These were built by Ruthenian immigrants, and are of the typical Ruthenian style—long, pitch-roofed, thatched, and wide in the eaves. Even the door, an affair of slender twigs, woven and laced together, swings on home-made hinges, and is latched with a wooden hasp. The floor is of hewn logs unnailed. The roof is a wonderful fabric of poles and cross-woven wheat straw ten inches thick, packed tightly and solidly, and laid with such care that it will endure any weather for twenty years.
